Primary Election Cancelled Due to Lack of Interest

The Primary Election for Charlevoix city offices has been cancelled due to lack of interest.

As the deadline for filing nominating petitions passed at 4 p.m. Monday, only incumbents had filed for the three city offices and the same number of ward offices making it unnecessary to hold a primary election.

Filing nominating petitions on Monday were incumbents, Edward P. Hansen, mayor; Annabelle Cunningham, treasurer; Judy Przybylski whose name will appear on the ballot for the first time after being appointed city clerk to fill a vacancy last fall; Raymond V. Wood, first ward; Ivan Whitley, second ward; and George Plumm, third ward aldermen.

Up until a few days before the deadline for petitions, the three aldermen were undecided about running for office again.

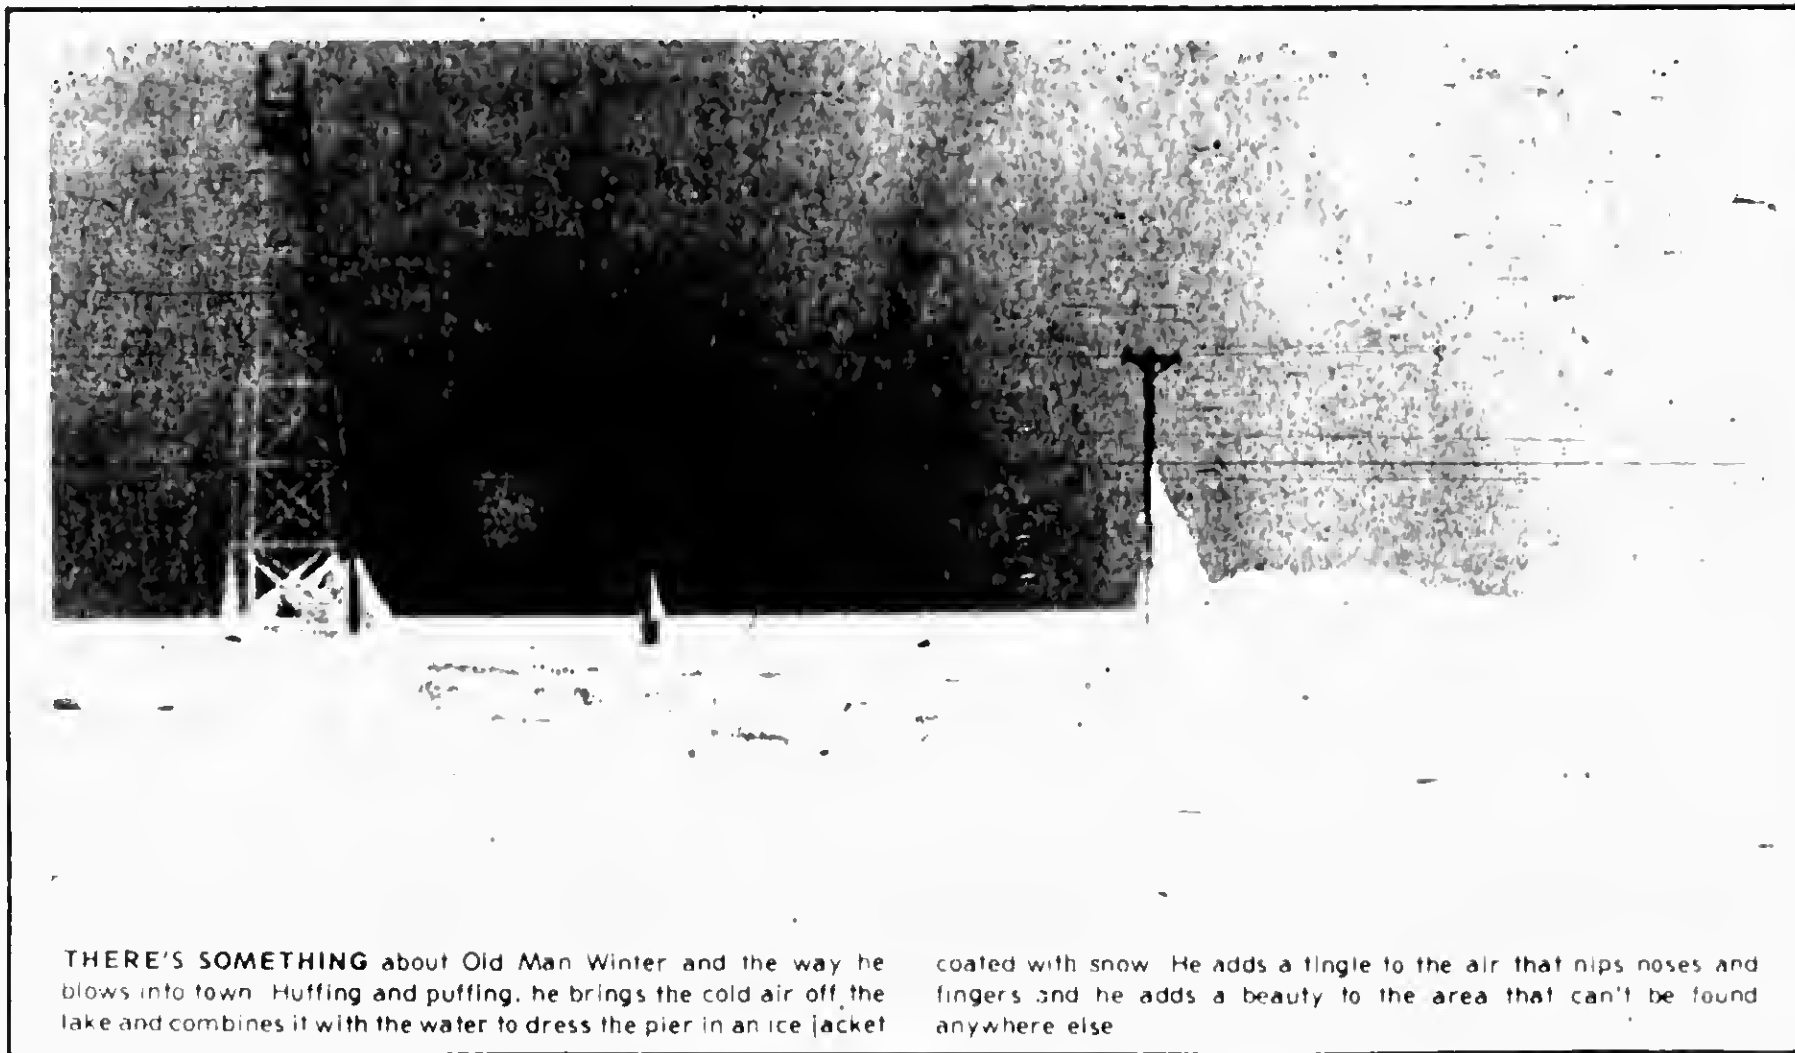

"I don't know," one of them said recently. "If someone else would step up and run, I think I might just let them."

However, this year no one decided to challenge the incumbents. And it's not the first year that has happened.

This will mark the second time in the recent history of city government that lack of interest and candidates has made it possible to cancel an election and thus save the costs of an election.

The General Election is scheduled for Monday, April 4.

Other important dates to remember in connection with the city elections include March 4, which is the last day to register to vote in the Spring Election, April 2, the last day to pick up absentee ballots, and April 4, which is the date of the Spring Election.

THERE'S SOMETHING about Old Man Winter and the way he blows into town. Huffing and puffing, he brings the cold air off the lake and combines it with the water to dress the pier in an ice jacket coated with snow. He adds a tingle to the air that nips noses and fingers and he adds a beauty to the area that can't be found anywhere else.

Council to Consider Development Plan

Hearing Set on Zoning Change

By PAULA HOLMES

The City of Charlevoix may not get a completely new zoning ordinance for quite some time, but attempts are being made to at least update the current ordinance and make it more workable.

Next Monday, the Charlevoix Common Council will hold a public hearing on a proposed development plan review amendment to the current ordinance during its regular meeting.

The amendment would require developers to present council with plans outlining proposed construction, the type of landscaping involved and the effects the construction would have on surrounding property, among other things.

"Development plan review gives council a chance to look at the plans ahead of time," Susan Erber, city alderman and chairman of the Ecology, Development and Land Use Committee, explained.

"It also gives us a chance to get to know the builders and the architects and we can work with them in getting something that we can all enjoy," Mrs. Erber continued.

The alderman said that in the past plans had been made for the construction of various buildings and the city didn't have any knowledge of what type of building would finally appear on a parcel of land once the building permit had been issued.

"Our present zoning ordinance is so old that it doesn't have a development plan review," she said. "And a lot of buildings have been allowed to be built that we knew nothing about."

Mrs. Erber said this could have happened with the construction of the new Charlevoix Federal Credit Union building, but the credit union officials agreed to bring their plans in and discuss them with council. She pointed out that the condominiums were built without the city's knowledge of exactly what type of buildings were being constructed.

"We're hoping that the development plan review will help us control our growth and help us control the type of construction going on in the city," the alderman said. We want to make sure that the buildings constructed will be ones that fit in with the character of the community and that they also will be well used.

"We want to know that once a building has been put up that it will be used and that we needed it," Mrs. Erber continued.

"The development plan review helps both parties," she added. "It organizes the builders and developers and it helps keep the council on the up and up and aware of what's going on."

Mrs. Erber said it was important to add the development plan review to the city's zoning ordinance to afford the city protection.

There are properties being sold in the city that we want to know about and the development plan review can help us," she said.

Social Security Limit Raised on Earnings

People receiving social security checks will be able to earn more money without being penalized next year.

Social security recipients will be able to earn up to $3,000 without any reduction in their checks starting Jan. 1, according to Gordon Sattelmeyer, manager of the Petoskey Social Security Office. The 1976 earnings limit was $2,760.

People who earn more than $3,000 in 1977 stand to lose $1 from their social security checks for every $2 over the $3,000. However, when people only work part of the year, full benefits are payable for many months in which earnings are $250 or less. The limit this year was $230.

Only wages and income from operating a business are considered earnings under the rules of the earnings limitation. People can have unlimited income in the form of dividends, interest, rentals, other pensions, etc., without any reduction in their checks.

When people are age 72 or older, the full social security checks are payable regardless of how much the recipients earn. There are special rules and a final report must be filed for people the year they reach age 72, but after that no further reporting on income is necessary.

New Mini-Bus to Help Make Handicapped, Elderly Mobile

By FRAN MARTIN

After months of waiting, the Charlevoix County Commission on Aging has received a mini-bus equipped with a hydraulic lift to be utilized in the transportation of the elderly and the handicapped in the county Art Saworski, Director of the Commission on Aging and Transportation coordinator for the E and H bus.

The Dodge mini-bus which can transport two conventional wheelchairs and six other passengers has been assigned to the county under the Elderly and Handicapped program and is financed under the E and H program Saworski said. It replaces one of the two mini-buses that have been in use in the county for the past two years.

The transportation program is financed through the state with revenue coming from one-half cent gasoline tax earmarked for public transportation. The state provides the vehicle and $10,000 to operate the program.

Saworski said the transportation service operates on a demand-response basis. The new mini-bus with its lift transports wheelchair clients to Bergmann Center in Charlevoix, county residents to Senior Citizens nutritional dining centers in the three major communities and in Boyne Falls and elsewhere. He said they may also be used to transport Senior Citizens or the handicapped to areas out of the county for various reasons such as doctor's appointments and for other appointments.

Saworski, in announcing the addition to the county's transportation fleet, urged the handicapped as well as others to utilize the service. "We have worked hard to obtain the vehicles for your use. We hope you will use them. This applies especially to the handicapped who are so often house-bound during the winter". He went on to say that one need only call 536-7831 to make an appointment for the service.

Non-ambulatory residents of Charlevoix County will benefit from the new mini-bus equipped with a hydraulic lift which has been assigned to the Charlevoix County Commission on Aging. It will operate under the Elderly and Handicapped program financed by the state. He said Fran Martin of Charlevoix tries out the lift to assure its capabilities.

Bus service is available from 8:30 a.m. until 5:30 p.m. daily Monday through Friday and evenings and weekends by special request.

ART SAWORSKI and Gene Beer help Reporter, Fran Martin onto the lift in the new mini-bus that will transport handicapped and elderly in Charlevoix County. Miss Martin said the bus had passed the test: "If it can hold me, it can take anyone," she said.

Trial for Policeman To Start Jan. 11 Here

The dates for the trial of Irving W. Bulmann, 39, Detroit police sergeant charged with assault with intent to do great bodily harm less than the crime of murder, have been set for Jan. 11, 12 and 13 according to Roy C. Hays, Charlevoix County Prosecutor.

Circuit Judge Martin Breighner will hear the case in the court here.

Bulmann, who was in the area on a deer hunting expedition at the time of the shooting, is being charged with the shooting of a Berkley hunter, William Teller, Jr., 20, following an altercation during a Hunter's Ball at the Country House in South Arm township at approximately 2:15 a.m. Nov. 18. A preliminary hearing was held Dec. 22.

What's a Good Taxpayer?

The Hotline section of the Charlevoix Courier for Dec. 29th contained a Hotline item about the Charlevoix School Board and having to vote on a Saturday. It was signed by a "Good Taxpayer". What the heck is a good taxpayer? I pay taxes but I guess I am not a good taxpayer because I don't pay them happily, only constantly. The reason that I pay them is that there are severe penalties for not paying them.

A not so good taxpayer.

Disco Dancing's A Snap--Shake or Wiggle

By PAULA HOLMES
His feet glide gracefully across the floor carrying his body as if he was walking on an air cushion.
A smile crosses his face as his hands begin to catch the beat of the music and soon his head is moving rhythmically, too. He begins to move his entire body in time with the pulse of the disco sound.

For Michael Karr it's another night doing what he likes best—dancing—and teaching others to dance.
Karr, a resident of the Detroit area, was in Charlevoix recently giving dance lessons at the "Weatheravale" He also took time out to explain a little about disco dancing to the Courier.

"All disco dancing is, is learning a few of the moves from the various forms of line dances and then developing your own rhythms and moves from practice," Karr explained, resting on the table in between dance lessons, his sleeves rolled up. "It's easy to do."
Karr contends that anyone can learn to dance disco steps. "Everyone wants to dance," he said as his hands and upper body swayed in time to the music. "And everybody is born with a desire to dance."
"And disco is the easiest form of dance there is," he continued enthusiastically. "Anyone can learn to disco dance. Anyone can walk out of here knowing a few basic steps and be on their way to becoming a disco dancer."

According to Karr, dancing does more than answer a basic desire in people, it adds excitement to their lives, too. "Everyone should try dancing," he said. "Everyone should take just one lesson. You're coming down on a roller coaster."
Both men and women can be dancers, Karr said. "Women are more accustomed to dancing and will find that they are more likely to take a dance lesson," he said. "But men can do it, too, and they should try it."

Karr said part of the problem with men and dancing was cultural and he added that the problem could be easily overcome. "And you can always use dancing," he added smiling. "Karr left the table to mingle with the guests at the Weatheravale. He stopped briefly to talk with some young women who were on their way out the door."
"Thanks for the lesson," one girl oozed. "It was great."
"Why don't you stick around," Karr returned. "I'm going to teach a really hot one next."

He gave a brief demonstration of the dance he intended to teach as the girls watched admiringly. "That's really a hot one," the girl said.
Karr went next to the dance floor, had the lights turned up and took over the microphone. He explained the dance he was going to teach and invited people to come down and join him.
Several young women and a few older ones, too, immediately joined him. But no men came until after more cajoling from Karr and the appearance of his partner Al Sparks on the dance floor.

"No one likes to be the first one on the floor," Karr explained. "Sparks makes it easier for them to get out there, and he helps teach the steps, too."
Karr and Sparks travel across the country studying the different dances.

"I had a desire to learn the various dances and set it did," Karr said explaining how he got started. "The more you learn, the more you want to learn."
Karr said he came by teaching disco dancing just as naturally as he learned it. "After I learned a few of the dances and practiced them, my friends would see me dancing and ask me to help them," he said.
"So I would teach them and pretty soon they were recommending me to their friends," he continued. "It wasn't long before I was teaching, and I hadn't even thought about it professionally."

Now Karr is one of four or five dancers in the Detroit area that gives lessons at the various night clubs and discos. "You have to be serious about it, if you're going to do it," he explained. "It takes a lot of practice and you have to be continually learning new dances."
"I have gone from Florida to New York learning new dances," he said.
The dancer said the steps and dances did not vary much from state to state, although once in a while he did see an original addition to an old dance.
"The dances aren't really that different from place to place," he said. "And sometimes you will see exactly the same dance with a different name."
Karr said he travels to a different part of the country during every vacation—and he goes on vacation as often as he can.
When he's not on vacation he works teaching dance lessons at Ralphi's, a Detroit area night club and he works as a disc jockey in a night club for Paul Christy and Company. He has also worked at the Syndrome.
"I prefer night clubs," he explained. "When you start teaching from 8 to 5 or longer every day, that's not disco."

He has been offered a job teaching disco dancing for Arthur Murray Dance Studios, but Karr said that was too much like work.
"I prefer night clubs," he explained. "When you start teaching from 8 to 5 or longer every day, that's not disco."

THIS YOUNG WOMAN watches intently as Michael Karr demonstrates a disco dance step for her.

At Last County Commission Meeting of Year

Fund Transfer Occupies Officials

In a scramble to make ends meet, the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners spent its Wednesday session transferring funds to those accounts general fund to those accounts that had come up short.
The transfers included $27,000 to the Children's Care Fund administered by the Probate Court, $4,000 to the Probate Court budget and $11,000 to the Ironton Ferry Fund.
It was explained to the commissioners that the child care fund had exceeded its budget because expected revenues from the state which would reimburse the fund had not yet been received by the Probate Court.
The court overran its budget due to the cost of court-appointed attorneys for a child abuse case and the trial of a juvenile for murder.
Additional funds were needed for the Ironton Ferry due to unexpected repair costs.
The remainder of the general fund monies, created by budget surpluses and unanticipated revenues was then transferred to the revolving Tax Fund for the purchase of the delinquent taxes from all the other governmental units in the county.

The board of commissioners has been purchasing the delinquent taxes for three years to help facilitate the operation of the county treasurer's office.
"This way she only has to settle once with each unit," Lee Moorland explained. "And it assures all of the units that they will receive nearly 100 percent of their tax monies."
In other action, the commissioners awarded a bid for advertising minutes and other county activities to the Charlevoix County Press. The County Press had the low bid of the two submitted at 73.9 cents per column inch.

The Charlevoix Courier, which won the bid for county advertising last year, bid 75 cents per column inch.
The commission also agreed to purchase bonds for the county officers and sheriff's deputies and it agreed to plaster, paint and refinish work quarters in the sheriff's living quarters at the county jail.
In additional action, the commissioners passed resolutions honoring Commissioner Barney Miltner for his 42 years of dedicated service and Sheriff Philo Summer and his wife Beatrice for their 10 years of service.

Think Carefully Before Buying New CB Radio Set

Citizen's Band radios—CB's—are millions of them across the country. And sales are increasing every day. The channels are getting crowded. So, the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) announced that starting Jan. 1, 1977, the number of channels available for CB use would be increased from 23 to 40. But you won't be able to buy the 40 channel sets until after January 1. In the meantime, some manufacturers—but not all—say they will convert 23 channel sets bought now to 40 channel sets after January 1. The Federal Trade Commission (FTC) warns that some 23 channel sets can't be easily remade to carry 40 channels. They can still be used after January 1 on the 23 channels sets. And it's illegal, according to FCC rules, for you to change them yourself.
If you do decide to have the set changed, can you take it back to the store where you bought it, or must you mail it to the factory yourself? How long will it take? Will you get the same set back, or a different set?
"How much extra will you have to pay the manufacturer for the conversion? How much more would a brand new 40 channel set cost than a 23 channel set? Is the price of the 23 channel set too good a buy for you to pass up?"
A 23 channel set may be a good buy, right now. It may be all you need. Just get all the facts before you buy.
For further information, check with the closest FTC regional office.
And, if you do buy a CB radio, you can get a copy of Citizen's Band Rules and Regulations by sending $1.50 to Consumer Information Center, Dept. 097E, Pueblo, Colorado 81009. The free catalog, "Consumer Information," a listing of over 200 federal consumer publications, is also available by sending a postcard to the same address.

Economy Making Gains in County

A look at the record books shows that the Charlevoix County economy made surprising gains in the last few years.
Despite inflation, unemployment, high taxes and the various other problems that are common to all sections of the country, there was progress locally.
A principal indicator of this progress is the volume of business that was done by local retail establishments.

The reports show that it increased considerably during the five years ending January 1, 1976.
It reflects the fact that area families, most of whom had their pay envelopes fattened each year, remain active in the marketplace, spending as much as was necessary to maintain the standard of living to which they had become accustomed.
The growth in the period is brought out in data compiled by the Standard Rate and Data Service.
It shows that retail sales in Charlevoix County stores, as of the beginning of this year, reached an annual rate of more than $44,649,000. Five years earlier they totaled $21,422,000.
It was a bigger increase than was recorded in many parts of the country. Much of it was due of course, to inflation.
It was equivalent to consumer spending last year at the rate of $7,555 per local household, as compared with the 1970 rate of $4,152 per household.
The rise, 61 percent, topped the United States rise of 47 percent and the 48 percent in the East North Central States.
Fundamental to the growth in retail activity in the local area during the five-year span was the marked increase in income accounted for by the average family.
During most of the period it more than kept pace with the rising curve of inflation, compensating for the mounting taxes, the bigger grocery and housing bills and the zoning medical costs.
The figures for Charlevoix County show that personal income, after deduction of taxes, climbed to $7,311,000. Five years before it was $4,619,000.

Courier Joins Many In Expressing Thanks To Dr. Saltonstall

Saying farewell is never an easy task, especially when it has to be said to a person that has done so much for Charlevoix over the years.

So rather than saying farewell, the Courier would like to join the hundreds of others who have extended their well wishes to one of Charlevoix's favorite citizens, Dr. G.B. Saltonstall.

Last week, the Charlevoix physician ended a career that began over 42 years ago. Most of his career was devoted to caring for the health of Charlevoixians.

It would be impossible in this short editorial space to list all the accomplishments the Charlevoix resident has achieved in his career serving the local public.

Equally impossible would be to express all the warm feelings shared by the many who have come in contact with him during his medical practice.

However, it is not impossible to pay tribute to a man who has done so much for us over the years.

"Gib" Saltonstall devoted his entire life to our community. He started a medical career in Northern Michigan, when it was not a popular place to live. In fact, there were only 30 physicians in a four-county area, when he began his career in Charlevoix.

The Charlevoix physician recently remarked that office calls were only 50 cents when he used to be located above the drug store on the corner of Bridge and Park streets.

While doctors in major metropolitan areas were drawing salaries for their services, "Gib" often got paid with wood, chickens and vegetables. And he says, he was mighty grateful to receive that kind of compensation.

Publicly, "Gib" tells everyone that he has delivered more than 3,000 babies in the area. But what isn't revealed, is the thousands of other lives he has touched over the years.

Being a country doctor has never been an easy task, when you consider that it has only been in recent years that the fine modern technology now available at Charlevoix Area Hospital has been here for physicians to use in treating their patients.

Even though "Gib" was located in Northern Michigan, he never failed to take an active role in his state professional organizations.

In addition to being active in the Northern Michigan Medical Society, he served on several committees of the Michigan State Medical Society and acted as counselor for the northern district from 1950-57.

He was elected to the presidency of the medical society for a one-year term in 1958.

He also served on the Michigan Association of Professors Board from 1967-68 and on the board of directors of Michigan Medical Services (Blue Shield) from 1958-61. And he was on the State Board of Registration of Medicine for eight years from 1962 to 1970.

However to Charlevoix residents, "Gib" is probably more known for his active involvement in the Congregational Church, where he has been active for 40 years.

The prominent local physician is also well-known by local yachtsmen for his many years of sailing "The Rogue" with one of his closest friends, E.D. "Pat" Hawley.

Also during his career, he has served as county corner and city health officer, which involved putting quarantine signs on homes where there were communicable diseases.

In addition to his public contributions, he has given to the business community by serving on the board of directors of Charlevoix County State Bank.

Fortunately for Charlevoix, "Gib" and his wife, Charlotte, plan to remain in Charlevoix to enjoy their retirement and all the friends they have made during the years.

It is always difficult to find the right words to either write or say to a person who has done so much to serve the people in Charlevoix as "Gib" has over the years.

May we simply say "thank you" for giving us so much and may you enjoy the wonderful retirement you have so richly earned.

Puerto Rico, the tropical jewel that hangs like a millstone around the neck of New York City, may soon become the 51st state. If President Ford has his way, the President proposed over the weekend that Congress take action this year to admit Puerto Ricans into the fold as full-fledged citizens.

Although I'm not sure what exactly the President has in mind, I suspect that he feels statehood will tend to keep Puerto Ricans home tending to their own vineyards rather than padding the jobless rolls in Brooklyn. After all, you can have just as much fun collecting unemployment in San Juan as you can in New York, and the climate's better.

So far as I can tell, there hasn't been any great groundswell of sentiment among Puerto Ricans toward statehood, at least not like there was in Alaska and Hawaii before those two colonies linked arms with the mother country.

I think if I were a Puerto Rican, I would lean more strongly toward total independence. Then, as a foreign nation, Puerto Rico would thrive on direct aid from the United States. And if Uncle Sam didn't open his purse strings wide enough, a few courtly overtures toward Cuba would bring him around in a hurry.

How typical of Ford to be worried about statehood for Puerto Rico when he would be worried about statehood for the Arab countries. Now there's a proposal that makes a lot of sense.

With one stroke, Congress could admit Saudi Arabia, Iraq, Iran, Kuwait and every sheikhdom on the Red Sea. Members of the commonwealth, thereby solving all our energy problems until the last drop of oil is gone.

Think about it. That dastardly cartel of oil exporting nations called OPEC would be dissolved on the spot because such out-and-out price fixing would be in violation of our anti-trust laws. Each of our Middle Eastern states would find itself in competition with its neighbors to supply the rest of the country (meaning us) with fuel at competitive prices.

The cost of gasoline at the pump would drop so dramatically it would make your carbuator choke.

As the price of oil dropped, the price of natural gas would follow suit just to stay in the running. Even the big coal producers would have to shape up if they wanted to remain competitive. Why I can see the price of coal dropping below $75 a ton in West Virginia and southern Illinois.

Furthermore, as gasoline becomes more plentiful at a more reasonable price, you could look for an upsurge in the sale of the small, economical automobiles that have been a drag on the market during the days of scarcity and high prices. Don't ask me why, but that's the way we do things in these United States.

However, the situation won't be an unmitigated blessing. The market for the big gas-guzzlers, which appears insatiable in these days of high prices, will probably taper off when the prestige connected with conspicuous waste begins to lose some of its glitter.

Would the Arabs really like to become citizens of the United States? Of course they would. Union with Uncle Sam would mean they could cancel all of their contracts with American arms manufacturers and let Washington worry about the defense of its far-flung outposts in the Middle East.

There are so many advantages to bringing the Arab states into the Union that you wonder why we have waited so long.

I would like to say the same about Puerto Rico, but I can't. Either can Jimmy Carter.

Probert Says Thanks

Dear Editor:

The two Charlevoix High School Wrestling tournaments held this month have come from the co-operation of many people in our community of Charlevoix. The first and third Saturday in December found over 400 young men here at Charlevoix to compete in the Invitational Wrestling Tournaments. Many of the parents and interesting spectators attended as you may have seen Saturday if you were at a local restaurant, willing for the overflow on service. These two Wrestling Tournaments have developed into the largest meets in the State of Michigan.

The Charlevoix Wrestling Club wishes to thank the many parents and alumni for their help because without volunteers there would be no way to have a tournament of this size. Although there are many people involved a few individuals deserve a special thank you. Dr. Harry Custer, John Golovich, Ivan Whitley, plus two former wrestlers and assistance coaches Ron Bindi and John Oza. We also would not have been able to have a match without Ralph Hess and HESS FURNITURE Truck loan of their vehicle.

As the coach of the Charlevoix Wrestling Team may I say Thank you to all, and remind many people that this tournament was run at no cost to the school except heat and lights and the use of the building. The Wrestling Club even paid the custodian time and one-half pay for their help. Added to this, the fact that 400 young men had a chance to do something for themselves on a Saturday, a day when there are no school activities. Many new friends were found. Charlevoix will be hosting one more tournament this year on February 5th when the Rayders will be the host to the Michigan-Huron Shores Conference Championship. Why don't you come out to see the fastest growing high school sport amateur wrestling.

Charlevoix will be hosting it next to last dual meet here January 5, 1977 with St. Ignace coming to the mats at 6:30 p.m.

Dear Ken:

Thank you so much for your cooperation in printing news of Grandview in your paper this past year. I do appreciate this news coverage of events concerning both Grandview and its auxiliary.

A special thank you too for the extra copies of the Courier you send each week. We have several Charlevoix residents living here and they look forward each week to the hometown paper, and the extra copies make it possible for those without subscriptions to keep up on local news.

Thanks again for being so kind. Best wishes for a joyous Holiday season.

Sincerely,
Hilda Watkins, R.N.

We got a call the other day from our tax man, who said he was having problems with some of the figures on our return.

"It's your expenditures," he said. "They're way out of line. For example, you spend $13.36 on entertainment last year."

"That much?" I observed, peering over his shoulder.

"Taxes on purchases only ran $48.12."

"That sounds right," nodded my husband.

"Your bank shows they paid $3.16 interest on your savings. So, where did all the money go?"

My husband took a deep breath and said, "We're the sole support of a 16-year-old driver who is insured."

"Oh, I am sorry," said our accountant, removing his glasses. "I didn't know."

"It's all right. We don't tell a lot of people. It's awkward when they press money into your hand and offer to help."

"A church group even offered to send us a basket."

"How much coverage do you carry?" asked the accountant.

"Liability, uninsured motorist, medical payments, collision, $50 deductible, and comprehensive."

"Good Lord, man, why didn't you say something? Poverty is one thing, but comprehensive..."

"At first, when we applied for the insurance, I didn't think it was going to be this bad. Then the agent said, 'Does your son make good grades?' The kid only passed one test all year. His eye examination. Then he said, 'Does he smoke?' Is he kind to his mother? Does he belong to a book club? I thought two out of three wasn't bad, but he tacked on another fee."

"Does he live at home? That helps."

"Yes, but he drives a 2-28 Camaro."

"Don't say that," said the tax man. "I've known presidents of corporations who can't afford the tab on 2-28 Camaros."

"We tried to get him to marry just to lower the rates," I interrupted, "but there was only one girl he was interested in and he ran over her foot in the school parking lot."

"The premium on the tape deck was extra," said my husband sadly. "So was the CB radio."

"I'm going to give you the same advice I've given every other parent," said the accountant. "Get yourself an old, retired teenager who lives at home, has had driver's education, who is happily married, gets good grades, doesn't smoke, drives a station wagon, and hums. That'll be $50."

"Could we work something out," asked my husband.

Meet Charlevoix

Allen Sandberg is Charlevoix's new city administrator. He is the first person to be permanently appointed to that position in more than three years.

This week he agreed to talk with the Courier about some of his observations of the city and about some of the new things that have been started since he came here and about plans for the future as well as about himself.

COURIER: How do you like Charlevoix?

SANDBERG: It is without a doubt one of the nicest cities I have ever been in.

COURIER: Do you like working in this area, in a small community?

SANDBERG: As you know, most of my government work was in Chicago in the suburbs where I spent nine years as a village manager and assistant manager. I find it much more exciting to be in a city like Charlevoix that's by itself and where people identify with their city. In the suburbs, most of the communities are bedroom communities and people identify first with the place where they work and then with the city where they work and finally with the place where they live.

COURIER: Are there any other advantages to being a city administrator in a small community?

SANDBERG: I prefer a smaller community because you can have a more personal touch as a city administrator in helping to solve some of the community's problems. You're not removed from the problems three or four times by levels of bureaucracy. In a bigger city there just gets to be too much bureaucracy and you don't really get a chance to get out and see the community and to find out what needs to be done.

COURIER: In your opinion, how does Charlevoix compare with other small communities?

SANDBERG: One of the best things about Charlevoix is its readiness and activities. Communities ten times our size don't have near as many resources and activities as we have. We've got a golf course, a harbor, ski slope and our own utilities. We also have a more solid tax base and we are the county seat so there are many people readily available to help solve our problems. In addition, we have a fine business community and several service clubs that are generally very cooperative in helping the city. And just from observation, I would say that we do a good job on snow removal and that we have a fine police department.

COURIER: Is there still room for improvement?

SANDBERG: Everything in life needs improvement—some things a little improvement and some things a lot. I will be working closely with the mayor and common council in thinking what needs to be worked on.

COURIER: What are some of the areas that you think need to be improved?

SANDBERG: Well, there doesn't seem to be anything major that needs to be worked on, and what we do this year basically hinges on where common council decides the city should be 10 years from now. Together we will look at what the trends are and hopefully meet them.

More specifically, I think the physical plant could use a little more attention in improving its operation for the public. Also I would like to study city hall to see how it could be put to better use for the council and citizens' groups.

COURIER: Are there any other areas that you feel could be improved?

SANDBERG: I would like to improve the city's relationship with the newspapers and radios and I would like to explore establishing a channel on cable television that could be used by the school system, the city and even the county.

We could use the channel for certain programs such as fire prevention, or a program on building inspection practices, or we could have a program explaining why certain things are being done in the city or presenting future plans. I have even seen cities use the cable TV channel for announcements of city activities. This could be a specific source of information about the city for the public.

COURIER: Have you started anything new since you arrived here?

SANDBERG: I've been working on establishing a better organizational pattern for the city employees. We need to have lines of communication and authority developed. There are too many positions that report directly to the city administrator and that the city administrator hires, who are really working for someone else. Also we are trying out a newsletter for city officials and employees. The newsletter will be an easy source of information about all of the city's activities and problems. Council should be kept informed of what's happening in the city and little pieces of information like how many customers have been served and how much salt and sand were used during the month help. We already do some of this reporting for the state and various other agencies, but we don't report it to our own city officials.

Lasater Assumes Duties As New County Sheriff

"We're not losing a probation officer, we're gaining a sheriff," was the sentiment expressed by the 9th District Court staff as they prepared for the retirement of Probation Officer George Lasater last week.

Lasater was sworn in as Charlevoix County Sheriff by District Judge David Fershee last week during special ceremonies in the county courthouse.

Byron Stockwell, the assistant chief of the Charlevoix City Police Department, was sworn in as the undersheriff during the ceremony.

Lasater has also served as a sheriff's clerk.

During the ceremony attended by county employees, friends and relatives, several warm wishes were made by county officials to Lasater and Stockwell.

Judge Fershee observed, "George Lasater has served since the inception of the District Court probation department, which was one of the first in Northern Michigan."

"And he has served under three judges, which in itself is a major accomplishment," Fershee smiled. "And he has done so in a loyal and honest manner, never compromising his principles."

Fershee said Lasater should be proud of his accomplishments during his six years as probation officer which included the implementation of many new ideas such as the work program in lieu of a jail sentence, which has benefited the area with extra manpower and saved taxpayers dollars, and the implementation of the alcohol driver education program, which has helped clear the district court docket.

He also instituted the inmate education program at the county jail, which has been beneficial to adult defendants who could not read and write, Fershee said.

"Unfortunately, not all district courts can have probation officers," Fershee concluded. "We were one of the first to have one and we had one of the best."

Charlevoix Police Chief Jack Mol welcomed Lasater to the area.

Lasater took office as sheriff Jan. 1. He won that position after defeating incumbent Sheriff Philo Sumner during the Republican primary and then again in the November general election when Sumner ran as a sticker candidate.

Residents Honor Saltonstall

CHARLOTTE AND GIB Saltonstall greet a friend during a reception held in their honor by the Charlevoix Area Hospital Women's Guild last week. It was a sad-happy day for the Saltonstalls. Dr. Saltonstall is retiring after more than 42 years as a physician in the Charlevoix area. The Saltonstalls plan to spend their retirement in Charlevoix, however, and now they will have plenty of time to spend with friends and relatives.

Richard Farmer Weds Doris Larsen in Petoskey

Richard J. Farmer and Doris Larsen of Petoskey were married at 9 a.m. Dec. 31 in the sanctuary of the United Methodist Church in Petoskey. Rev. Donald Merrill officiated at the single ring ceremony before 32 relatives of the couple.

The bride chose a open blue suit for her wedding and she wore a corsage of carnations surrounded with dark red roses. Mrs. Robert (Diane) Tucker of Onaway assisted her mother as matron of honor. She wore an olive green print dress and a yellow carnation corsage.

Dan Farmer of Charlevoix attended his father as best man.

Following the ceremony, a reception and brunch was held at the bride's home, hosted by her daughters, Mrs. Tucker and Mrs. Bruce (Patricia) Holmes.

The bride is currently employed at the Petoskey News-Review and will be retiring Jan. 12. The groom is a retired employee of the Michigan Department of State Highways and Transportation.

The couple plans to live in Charlevoix.

Community Concert Offers Ragtime Pianist

Ragtime music and comedy will greet members of the Northern Michigan Community Concert Association Saturday.

Max Morath will entertain area residents with his view of America during the turn of the century in his one-man show, "The Ragtime Years," at 8 p.m. in the Petoskey Middle School auditorium.

The pianist, singer and comedian will blend music, humor, satire and history into a bright and affectionate look at another era. The show not only explores ragtime piano music, but offers songs by Bert Williams, Irving Berlin and other ragtime lyrics.

The artist further brings this era to life with his humorous insights into the history of the time.

As an interpreter of the American past, Morath first gained national attention in the 1960s with two award-winning series for television. He also launched a theatrical review in New York and has been on television variety and talk shows as well as national tours.

Benefits Change

The federally-funded program covering supplemental unemployment insurance benefits has been modified under the Michigan Employment Security Commission.

Under the new regulations, set by federal law, when the insured unemployment rate is at or above 6 percent, unemployed people may collect up to a total of 65 weeks of benefits through existing unemployment programs.

However, when the rate is between 5 and 5.9 percent, Nancy Neff Stanley graduates from Western Michigan.

Mrs. Richard Stanley of Hastings, the former Nancy Neff, was among the recent graduates honored at the winter commencement at Western Michigan University.

Mrs. Stanley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Neff, was graduated with honors with a Master's Degree in Communication Arts and Sciences. She received her B.S. degree from Western Michigan and has been teaching for the past four years.

Twelfth Night Marks End of Holiday

On the twelfth day of Christmas, some celebrate, throw firecrackers. Others dive underwater to retrieve a golden crucifix.

Twelfth Night, or Epiphany January 6—marks the end of the Christmas holiday season. It is celebrated with a variety of customs and ceremonies throughout the Christian world.

In the United States, Christmas greens are burned on Epiphany.

An unusual Epiphany ritual is the blessing of the Greek sponge cake at Tarpon Springs, Florida. The bishop throws his gold crucifix into the water to signify the baptism of Christ. Young men dive after the cross; whoever retrieves it is specially blessed.

Latin Americans consider Epiphany both a solemn religious festival and the beginning of the pre-Lenten carnival season.

Mexicans salute Twelfth Night with firecrackers, masked revelry, feasting, and candlelight processions.

In Christian tradition, whatever the form of observance, Epiphany, or "appearance," commemorates the three proofs of Christ's divinity which occurred on that date: the visit of the Three Wise Men to the infant Jesus; his baptism; and the first miracle, changing water to wine for wedding guests at Cana.

Even early Christmas apparently celebrated Epiphany on the twelfth day of Christmas. During the Middle Ages, the occasion prompted plays staged in churches. But solemn observances largely disappeared in the bawdy atmosphere of Elizabethan England.

Shakespeare's Twelfth Night reflects the merry mood. The play probably was first presented in a command performance at Whitehall Palace on January 6, 1601.

When Queen Elizabeth entertained a distinguished Italian guest, the Duke of Bracciano.

A popular tradition was to bake a Twelfth Night cake, a bean, coin, or china figure was baked inside the rich "cake of kings." Whoever found the prize was king for the day. Sometimes the king picked a queen and ordered everyone to drink and dance all night.

Few, however, could rival the wild court fetes of France's King Francis I. In 1521, the high-spirited king learned about a nearby Twelfth Night party where a courtier had been made head king. King Francis jokingly decided to challenge his royal rival and with his court followers besieged the house.

Revelers inside counter-attacked by throwing "a prodigious quantity of snowballs, eggs, and apples." In the melee, a burning log thrown out the window hit the king in the face.

Though seriously wounded, King Francis refused to punish the offender because he blamed himself for leading the hijinks.

One historian reports that the king grew a beard to cover his scar, thus popularizing beards at court.

Fire Safety

This well may be the year of fireplaces and wood burning stoves as we try to keep the thermostat down and the temperature up.

Fire alarms should be standard equipment in all homes but many of us are becoming more aware of their importance as we turn to wood burning fuel to help heat our homes.

Most deaths from fire occur in the home and a high percentage happen between midnight and 6:00 a.m. Early warning fire alarms can improve fire safety during the hours when people are asleep.

Fire in the home often smolder for some time before heat and flame are present. Smoke is one of the first products to form, therefore, a smoke activated alarm generally provides earlier warning than a heat sensitive alarm.

There are two basic types of home smoke detectors for common use - ionization and Photo-Electric. The ionization type uses an alpha radiation source to provide small electric flow. When smoke reduces the current flow, the alarm is activated.

The photo-electric smoke detector uses a light beam which is activated when smoke reflects the light beam to a photo cell on the side of the chamber.

Both types of smoke detectors can be wired into home electrical systems, but only the ionization type will operate on batteries. The batteries should be checked regularly and replaced every year.

If buying a smoke detector is on your list of things to do, get at least two price estimates before buying. Be sure you get an instruction booklet on operation, testing and maintenance and read it and keep it with your records.

Test the units you install or request that the installer test units in your presence to see if they work.

Be sure the unit you purchase carries the UL or FM label.

Following are eleven suggestions that can lessen the incidence of burn injuries.

If you do smoke, don't use matches; use a butane lighter with a trigger that extinguishes the flame when you remove your finger.

If an accident occurs, don't panic. Roll on the ground or floor. Never run.

Don't smoke in bed. Install smoke detectors. Know the local emergency number.

Don't spend the day in night clothes. If possible, get dressed.

Buy flame-resistant sleepwear.

Gasoline is not a cleaning fluid. Vapors can ignite from sparks or pilots of water heaters.

Keep flammable liquids in proper containers with safety closures.

If you use medication, take special precautions - never smoke when tired or sleepy. Know how to get out of the house or apartment in an emergency.

Defending Ski Champs Take to Hills

By FRANK MARTIN
The Charlevoix Rayder Ski team, defending champions in the Michigan-Huron Shores league, will take to the slopes to defend its title on Wednesday, Jan. 12, when the two squads will meet Potoskey at Nub's Nob.

With 33 skiers vying for starting assignments, competition is running high among the candidates who have been on the practice slopes for several weeks during the best skiing conditions in recent years. The skiers themselves are confident of a good season as they prepare to open a five-meet season with Potoskey. The team, coached by Mike Bonello, will compete at 1 p.m. each Wednesday concluding with the regional meet at Mancelona on Feb. 17 or 18; the conference meet at Sylvan Knoll at Gaylord Feb. 23 and the state meet at Boyne Country on Feb. 26 or 28.

The Charlevoix team captured the Michigan-Huron Shores league title in 1976. The boys team finished third and the girls team fourth in conference competition.

Other regulars from the '76 squad who will be candidates for this year's teams will be Begrow, Erik Lundteigen, Marc Malpeli, Paul Berg and Mark Lundell of the boys team and Camille Malpeli, Lisa Wiener, Sue Winchester, Pam Boss and Ginny Eby of the girls team.

Six skiers compose each team with the best times earned by the top four competitors of each team establishing the team scores.

Girls Volleyball Begins Jan. 12

By FRANK MARTIN
The Charlevoix High School Girls Volleyball team, coached by Mrs. Pat Carland, will take to the court Wednesday, Jan. 12, when the team travels to Cheboygan. The match will be the first of seven to be played against Michigan Huron Shore Conference teams.

In announcing the team candidates and schedule for the season, Coach Carland said that only dual matches will be played this season. In the past, triangular meets were scheduled. For the first time, there will be a Junior Varsity volleyball team. Both the Varsity and the JV will play three games during each dual match Mrs. Carland explained.

Forming the nucleus for this year's squad will be four letter winners from last season, Kay Curry, Rita Wasoski, Julie Wimmer and Terri Hafford, all of whom were regulars on the 1976 team. They will be backed up by three experienced players who did not receive letters but who will play major roles in the 1977 team. The trio is Carole Osterberg, Bobbie Klooster and Sue Hodge.

Other candidates for the squad are Tina Klama, Karen Lamereaux, Tammi Mann, Chris Lehman, Kathy Sladek, Donna Jones and Sally Dishong. A 15-member JV team, composed mostly of freshmen and sophomores, will be playing for the first time and will serve as a training group for future Varsity squads.

Tiller Otis Returns To K-C Cager Team

Mildred "Tiller" Otis was among the 14 students reporting for practice for Kalamazoo College's 1977 women's basketball squad. The junior was among seven veterans with the least one year of college competition behind them that will be on the team this year.

The Hornets will take to the floor Jan. 12 for a pre-season scrimmage against Western Michigan University's second squad. They will meet Spring Arbor Jan. 19 for their regular season opener.

Miss Otis is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Otis of Charlevoix.

21 Million Visit State Park System

A record number of visitors crowded Michigan's state parks this year. The Department of Natural Resources said the number of visitors at the 79 state parks and recreation areas passed more than 21 million this year—an increase of 8 percent. Young State Park visitor attendance increased by about 18,000 from 134,000 in 1975 to 152,000 visitors in 1976.

Other area parks included Potoskey State Park which had about 130,000 visitors this year up from 161,000 and Wilderness State Park had 172,000 visitors up from 163,000 visitors last year.

DNR Improves Trails

Snowmobiling along Department of Natural Resources trails should be better than ever this year, according to the Region II Recreational and Environmental Forester.

Bill Mahalak said the emphasis this year is on quality. Last summer and fall, the DNR Forestry Division worked on most of the snowmobile trails to prepare them for a safer more enjoyable season. Trails were leveled, widened where needed, corners were made safer and bridges built for stream crossings. In several cases, short sections of trail were rerouted to avoid unsafe areas or areas where snowmobiling conflicted with another use. Grooming operations on the trails began Dec. 27 and all trails are reported as having over 10 inches of snow. The trails are also clearly marked this year following an extensive signing program.

Most of the DNR trails in Charlevoix County are located in the Northeastern area in Chandler and Melrose townships. The trails connect the Chandler Hill area with Wolverine in Cheboygan County.

JAMES MCCALLUM, outgoing Charlevoix County Undersheriff, presents a plaque to outgoing Sheriff Phil Sumner. The plaque bears Sumner's badge and the engraved names of all of the sheriff's deputies and other departmental personnel.

Sumner Honored By Staff Members

A theft was reported to the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department last week. That, by itself was not unusual, however, the fact that the missing article was outgoing Sheriff Phil Sumner's badge, and the fact that the badge apparently was taken while it was in the sheriff's office, was.

"As soon as I noticed it was missing, I reported it," Sumner explained of one of his final investigations as sheriff. "I wasn't going to fool around."

After a thorough investigation by the sheriff's deputies, the badge turned up in a special plaque commemorating Sumner's more than 10 years with the department. The plaque was also engraved with the names of all the deputies and other sheriff's department employees.

The plaque and badge was presented to Sumner at a special dinner honoring him last week at the sheriff's office.

"I have enjoyed my years as sheriff," Sumner said at the dinner. "And if it wasn't for the personnel in the department I couldn't have done it. I would like to thank all of the employees of the department for their help."

"I would especially like to thank the county board of commissioners," he continued. "I have worked with them and they have worked with me. I didn't always get what I wanted and they didn't always get what they wanted, but together we got a lot done."

Sumner, 56, said he plans to find another job, but didn't say what he would be doing.

"Jan. 1, my law enforcement badge is going on the wall," he said. "My career in law enforcement has ended."

Sumner has been in law enforcement for 27 years. He served with the Boyne City Police Department from 1949-55 and for one year in 1964. From 1956-66 he served as a Charlevoix County Sheriff's deputy and was appointed to the position of sheriff in 1966, where he served until defeated for re-election by George Iwasz last November.

Sundew Smooths Way for Challenger

Comes Home to Help

The U.S. Coast Guard Cutter Sundew, which had been dispatched to the Straits of Mackinac Dec. 28 for ice breaking duties, was recalled to Charlevoix Sunday to assist the cement carrier M. duSa. Challenger as it returned to the South Point plant for its last load of the season.

The Challenger, which was due at the plant early Sunday, became caught in the ice and asked for assistance with the Sundew arriving at 2:30 p.m.

It wasn't until 8:46 p.m. Sunday that the cement carrier tied up at its slip to take on its final load of the 1976-77 season. The carrier departed South Point at 3 a.m.

Meanwhile, the Sundew tied up in Charlevoix for a brief respite from icebreaking but was scheduled to return at midnight Monday to the Straits area. A spokesman said the ship would continue to work the area where the ice is especially heavy for this time of the year as the result of the exceptionally cold weather.

THE SUNDEW was busy again during the past week making way for ice bound ships. Here a barge travels through the ice free path made by the Coast Guard Cutter.

Council Moves Forward On Recreation Grant Plans

By PAULA HOLMES

The go-ahead has been given to the Charlevoix Recreation Department to seek funds for the development of the Mt. McSaubu Recreation Park.

Following a public hearing Monday night, common council approved a resolution instructing the recreation department to proceed with a final application for Land and Water Conservation Funds $12,800 for materials and $5,000 for labor. Pease said the city would not be using donated labor or materials to match the federal funds, as had been originally proposed, because of the complications that caused when applying for federal funds.

Dwight Boss, recreation director, said most of the funds for the project would be spent on the construction of the multipurpose building.

Boss said he wasn't sure what type of building would be constructed at the foot of the old toboggan hill at the park, but he said it would include showers, restrooms and a large area heated by a fireplace for skaters to use to warm up.

A small kitchen area would also be included in the 60 foot by 30 foot building.

"The building will also be used for other organizations beside the ice and hockey skaters and the summer day camp program," Boss said. "Hopefully the building will be used 12 months a year."

Boss said the building could be rented out to such groups as the Boy Scouts and Big Brothers and Big Sisters.

The recreation director said the ice skating and hockey rinks would not have asphalt or cement surfaces, but would be built on hard ground.

"The additional expense the city will incur having these rinks may be able to use revenue sharing funds or anti-recession funds to match the federal funds for the project.

If the grant is approved, construction on the project will begin in the spring.

Pease said there were no assurance the city would receive the funds. However, following examination of a pre-application, the BOR told the city it had been placed on a high priority list for receiving funds under the final application.

Boss said he intended to seek BOR and other grant monies every year to continue fixing up Mt. McSaubu and to improve other recreation areas in the city.

Site Plan Review Added to Ordinance

Council Approves Zoning Amendment

By PAULA HOLMES

Charlevoix Common Council and prospective builders in the community should eye to eye from now on.

The aldermen approved an amendment to the city zoning ordinance providing for a site plan review following a public hearing Monday night.

The site plan development amendment, which provides for a site plan review of each proposed development in all zoning districts except single family residential, will give the city some checks and balances on what's being constructed in the city, according to Mayor Edward Hansen.

"We've had situations where people have come in for a rezoning request with fancy plans and lots of promises and then we never see that structure again," Hansen said during the public hearing.

"The site plan review pins people down and we can say okay, you're going to build this structure and that's it," the mayor said.

Adrian Susan Erber, chairman of the Ecology, Development and Land Use Committee and sponsor of the amendment, pointed out that the site plan review could act to help developers, too.

"It may help you when you're building, if people know the site plan review is okay by the city," Mrs. Erber said.

One woman at the public hearing said the site plan review was not practical for residential dwellings like duplexes.

"You would have to have a planner or an architect draw up the site plan for you in order to show all of the things you are requiring," she said.

Council members countered that it was important to see a site plan for anything greater than a single family residence to make sure that proper amount of parking had been allowed for in the plan among other things.

The council pointed out that there were several places in the city where parking was not adequate for duplexes and other multiple residential dwellings.

William Fichtman asked if the rezoning of the same things as a site review with the issuance of a building permit, but the current zoning ordinance does not have specific language to require developers to produce site plans.

"Our current ordinance doesn't have the regulations in it that this amendment does," Hansen said. "And it wouldn't have the teeth in it for the assurance that the person is going to build like this amendment does."

Fichtman warned the council not to get too restrictive with its zoning ordinances.

"If you get overly restrictive or control away you may be involved in an unworkable situation as you could under the current ordinance," he said.

No zoning ordinance is any more effective than the enforcement of it," he added.

Fichtman suggested the council set up a planning commission to aid them in carrying out the site plan review. Mrs. Erber said a planning commission would be set up under the proposed zoning ordinance which she hoped would be approved in the next few months.

Oscar Ward said he supported the amendment, but not the idea of a planning commission.

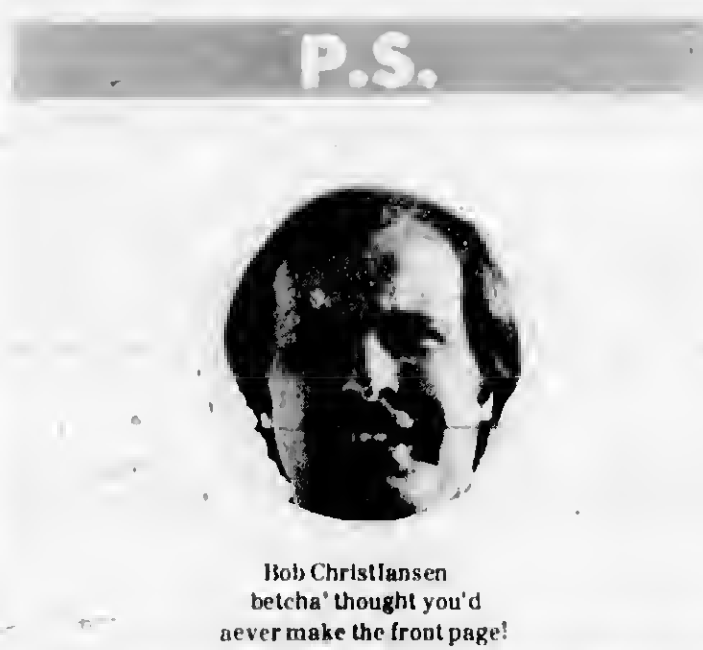

"I think this amendment is a good move as long as it is kept within the confines of the council," Ward said.

The ordinance was unanimously approved with due Morris absent. It will take effect immediately.

Why Wasn't Mt. McSaubu Open? I want to know why Mt. McSaubu was not open on New Year's Day? My family had new skis, drove through bad weather and roads to find the place closed. Why???

Will Beaches Be Closed, Too? Are we to assume that the beaches will be closed the 4th of July? The ski hill was closed January 1st. Now really! Who ever heard of the hill being closed when we have mounds of snow. Is this the kind of service we get when the city takes over?

Kelli McNair and her dog Quincy. The dream of an 11 year-old East Jordan resident about attending Jimmy Carter's inauguration has been turned into a reality. Kelli McNair was given national attention recently when she received an invitation from Carter to the inauguration in appreciation for a poem she had sent him following the election. When local residents learned that the McNairs might not be able to attend the inauguration because of finances, they rallied behind the family and started raising funds. But the Detroit News has discovered, through tips from many country-western musicians, that Kelli's poem is actually the slightly revised lyrics of the Buddy Alan song, "Love Sure Feels Good in My Heart." The song was copyrighted by Blue Bank Music in Bakersfield, Calif., in 1972. It was recorded on Capitol Records by Susan Ray. When Kelli was confronted with this information by a local writer Monday night, she said she had seen the song

In City Clerk's Office

Auditors Find Irregularities

Charlevoix city auditors have found some $300 missing through irregular transactions from the city clerk's office, according to a report sent to the Michigan Department of Treasury.

In their report, Petoskey certified public accounts Hill, Woodcock & Dietel allege that former City Clerk Lyle King made false claims for expense account reimbursement and overtime payment when he was in office.

King resigned suddenly November 5, saying that his reasons were personal. King had been appointed to the clerk's position in October, 1975, and then was elected to the office in the April city election.

However, according to the auditor's report, the city clerk was presented with the auditor's findings and offered his resignation. The auditors say the city then accepted his resignation.

"Immediately following the clerk's resignation, we reviewed several potential problem areas which covered the period from October, 1975, through November, 1976, the City Clerk's entire term in office," the auditor's report continued. "The amount of unsubstantiated expense reimbursements and other irregularities as determined at the time of our review is approximately $300, which agrees with a written statement made by the former City Clerk."

When contacted about the irregularities, King said he had no comment.

Mayor Edward Hansen said common council has decided not to prosecute King in the matter.

"On the advice of our attorney, we withheld the last pay check due him after he resigned," Mayor Hansen explained. "It turned out to be for approximately the same amount of money as the auditors determined was missing."

"We feel we have recovered all of the money we could possibly recover," Hansen said. "We don't think we would benefit by going to court."

Hansen said the false claims were first discovered by Chuck Pease, then acting city administrator, who brought the matter to the mayor's attention.

Road Commission Discusses Budget

By PAULA HOLMES

The proposed 1977 Charlevoix County Road Commission budget reflects a 20 percent increase over last year's budget.

The road commission briefly discussed the proposed $15.3 million budget during a public hearing at its monthly meeting Monday.

Irv Sturm, county engineer-director, explained that the large increase over last year's $12.5 million budget was due to the road commission's decision to make use of federal road funds available for construction and maintenance of county roads.

Sturm said the road commission would be receiving additional federal funds this year as are other road commissions. And he explained that in the past the road commission had endeavored on a program where it did not use all of the federal funds available to it and that this year the commission would be using these funds.

The increase in federal funds amounts to about $120,000 in this year's budget.

The road commission budget has not been finalized because the commission is still consulting with various townships about road construction projects they are planning for the year. Also the budget is revised quarterly as the road commission receives its Michigan Motor Vehicle Highway Fund checks.

The checks, which are based on a percentage of the license plate fees and gasoline sales tax collection, vary each quarter and the road commission adjusts its budget to reflect the change in the motor vehicle fund checks.

However, according to the proposed budget, the road commission estimates it will spend $133,000 in primary road construction contracts and $41,000 in primary road maintenance contracts.

Another $42,000 will be spent on local construction contracts and $11,000 on local maintenance contracts.

The commission is also anticipating paying $550,000 on labor and fringe benefits, $200,000 on equipment expense, another $200,000 on road materials and $150,000 on capital outlay.

Administrative expenses are expected to amount to $36,000 and cash on hand and accounts payable at the end of 1977 are expected to be about $60,000.

The road commission is expecting to receive approximately $100,000 for engineering costs through Act 51 highway funds and another $35,000 for snow removal from the state. The commission also expects to receive $500,000 for primary roads from the motor vehicle fund and $270,000 for local roads from the fund.

Federal aid funds are expected to amount to $109,000 and CETA funds for commission employees are expected to amount to $29,000. Truckline maintenance funds are expected to total $183,000 and interest earned will reach $1,000.

The commission is also expecting to receive contributions from the townships for road construction amounting to $125,000 this year minus its revenues.

Planning Department to Study County Numbering

A county-wide numbering system is one of the projects the Charlevoix County Planning Commission is considering undertaking during 1977.

Barbara Fels, of the planning department, briefly discussed the project with the planning commissioners last week. Mrs. Fels said she had been in contact with Consumers Power Company and that the company has agreed to send her the numbering grid it uses to locate homes in the county.

She also talked with the Post Office and they have agreed to help the county with the numbering project.

Mrs. Fels told the commission that county-wide numbering system had many advantages to county residents. A complete numbering system will make homes easier to locate for fire and police protection. The system will also help mail carriers deliver the mail and in general will make people easier to locate.

City Skating Rinks Open

The skating rink located on Carpenter Avenue at May Street at the south end of Charlevoix High school parking lot is open for use, according to Dwight Boss, city recreational director.

Hours at the rink are from 3 p.m. to 6 p.m. and 6 until 9:30 p.m. daily Monday through Friday and from 1 until 5 and 6 until 9:30 p.m. Saturday and Sunday. The latter schedule will also be in effect when school is not in session.

The rink, located at Carpenter and May sts. for first time, is 250 ft. by 250 ft. in size.

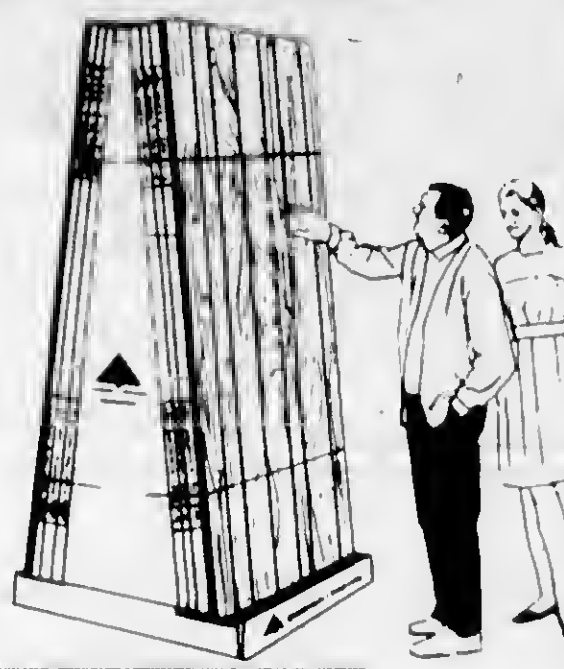

Figure skating will be taught at the rink every Thursday afternoon. Those who have not registered for the classes may do so by signing up at the rink at 3 p.m. Thursday. The classes will be given for one-half hour every Thursday for 12 weeks. Nancy Cumberland is the instructor.

Charlevoix Resident Active In Civil Service Study

By PAULA HOLMES

As scores of people across the nation read Jack Anderson's column last week on a study of the Civil Service Commission and its misuse by the Nixon administration, little did they know of the part a Charlevoix resident played in the investigation.

Gordon Freedman, Jr., a staff member of the House Subcommittee on Manpower and Civil Service, worked as the primary investigator on the study and co-authored the report.

"I had been a staff member of the Senate Watergate Committee," Freedman, 25, explained during a recent telephone interview. "And it was while I was working with that committee that I uncovered some documents relating to the civil service investigation."

The documents, called the Malek White House manual, contained the blueprint for politicizing the federal merit system during the Nixon administration.

"Following the completion of the Watergate investigation, I returned to the Michigan State University," Freedman said. "People involved with the civil service study called me and asked if I would help put the investigation together."

"That was January 1975," he continued. "I spent a lot of time flying back and forth coordinating things then I was hired fulltime to work on the investigation in August."

During the investigation Freedman and other staff members interviewed more than 100 government employees, read and studied the documents of many agencies, and held nine sets of hearings on Capitol Hill.

Freedman said the report had already created some changes in the way the civil service commission is being operated.

"The chairman of the commission (Robert Hampton), who has held that position for 14 years, has said that he will not seek reappointment," the young investigator said.

Also, the investigation has spurred the commission to investigate itself, he said. Freedman thinks studies like the one on the civil service commission are good, too, because they make the people aware of the waste that's going on in government.

The investigator thinks the study will be used by the new administration and that more changes will come about.

No Room for Gripping After This Election

It was a sad moment for the City of Charlevoix last week when election officials announced there would be no primary election.

Was it because the city could not afford to hold an election? Or was it because of a long extended weather forecast that predicted that everyone would be snowed in so much, there would be only emergency transportation available?

No, it simply was because there was no interest.

We wish we could say that this was the first time that Charlevoix has experienced a no-contest election, but unfortunately it is not.

This editorial is not to criticize the candidates who did file their petitions because we feel that they should be commended for being willing again to serve our local government.

Our unhappiness is with the hundreds of other local residents who have again decided not to become involved in city government.

Government can only be as good as the people that are running it and we are sorry to see that Charlevoix residents will not have competition in the primary.

Even though it is easier to say that the present city officials are doing the job to our satisfaction, there is nothing that makes an elected official more accountable to his constituency than competition for his office.

Races in local elections also help a candidate evaluate himself because an election is a time when a politician has to get out and hear what his voters are looking for and wanting.

Charlevoix residents will not have the opportunity in this primary election to re-evaluate their elected officials. Nor will elected officials have a chance to get out and sell themselves to their public.

Similarly, Charlevoix residents will have no right to complain about city government because they have not been willing to take an active role in determining that government this year.

We hope this is the last time that the Charlevoix Courier will have to report that Charlevoix city elections have been cancelled due to lack of interest.

Give Your Lungs the Break They Deserve. Celebrate Nonsmokers Week

This is National Smoking Education Week. The seven days have been dedicated to the theme "Help yourself—help a friend," according to the Michigan Lung Association.

The association is trying to insure that awareness and enforcement of the new Michigan laws protecting the rights of the nonsmoker do not go up in a puff of smoke. Nonsmokers are being asked to help their friends by letting them know what the new laws mean. Smokers can cooperate by complying with signs asking for no smoking in certain public places.

It has been 13 years since the first Surgeon General's report linked cigarette smoking with major health problems such as cancer, heart and lung disease. It has only been in the last four years that the effects of smoking on the nonsmoker have been studied.

It has been found that smoke from the burning end of a cigarette contains higher concentrations of harmful substances than the smoke inhaled by the smoker, twice as much tar and nicotine, five times as much carbon monoxide and forty-six times as much ammonia.

Carbon monoxide levels in some poorly ventilated smoke-filled rooms have been found to exceed levels considered safe in industry and above the levels permitted by regulation of the Environmental Protection Agency.

During this week all people, smokers and nonsmokers alike, should learn about the four new Michigan laws which regulate smoking in hospitals, nursing homes, restaurants and grocery stores. The hospital and nursing home bills took effect immediately when they were passed last year. The other two bills become effective April 1.

The new law affecting grocery stores and supermarkets restricts smoking to designated areas that are isolated from the retail food area for staff and the public. The new law regulating restaurants provides that a restaurant with a seating capacity of 50 or more has to designate a nonsmoking section at the request of a patron.

None of us would wish friends to live in an area of the country that is filled with air pollution, yet many of us, through smoking, create an environment that is just as unhealthy.

In order to protect the rights and the health of us all—we must cooperate with the new laws since the burden of their enforcement is largely with the private citizen.

We can all live in a better environment and breathe easier if we follow the laws and think of our neighbors.

LISTEN TO THE TAXPAYER

Clockwise

by Bob Clock

Turn back the clock to the darkened bedrooms of your childhood and feel the cold fingers on your spine as you and your siblings exchange "ghost stories" before going to sleep. "I'm coming up one step, I'm coming up two steps, I'm walking down the hall."

The stories varied according to the architecture of the house, but in the end some wretched, disoriented child was always snatched up by a specter from the other world.

Of course, we knew our bedtime tales were make-believe. In fact we made most of them up ourselves. But I think that deep down inside many of us nourished secret little doubts about the phantoms we conjured from the grave. Were they really figments of our imagination, or is it possible that spirits of the dead actually do roam this earth?

When we were older, we read about hoodlums and his seances and his promise to send a message from the great beyond. We laughed, because when you are a teen it is smart to be cynical.

Still later when we began to lose those who were close to us, the cynicism was tempered by lingering doubts. One has only to view the remains of a loved one at a funeral home to realize that the body and the spirit are totally separate entities, neither one less real than the other. It is the realization that the spirit is not in the casket too that makes grief bearable.

Up until recently, there were things that one didn't discuss in public for fear of being regarded as a lunatic. But those days are fast drawing to a close, thanks to a growing cadre of highly respected medical doctors, nurses, and others who attend the dying who report that there does indeed seem to be a separation of the spirit from the body at the time of death.

And their best testimony comes from the "dead" themselves—those victims of disease and accident who are clinically dead, but who through a fluke of nature return to this mortal coil for another fling at life. Still other reports have come from the lips of persons who were only minutes or seconds away from death.

What has startled the medical profession into a serious study of the phenomena are the striking similarities between the "hallucinations" of their dying patients. The victim often hears himself pronounced dead and hears a loud ringing or buzzing noise, accompanied by movement through a long, dark tunnel. Then suddenly he is outside his body, looking on as a spectator at frantic efforts to revive him. Suddenly, he is surrounded by the spirits of dead relatives and friends. Often he is confronted by a bright light and asked non-verbally to evaluate his life, while watching an instant replay of his highlights.

All in all it's a rather pleasant experience, and many report a feeling of disappointment when they must return to the land of the living because their time has not yet come.

Will the medical profession ever be able to come up with scientific data to substantiate its new suspicions about the nature of death? I doubt it. The evidence must remain circumstantial, although it apparently is growing in volume and impressiveness every day. If it is safe to assume that the world's great religions will assess the new evidence very carefully, since the idea of life-after-death is basic to many of them, including Christianity, I would not be surprised if many Bible stories grew out of experiences such as those encountered by Dr. Raymond A. Moody Jr. in his new book, "Life After Life."

Spiritualism, which has been treated with raised eyebrows for generations, certainly will gain new stature in light of the recent disclosures. The theory of reincarnation also is supported by the new evidence, since it holds that spirits can and do move from one plane to another and back again—throughout history.

And what about ghost stories? Could they be true? Golly, I'm sorry you asked.

Letters to the editor

Injustice Should be Exposed

Dear Editor:

Re: Lack of Legal Democracy in Charlevoix Area

It was with sorrow and joy that I read your exposure of legal problems in Charlevoix-legal and moral. I am sorry for the parties involved in the episode. But joyous that the lack of legal justice in Charlevoix has finally been exposed. The Nixon Type of Cover-up must be stopped everywhere. I am sure that I am only one of many that feel certain that the attitude of a few people in national, state and local levels is that Justice is only for those who have prestige, political clout, proper profit sharing, legal or illegal or have some emotional ties with a member of the legal fraternity, moral or immoral. The common people receive the crumbs, if any, of justice and notoriety without mercy.

I'm sure many people, of various groups, will condemn you for this exposure. Even though I do not always agree with your Editorials—as such as increasing the salaries of judges—nor do I believe that the public has the right to know "all," nevertheless, I must stand up and be counted in defending your right and duty to expose injustice to the public. This is different from just writing a gossip column.

I congratulate you for your courage in exposing what appears to be a politically entrenched judge. He may well cite you for contempt of court and force you to spend time in jail. Newsman have been so punished recently.

If the facts are correct, as you report them to the public, the judge appears to have joined in collusion with two attorneys to protect a key person in one of his own corporate interests. The facts, as you present them, speak loud and clear.

I would remind your readers that any judge that will misuse authority, as exposed in your paper, might well join in collusion with other attorneys to deny real justice to people who might sue a person involved with him financially, such as a Title Ins. Co., a law and order fraternal brother or a political friend and financial supporter. Fair judgement in moral cases and complaints might also be suspect.

Having served as a township supervisor after retiring I am aware of many of the legal bureaucratic changes that have been made that have destroyed every justice and voting power of the common citizen. I could make many suggestions for equality but I will remind your readers of one that I have been making for years. Return the cornerstone of democracy to the local township precinct—especially by electing a non-politically affiliated judge and jury in each local area with complete authority to judge all local cases with common sense, common law, common decency (local accepted standards of conduct) and compassion. Real justice would be handed by the right of appeal to a higher court with attorneys and a political judge.

This court would preserve the right of the public to know—perhaps too much. In closing may I remind all concerned that our Heavenly Father is also the Judge of all of us. May He give His mercy to our community.

Happy New Year,
Rev. Robert H. Moore

Do you ever get the feeling that life is a parade and you're standing behind Bill Russell?

While I was watching television the other night, a commercial came on about a shower nozzle that massaged your entire body with four different sprays. The bathes twisted and squealed with such delight that I sat forward in my chair to see what was turning her on.

Finally, she flipped her head and whispered huskily, "Have a GOOD time with your water spray."

I shrugged and figured there was a woman who could make a party out of a tax audit and forgot it.

During the next break, a commercial came on of a man so beat I thought he was going to expire before my eyes. All he had tried was a shower, jet travel, and baking from scratch. Maybe all I needed to create some excitement was a shower spray to sweep me off my feet.

I took 45 minutes for my son to relinquish the bath room to me. The steam opened up pores that had been closed for repairs. Turning on the spigot caused the shower to drench my head in water as he had forgotten to push down the plunger. The soap was in a liquid form in the soap dish. A bottle of shampoo without a lid spilled onto my feet. The spray was at eye level and knocked me into the wall.

I don't think showers will ever replace volleyball.

I love my wife

suddenly. The only way I could dull the pain was to turn my head as far right as possible, and press my chin firmly into the palm of my right hand. I had to forget that my mother taught me never to put my elbow on the table, or die. Unfortunately, my wife was sitting on my left. And there were several people who knew us in the restaurant.

"You haven't looked at me even once since we sat down," my wife said. "People will think you hate me."

"I don't care what people think, I love you," I said.

My wife didn't hear me, but a waitress walking by on my right did. "I am not your waitress," she said. She obviously wondered why I was making love to her, a stranger, while chewing egg foo yung and holding my chin in my hand.

The clincher came two days later, when no one would believe I wasn't holding a grudge because of wet socks. My wife was suddenly sicker than my back was sore. By phone, a doctor we'd never seen told us to speed to a hospital we'd never seen—Providence, in Southfield.

Her treatment was completed in about 5 hours, so a nurse phoned for me at home. I wasn't there. She phoned my office, and I wasn't there, either.

The nurse explained to the switchboard girl that my poor wife was prone and weak in the hospital, unable to fend for herself, and needed her husband. My co-workers agreed they had no idea where I was. Probably some bar.

What manner of rat-husband is it who would leave his wife to languish inside a coffin-sized cubicle, shrouded by curtains and surrounded by the terrible screams of unfortunate people who have just learned their illness is not covered by Blue Cross?

It is bad enough that he would threaten to kill her, and would refuse to look at her when they dined together in a restaurant. How can socks get so wet that wet. The nurse finally found me by looking in the waiting room where I had been sitting for 5 hours, reading a five-month-old Reader's Digest and watching people blow smoke at the "We-Thank-You-For-Not-Smoking signs."

I would never abandon my wife in a hospital. I don't hate her, even if I do squish when I walk. I want the world to know I love her, and only her.

That thing with the waitress on my right is mere infatuation.

This time of year, when personal property such as boats or furniture were included in the sale.

COURIER: You do some assessing, don't you?

BLANCHARD: Only for five units that don't have certified assessors—Norwood, Pease, St. James, and South Arm Townships, and the City of East Jordan.

COURIER: What is a certified assessor?

BLANCHARD: One who has passed a state examination on assessing property.

COURIER: What else does your department do?

BLANCHARD: As mentioned above, we gather historical information and analyze it. People create values by buying and selling. We only measure them. Our department also works with assessors, helping them with difficult situations. We get a lot of taxpayers in our office. We explain to them how assessing works. Usually they want to know if their neighbors are assessed at the same level they are. We are also completing a complete appraisal, started in 1962, of all property in the county for a card system. We have completed 14 townships and are now working on the last township and Boyne City. Once this work is completed, each unit can have a copy just for the cost of recording, so they will get the zeros at a very small fraction of actual cost. Of course, it will be up to the assessors to maintain the card system. The two girls in the front office keep busy with people-traffic and making name and address changes and updating maps showing splits of property. We have drawn up complete maps for the entire county. The office is open to the public and we wish they would use it.

COURIER: There are rumors that property taxes will increase as much as 25 percent next year. Is this true?

BLANCHARD: No. These rumors make me unhappy.

There will probably be an increase of about 7 1/2 percent, from what I can see from my equalization studies, based on appraisals of individual pieces of property compared with assessments. I don't like misinformation getting around to people. I believe in the philosophy that people should know, but they should get the correct information. An individual's taxes could possibly go up 25 percent but if they do, that individual hasn't been carrying his fair share and has been assessed too low. However, any increase is not my job. It is up to the Board of Commissioners and I have no idea what they will do this spring.

COURIER: What will happen if the Commissioners do not apply the increase?

BLANCHARD: The State Tax Commission would add to the county total and it would be divided among the units according to the way the commissioners equalize the county. However, it is my job to recommend the correct percentage of county total for each unit.

COURIER: Why is there so much more criticism of property taxes than there is of other taxes?

BLANCHARD: Probably because they are levied at the local level and people feel they "can make their voices heard. However, all studies show that there is no support to transfer them to a higher level. It should also be remembered that, contrary to what some people believe, none of the property tax goes to the state. It is all spent at the local level. Property taxes provide a sound and stable base for supporting local government and institutions. It should also be pointed out that property taxes are no longer as much of a burden since legislation passed in 1973 gives property tax relief on Michigan income tax returns, based on ability to pay. (For further information on this legislation, see story elsewhere in paper.)

County Spends $32,241 on Court Appointed Attorneys

The cost of justice these days includes not only the costs of paying judges and prosecutors and the costs of maintaining the courts, but the cost of court-appointed attorneys.

Last year, $32,241.28 was paid to attorneys appointed by Charlevoix County courts, $19,357.77 for Circuit Court, $14,883.51 for District Court, and $7,999.63 for Probate (including Juvenile) Court. District Judge David W. Ferber explains that everyone brought to court who needs an attorney, but who is financially indigent must, by law, be furnished one at the expense of the county. Also, some who are not financially indigent but who do not have enough ready cash are furnished attorneys but ordered to repay the court on an "installment" basis.

Many people represent themselves in the misdemeanor cases in District Court, but in the felony cases in Circuit Court, it is more important that defendants have legal representation because of the nature of the cases, which are more complicated and more serious.

The installment paybacks amounted to $5,011 last year, bringing the total cost of court-appointed attorneys down to $27,230.28. Of this amount, $2,602 was repaid to Circuit Court and $2,400 to District Court.

Western Noses Get Rubbed in Michigan Snow

By TOM DAMMANN

Readers of the Denver (Colorado) POST were somewhat disgruntled on the first Sunday of 1977 to find an advertisement placed in the paper by the West Michigan Tourist Association.

"Our squirrels were right," the ad read, "We're up to our ears in snow."

The snow, which has been falling pretty regularly since the first of the year, has been a real boon to the ski resorts in the state.

The result has Michigan winter resort areas chortling with glee.

"The boom we're in right now is unbelievable," says West Michigan Tourist Association, which placed the ad in the POST. "We've more and better snow than ever before for the first seven weeks of the season. It's been a great shot in the arm for the snowmobilers too."

"Ski resorts are running as much as 42 percent ahead of last year and last year was a record year," Tebeau said in a telephone interview.

"Boone County slopes had the best Christmas-New Years Week in the 30-year history of the county," Howard Erickson, company spokesperson, said. "And we're still going great guns. We've had an overall business increase of 15 percent since we opened on Thanksgiving."

Erickson said people came in campers and motor homes and stayed in the resort parking lots because there were no rooms to be had.

Doris Sarns, owner-operator of Nub's Nub at Harbor Springs, said that the week after the holidays is holding up better than ever before and the rest of the season looks real good.

Here in Charlevoix there wasn't a motel room to be had during the holidays.

Tom Hollow, President of the First State Bank of Charlevoix, tells of one client who rented his three-bedroom home for $80 a day.

"And the renters agreed to take care of the dog," Hollow said.

Ann Peterson Marries Max Davis at St. Marys

Ann Peterson and Max Davis, U.S. Coast Guard, exchanged their wedding vows at a ceremony solemnized at St. Mary's church Saturday afternoon.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Peterson of Charlevoix and Mr. and Mrs. Chester Davis of Bald Knob, Arkansas.

The Rev. R. Dale Magoon officiated at the double ring service in the presence of 80 guests. Arrangements of white rums and pink carnations graced the altar for the ceremony. Mrs. Brenda LaBlanc, of the organ, played a program of traditional music including "We've Only Just Begun" and "Love Story" and the wedding march and recessional.

The bride, escorted to the altar by her father, chose a gown of white polyester knit for her wedding. Fashioned with the empire waist, the V-neckline and long sleeves of the gown were accented with Victorian lace, seed pearls and sequins. The full skirt fell to a ruffle at the hemline. A headpiece of the Victorian lace secured her lace-trimmed nuptial veil. She carried a bridal bouquet of white carnations and pink roses.

Mrs. Fred Sommerfeld served as her mother of honor and her sister, Sue Peterson, as bridesmaid. They wore identical empire gowns of beige print styled with long sleeves and matching head-dresses made by Mary Russell. Each carried two long-stemmed pink carnations tied with matching streamers.

Thomas Koerner assisted the bridegroom as best man. Ronald Signs was groom man. Both are stationed of the Charlevoix Coast Guard Station. Jon and Matt Peterson, brothers of the bride, seated the guests.

Mrs. Peterson selected a full-length print skirt, forest green blazer and matching green blouse for her daughter's wedding. Mrs. Davis, mother of the bridegroom, wore an aqua skirt with matching sweater and blazer.

A reception, hosted by the bride's parents, followed at the Weatheravene Inn. Jackie Russell cut the wedding cake. Debbie Peterson tended the guest book.

After a wedding trip to southern Michigan, the couple will be at home at 1014 Alameda st.

Wedding guests were present from Michigan, Arkansas and Hawaii. The bride-elect is a graduate of Charlevoix High School and attended Central Michigan University and Northwestern Michigan College. She is presently employed at the Charlevoix Agency, Inc.

Her fiancé graduated from Boyne City High School and is stationed with the United States Navy in Orlando, Florida.

The bridegroom's parents hosted a rehearsal dinner at the Weatheravene Inn on Friday evening.

First State Bank Contributes to Radio

The proposed public broadcasting FM radio station got a boost from Charlevoix recently.

Louis Hollow, president of the First State Bank of Charlevoix, announced that the bank had contributed to the radio fund.

As part of the bank's continued involvement in community affairs, we are pleased to join others who through their contributions are helping Central Michigan University in the development of expanded FM broadcasting for northern Michigan.

January Birthstone

Garnet, a gemstone that comes from nature in several colors including orange, red, purple, and green, the dark red garnet is the most popular and commonly used color for the January birthstone.

In early times this color of garnet was referred to as a carbuncle, from the blood red color. Some Alaskan tribes have even used garnets as bullets, believing that this blood-colored stone would inflict a more deadly wound than lead.

Such bullets were used by the Kavalonians in 1872, during their hostilities with the British troops on the Kavalon Peninsula. Many of these precious missiles have been preserved to this day as curiosities.

Home Grown Orchids Bring Beauty in Winter

By PAULA HOLMES

In the midst of one of the snowiest winters in Charlevoix in recent history, Elsa Harkonen is enjoying some of the advantages of the more tropical states like Florida and the Hawaiian Islands.

Mrs. Harkonen has succeeded in getting an orchid plant to bloom in her living room. And while the snow and ice lick at her apartment window, she is safe inside enjoying the beauty of the fragile flower.

The plant, which she received from some local residents in late October, has produced five lavender-colored, ruffled-petaled blossoms. And it appears the plant will be flowering from another stem, which promises to produce as many blossoms within the month.

"I've been interested in plants for the last couple of years," Mrs. Harkonen said. "I haven't had much luck until lately."

"I like a challenge and the orchids have been one," she said. "People ask me why I don't go to Florida and see the orchids growing there, but that isn't any challenge."

The grandmothers said she gave the plant tender loving care to make it grow. That included watering the plant every four days to one week, misting the plants every day to keep the humidity up, running a grow light for 12 to 15 hours a day, and feeding it fish emulsion fertilizer every so often.

She also watches the temperature of her apartment, keeping it at 70 degrees during the day and at 65 at night, and she makes sure the humidity is high enough for the plants. She keeps two bowls of water near the plants under the grow light to keep the humidity high.

Mrs. Harkonen also waters her plants in an unusual way. She completely immerses the plant in water.

"I wait until the plant is completely dry and then I make sure it is watered completely," she said explaining her method. "It may take up to one-half hour to water the bigger plants."

She cautioned people against over watering their plants and she suggested that they wait to water the plants until they are completely dry.

Mrs. Harkonen also takes time to talk to her plants each day.

"It's important to talk to them," she said. "It helps them grow."

And she says that if you listen and watch closely, the plants might talk back to you. In addition to the flowering orchid plant, Mrs. Harkonen has two other orchids, a Leaf of Life plant, ivy, Hoya, Egyptian Beauty, Hawaiian Tye, lemon tree and a tomato and strawberry plant.

She is also plant sitting four plants for a neighbor, while she is on vacation.

"The plants certainly brighten up the room don't they," a visitor remarked to Mrs. Harkonen.

"They brighten up my life," she replied.

Tie for First in League

Varsity Defeats Gaylord

By FRANK MARTIN

The Charlevoix Rayders posted a 87-80 win over Gaylord on the latter's floor Friday night to retain a share of first place in the Michigan-Huron Shores league.

The lead is shared with Boyne City after the Ramblers beat Rogers City 51-47 in an overtime game and Petoskey lost to St. Ignace 58-52.

The Rayders had to come from behind to win after trailing 19-8 at the quarter and 35-25 at halftime. However, as the second half got underway, Pat Schaefer made a mid-court steal early in the period to break a 37-37 tie and the Rayders were on their way as they poured in 28 points to eight for the Blue Devils to take a 53-43 third period advantage.

Gaylord came back strong in the final period and with 4:50 remaining, trimmed the Rayders lead to one point. Personal fouls by Gaylord sent the Rayders to the free throw line where they connected on 8 of 11 attempts plus three buckets for the win.

Scott Boss paced the game with 26 points. Matt Doan added 12 points, Bud Klooster and Schaefer 10 each, Dave Tollas four, Brian Williams three and Kip Cinnamon two to account for the Rayders' 27 field goals and 13 of 18 free throws. They had 18 personal fouls.

Scott Rich led the attack for Gaylord with 20 points followed by Jerry Sorenson with 17 as their team scored 26 field goals and eight of 19 free throws attempts while collecting 14 personal fouls.

Boards Made Difference In Rayder-Petoskey Game

The Charlevoix Rayders defeated the Petoskey Northmen by a decisive 80-43 score Tuesday night and, by virtue of the win, moved into a first place tie with the Northmen and the Boyne City Ramblers with a record of five wins and one loss in Michigan Huron Shores league play.

"It was the boards that made the difference," Coach Dave Moyer said of the victory over his alma mater, the first since he took over as court coach.

He went on to say that he realized Petoskey was without two of its regulars who were on the injured list but added that he didn't think they would have made that much difference in the game.

Neither team was playing its best brand of ball. The Rayders were able to control the boards but connected on only 37 percent of their shots from the floor. Petoskey, on the other hand, connected on only 27 percent of its shots.

The Rayders moved into an 18-10 first period advantage and continued to lead 31-21 at halftime and 40-32 at the three-quarter point before outscoring the visitors 20-9 for the wide spread at the final horn.

Mike Doctor had 14 points and Keith Nickerson 11 for the Northmen.

Charlevoix had 26 field goals and eight of 15 free throw attempts. Petoskey had 19 from the floor and seven of 10 from the line.

Jerry Skippergosh set a new scoring record for the season as he poured in 39 points to lead County State Bank to a 63-57 win over Bay Shore Steel who played the entire game with only four players.

The Steelers, after trailing 16-12; 34-28 and 47-44 by quarters, knotted the score 55-

The Charlevoix JV team suffered its first loss of the season last week at the hands of the Petoskey JV's, losing by a slim 46-45 margin.

Charlevoix trailed as much as 10 points in the game before closing the gap as time ran out.

Petoskey led 15-14 at the quarter; 31-21 at halftime and 39-33 at the three-quarter mark before the Rayders came on strong in the last eight minutes to outscore the visitors 12-8 and cut the winning margin to one point.

The Rayders lost the game on the free throw line, connecting on only one of eight attempts after outscoring Petoskey 22-21 in the field goal department. Petoskey was successful on four of 10 attempts.

Pat Schmidt had 14 points for Charlevoix with Bob Drost adding nine; Barney Way, Kevin Kratt and Gilbert Nolrot six each and Doug Huday four points.

Eric Swenor who put in the winning points had 18 for the game.

Gaylord JVs Win, 50-46

The Charlevoix JV's dropped their second game in a week Friday when they lost to Gaylord by a score of 50-46.

A surge by the young Blue Devils late in the game when they overcame a 39-35 deficit by outscoring the visitors 15-8 cost them the victory.

Though the young Rayders outscored their hosts 23-22 from the floor, the Blue Devils went to the free throw line to pick up the winning points by connecting on six of 21 attempts. The Rayders, on the other hand, missed all five attempts. Charlevoix had 19 personal fouls to nine for Gaylord.

The Rayders had jumped to a 18-8 first period lead, held on by three points 28-25 at halftime and 38-35 at the three quarter mark before Gaylord found the target and poured in 15 points to take the game.

Pat Schmidt had 18 points; Kevin Kratt, eight; Barney Way and Gilbert Nolrot, six each; Bob Drost, four, Todd Williams and Bob Plum, two each for Charlevoix. Bob Lewis had 18 and Don Fleming 12 for Gaylord.

Two teams played to an 8-8 first period tie before the young Northmen edged ahead 18-13 at halftime and 29-15 going into the final period. The young Rayders outscored their hosts 15-12 in the last eight minutes but their efforts came too late as they ended up on the short end of the score.

Zoning Amendment Step In Right Direction

The Charlevoix Common Council should be commended for adopting the Site Plan Development Amendment to the Zoning Ordinance at a recent council meeting.

When running a city, just like when running any business, it is important to keep operational methods up to date. Once the rules under which a city or a business is operating get out of date, it is hard to keep things running smoothly.

This is the ease with the current city zoning ordinance. The more than 40-year-old law is grossly out of step with modern zoning throughout the state and the nation.

We have become one of the fastest growing areas in the nation and we have witnessed an influx of businesses and residents within the last few years that have led to a lot of development in our fair city.

However, in many cases our zoning ordinance was not adequate. The ordinance was not equipped to deal with the new ideas presented by developers and the city fathers found their hands were tied when they tried to do something about the proposed development plans.

The new Site Plan Development Amendment gives council members a chance to review exactly what is going to be built, how it is going to be landscaped, what effects the proposed development might have on neighbors and on the city, and who is financing the development.

There should be no more surprises when it comes to new developments going up in the area. From now on council and city residents will know in advance what the new development will look like and they will have a chance to make constructive comments that will make the developments a welcome addition to the community instead of a despised surprise.

While the Site Plan Development Amendment is not the revamping the city zoning ordinance needs, it is a step in the right direction. It provides the city with additional protection in a time of rapid growth.

We urge the city council to continue working on the proposed new zoning ordinance to keep our city in step with the times and to protect us all.

In Order to Return Government to the People, People Must Participate

This week the 39th President of the United States will be sworn into office.

There has been much pre-ceremony publicity about the inaugural hoopla and about how it will be an inauguration for the people just as President-elect Carter's administration will be one for the people.

Such intentions are quite honorable and noble. It is time that government was returned to the people, many have heard to say in recent months.

But the catch is, do the people want the responsibility of the government that is going to be returned to them? Sure, a few mouth demands for more representation and grass roots decision, but on the whole very few seem interested in participating in government on the local level let alone on the national level.

Unfortunately, it were these same disinterested souls who were among those who yelled the loudest about Watergate or about a decision made by city council that they disagreed with.

In order to make our form of government work the way it was intended to work, the people must take an active interest and they must participate in government on all levels. The job cannot be left to someone else, we all must take a part.

In order to prevent more Watergates, the people must participate. In order to return the government to the people, the people must participate in the government.

At the beginning of this New Year make a resolution to participate.

Letters to the editor

Take a Look at Yourselves, Charlevoix Residents

Dear Editor:

I just read Meet Charlevoix in the paper and didn't really think they were talking about Charlevoix. Where are all these people? I've lived here 10 years and haven't seen any. In the summer you can hardly get on the golf course, and the harbor is full of boats from out of town and out of state. Ski slopes are not too bad but it isn't Pike's Peak you know, and the ice rink is in working order after Dec. 25, with 2 months shot for no reason.

I wish you luck Mr. Sandberg. I for one admire people with good intentions. I hope you do many good things for Charlevoix. It needs it!

And when you start asking questions about things please ask these for me. Why can't you find one person that doesn't gossip about his neighbor?

Why can't we have a good school system, with the taxes we pay? Why don't they have the high school students build a youth center instead of houses, and help the kids on drugs have something to do and somewhere to go. The Charlevoix Community is full of it.

Why does Charlevoix only have time for basketball, football, track, and wrestling?

Why doesn't Charlevoix have one good family restaurant with high chairs instead of high prices?

Signed,
Progress is needed, wanted, and can't be stopped!

State gambling czar Gus Harrison wants more crime, or he'll quit.

Gus should move his office into the rear of a dry cleaning shop, behind a door that won't open unless the clerk pushes a button hidden below the cash register, on the same shelf as his gun.

Harrison is currently paid $36,300 for running Michigan's lottery. He'll soon get a 6 percent raise to $38,280. At the same time, state legislators are getting 36 percent raises to $24,000. Legislators control Harrison's salary.

Gus is miffed. He says a 6 percent hike is insulting, when inflation has been 20 percent. He recently said he likes his job "but if things stay the way they are, the only way I'll be able to improve my medical health and attitude will be to get out."

The same week Harrison was leeching about his pay, he also announced the newest lottery gimmick. Beginning next spring, there will be a daily numbers game paying at least $50 to 1.

"The new game comes closer to anything we've probably done," said Dave Hanson, one of Harrison's aides. "Close isn't good enough. If Harrison wants to become as rich as Edward G. Robinson in 1930 movie, he should quit playing football with the law. He should operate like a total crook.

Harrison's new game will be competing directly with the illegal numbers racket. He can expect trouble, and he should prepare for it. For instance, he should order state troopers to install running boards on all patrol cars. This will facilitate getaways and make it possible for troopers to shoot up first finding a parking space.

Many numbers players rely on "dream books" to help them get lucky. The books interpret dreams in terms of numbers; if you dream of lions, for instance, the book might tell you to bet 416 because that's how many years it will be before Bill Ford fires Russ Thomas.

Harrison should publish the Michigan Lottery Dream Book. To justify the expenditure of public funds, the dream interpretations should have social significance. If you dream of Gov. Miliken, you should bet 156 because that's how many years it will be before he looks old enough to be Ronald Reagan's younger brother, the one who never gets the girl.

Gus has been selling lottery tickets at fixed locations. This won't do for the numbers game. The real crooks supply

After suffering through another weekend of sub-zero temperatures and blinding snow squalls, I have come to the conclusion that steps must be taken immediately to preserve the awful memory of the Winter of 1977 in the minds of Charlevoix's young.

After all, if this winter is allowed to pass Scott free, like say the winter of 1966 or the winter of 1974, then all of our efforts to bring it under control will be useless. Furthermore, our young will have learned nothing about coping with such winters. In the dim eventuality that another like it should ever come along.

What I propose is establishments of an organization to be called "The Survivors of Seventy-Seven" (SSS), consisting of Charlevoix residents who actually survive until spring without running off to Ft. Lauderdale or Daytona Beach in a fit of panic.

Of course, we will have to be rather strict about membership of the SSS will lose all of its meaning. Offhand, I would set the residency requirements at between Thanksgiving and Easter, depending at this point on how much snow we get after Easter. I further propose that the federal government enpanel a group of citizens, preferably outsiders who will be largely immune to local pressure groups, to determine who actually resided within the confines of Charlevoix between those two dates.

Once established, the convass will stand forever as the official membership roll of "The Survivors of Seventy-Seven" and hopefully will assume much the same character and exclusiveness as did the Durant Indian Role of the early 1900's. A spot on the roll of membership will be a mark of honor, such as physical stamina, internal fortitude and frostbite which should set the membership apart at once from the leering masses of society.

Furthermore, I propose that every winter, starting in 1978 and continuing until the last member of the SSS has gone to his reward, a festival shall be held in Charlevoix commemorating the winter the lakes froze before Christy-negs. I see the event as a city-wide celebration with members coming from far and wide over in the years to relive the winter of 1977 in story and song.

I think we should meet in an unheated warehouse where we could huddle together and tell each other little stories about how the car wouldn't start for seven mornings in a row. Or about the night the furnace didn't stop running with the thermostat set on 58. Or the night it wouldn't run at all with the temperature at 15 below. Or how all the toilets froze solid at the Episcopal vicarage when the oil tanks ran dry.

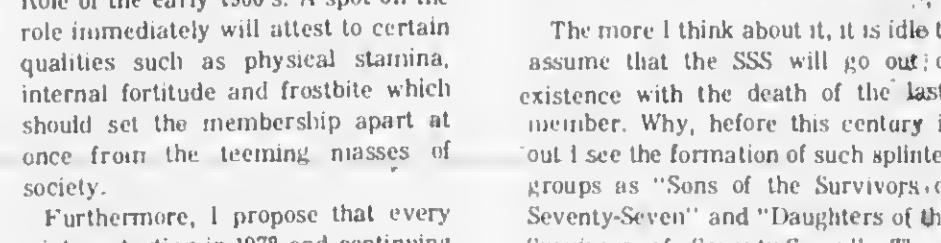

Of course, members of the SSS will deserve special tokens of recognition. Since T-shirts are the rage, I propose we all wear snow-white T-shirts with nothing emblazoned across the front. However, shoulder patches will be in order. I see them taking a variety of shapes, from crossed snow shovels to overdue utility bills.

I suppose we also should have our own handshake expressing contempt for the elements, but I'm not sure exactly what it should be. In any event, it should be performed with a gloved hand.

The SSS could remain in existence for 100 years or longer, with the annual reunions serving as a constant reminder to our progeny that they should never let down their guard against the forces of nature.

In later years, I see this group dwindling to only a handful of highly revered old men and women whose stories about the winter of 1977, like good wine, will improve with age. Maybe the University of Michigan will send a social historian to one of the conventions to put it all down on tape.

The more I think about it, it is idle to assume that the SSS will go out of existence with the death of the last member. Why, before this century is out I see the formation of such splinter groups as "Sons of the Survivors of Seventy-Seven" and "Daughters of the Survivors of Seventy-Seven." There may even be a "Friends of the Survivors of Seventy-Seven," but if it doesn't soon warm up enough to take showers, we may not have any friends left.

Tomorrow, the 39th President of the United States takes office.

There are a lot of things I don't want to know about him.

I don't want to know his golf scores, his tennis scores, his bowling scores or see his spills if he is a skier. (It makes me nervous to see a President fumble a ball on first base.)

I don't want to see his scars if he has had surgery, especially if it involves taking off his necktie.

I don't want to know if he and the First lady share a double bed or go single. (I like to believe that a President's sex life is like that of my biology teacher who had a crush on in the 8th grade—non-existent.)

I don't want to see him stumbling off of Air Force One, or falling asleep during a commencement exercise at which he is the featured speaker.

I don't care what sign he was born under or whether or not he cheated in college. (It's too late to do anything about either one of them.)

I don't care to know what the First Family has for dinner or what they bought one another or where and if they attended church services on Sundays.

I don't want to know about the Men, women who creep into their lives. What I do want to know are the men and women he picks to surround him, his stand on major decisions, his feelings for people, his concern for us and our problems and how he intends to carry out these 35 words that he speaks today:

"I do solemnly swear that I will faithfully execute the office of President of the United States and will to the best of my ability preserve, protect and defend the Constitution of the United States."

That's really all the President owes us.

supported crime would now be going to Lansing to support corruption. That's progress plus riches, all thanks to Gus Harrison. The Legislature would have to be tremendously impressed. Gus would get his 25 percent raise or George Ruff would find out the reason why.

The Legislature would also be wise to appoint an ad hoc committee to study exactly how Harrison accomplished the numbers takeover. It is entirely feasible that his methods could be applied profitably in other areas of government.

Boore, for instance. The state Liquor Control Commission is selling a lot of liquor now. I suppose, but what if the Legislature brought back Prohibition?

The possibility sloughs the mind. State booze salesmen could move in on bootleggers the same way Harrison ate up the numbers crooks. It would be easy.

The trick is simply to do the same things the crooks do, except send George Ruff to Lansing twice a day with a brown paper bag full of cash.

And if that's too hypocritical for your stomach, you too hypotheticals to do business manufacturing runoffs.

Thus all that money which formerly

Meet Charlevoix

...Virginia Nendorf and Dorothy Ward

Some say that the key to good health is exercise, fresh air and sunshine. Two women who can be seen following this advice every morning in sun or rain, sleet or hail are Virginia Nendorf and Dorothy Ward.

This week the sisters agreed to share their thoughts on exercise and health with the Courier.

COURIER: When did you first decide that you would go on a daily exercise plan?

WARD: We started doing this about seven years ago. NENDORF: We started by riding bicycles, then we added swimming and walking.

COURIER: How far do you walk and bicycle?

NENDORF: We bicycle about nine miles a day and in the winter we walk about seven miles a day, both trips take us about an hour. Also in the summer we swim about one-half mile a day.

COURIER: Where do you go?

NENDORF: We bicycle out by the old sugar beet factory and then come in toward town and then go out Lake Shore Drive to the Medusa Cement Plant area. When we walk we go through the Chicago club and around the mountain (Mt. McSaba).

NENDORF: Exercise really does keep you feeling younger then?

NENDORF: Exercise keeps you moving, and that keeps your spirits young. As you grow older you tend to sit and when you do that you get a different outlook on life that's not good.

COURIER: Isn't it bad for your skin to get too much sunshine and wind?

NENDORF: Anyone who says that is crazy. We've been out everyday in all kinds of weather and it hasn't done anything to our skin. We're both in our late 50s and I think we look pretty good.

COURIER: What time of day do you do your exercises?

WARD: We go every morning at 8 if you get up early in the morning, then you feel good all day.

COURIER: What do you do while you're walking?

WARD: We go every morning at 8 if you get up early in the morning, then you feel good all day.

COURIER: How long can you ride bikes before you switch to walking?

NENDORF: We usually ride bikes from April through October or sometimes November when we switch to walking.

WARD: We usually don't start swimming until the end of June and we quit by September.

COURIER: How does the exercise make you feel?

NENDORF: When you get out in the sunshine and feel like a million dollars and you feel like a 16-year-old kid. Also the walking and the bike riding makes you forget about a lot of things in the world and you start thinking about nature instead.

COURIER: Exercise really does keep you feeling younger then?

NENDORF: Exercise keeps you moving, and that keeps your spirits young. As you grow older you tend to sit and when you do that you get a different outlook on life that's not good.

COURIER: Isn't it bad for your skin to get too much sunshine and wind?

NENDORF: Anyone who says that is crazy. We've been out everyday in all kinds of weather and it hasn't done anything to our skin. We're both in our late 50s and I think we look pretty good.

COURIER: What time of day do you do your exercises?

WARD: We go every morning at 8 if you get up early in the morning, then you feel good all day.

WARD: If we have to miss our early morning walk because of a doctor's appointment or something, we usually make it up later in the day.

COURIER: Do you wear any special clothing while walking or biking?

NENDORF: In the winter we wear our snowmobile suits and boots and mittens. In the summer we wear shorts and tennis shoes and of course our swim suits when we go swimming. One summer I wore my bikini while I was hiking. Dorothy wouldn't rule with me then.

WARD: I think she was the talk of the town that year, but she sure did have a beautiful tan.

COURIER: Do you see many people on your walks and bike rides?

NENDORF: I'll say one thing for Charlevoix, it sure is friendly. Everyone we see waves. All the delivery people,

Hays Commission Sets Deadline for Land Use Plan

Due to the "chaotic" and "hodge-podge" zoning in the township, the Hays Township Planning Commission has given top priority to the establishment of a Land Use Plan, which will set guidelines for future development within the township.

The planning commission, which was created last fall, has set itself a June 1 deadline for the completion of the Land Use Plan, according to Lillian Bergmann, chairman of the Planning Commission.

The decision to move rapidly on the development of the Land Use Plan was made at the first meeting of the new seven-member planning commission. The new board is made up of the old zoning board plus three new members appointed by the Hays Township Board.

Mrs. Bergmann said meeting the June 1 deadline is vital because that is when "people are looking around for signs saying, 'Hays Township Zoning In Effect.'" have been posted at the major entrances of the community so would-be property owners could not be misled by realtors saying, "you can do anything you want with your property," the chairman explained.

The planning commission's goals to arrive at a Land Use Plan with maximum participation from township residents, Mrs. Bergmann invited township residents to attend all the planning commission meetings, which will be held on the second Tuesday of each month in the township hall.

The plan will consist of two parts: a Land Use Map and a 26- to 30-page document explaining the map's as well as the process used and questions asked by the planning commission in order to design the map.

Once the plan is designed it will be presented to the township board which will conduct public hearings on the proposed zoning. The township board has the authority to adopt the Land Use Plan as law.

Student Learning Ropes In Equalization Department

Julie Rudolph, a freshman student at DePauw University, is spending the month of January working in the Charlevoix County Equalization Department.

Julie explains that all students at DePauw must devote part of the winter term studying and working at something that might possibly become a career. Presently she is majoring in economics and hopes to do graduate school work in accounting.

A resident of Macomb, Illinois, Julie has been coming to Charlevoix County all her life. Her parents have a cottage at Sequanota, where she has been living during her working experience here.

Does she like the snow? Yes, she does, and she likes to ski, "but there is too much snow now, Julie says.

The Learning Tree

EMERGENCY FOODS FOR THE SNOWBAND

Snowbound? When I was a child I recall stories my elders used to tell about being snowed in for weeks at a time. To my child's mind it sounded adventurous. I could visualize everyone sitting around the fire telling stories and waiting for the roads to be cleared.

Well, that was supposed to be "the good old days" but for some of us this winter seems to be reviving some of those days. One way to make snowbound days a happy experience is to be sure and have an emergency store of food on hand.

With some canned goods, mixes, a can-opener, water and other liquid and some ingenuity, you can live quite comfortably.

Milk—canned or dried—is almost a must, especially if there are children in the family. Canned juices and dry beverage mixes are handy for adding variety.

Juices work well in most mixes and other recipes that call for liquid. Remember, too, that water can be substituted for other liquids in most recipes. The product may not be as tender as when milk is used and the flavor may not be as good but water will work. If the water supply is dependent on electricity, you might want to store some, although this time of year one can melt snow if necessary.

Bread in some form is a necessity—crackers, hardtack, dry cereals. Ingredients with which to make bread, biscuits or pancakes or some of the modern dry mixes for breads, coffee cakes, muffins, biscuits are fine, too. If the power source to the stove isn't disrupted, Always have some foods on hand that would require neither cooking nor heating.

If you can cook, but you are out of eggs and the mix or recipe calls for them, you can leave them out entirely without too much trouble. Or, you can add one teaspoon of baking powder for each egg called for in the packaged mix. Mix it with the dry ingredients and then prepare according to package directions. Increase liquid by about 2 tablespoons for each egg that was omitted.

Your emergency pantry should include main dish foods such as tuna, salmon, corned beef, dried beef, hash, spaghetti and meat balls.

Other foods on the emergency shelf should include any special food needed for baby or other family members.

It's a good idea to have some emergency cooking apparatus around too. This could be a charcoal grill but be sure to cook with it in the open air. If your house has a wood-burning fireplace, you're all set.

You can cook directly over the wood or set up any kind of cooking apparatus in the fireplace area where you have ventilation. Popping corn, roasting marshmallows and grilling hot dogs in the fireplace are activities that will provide food as well as entertainment for the small fry. So much so that they may even look forward to the next power outage.

Two Patrols Attend Gaylord Klondike Derby

Two patrols of Boy Scout Troop 11 were among the 250 Scouts and their leaders representing 250 scout troops and three Webelos dens attending the annual Northern District Boy Scout Klondike Derby at Gaylord Saturday.

The Owl Patrol placed second and the Wolverine Patrol third.

The Klondike Derby is a day-long, competitive event where patrols test their scouting skills against all other patrols in a wide range of skills. Stations include map and compass, first aid, fire building, knots and lashings and ice rescue. The Scouts are also judged on preparedness and the shape of their Klondike sleds. Scoring is based on a maximum of 10 points per station (six) or a total of 70 points. The igloo building contest is separate from the skill stations and has proven to be one of the most popular events of the Derby.

Belhairs was the overall winner in the 1977 Klondike Derby. They win the right for the traveling trophy for a year and first chance to host the 1978 Derby.

The two Charlevoix patrols were the Owl and the Wolverine patrols. The membership of the Owl patrol was composed of Kevin Whitley, patrol leader, David Budy, Dan Budy, Jim Landman and Tim Young and the Wolverine patrol of William Banger, patrol leader, Tim May, Mike Paul, Steve Young and Joe Smith. Accompanying the patrols were Scoutmaster Louis Edwards, John Houting, Assistant Scoutmaster, and Steve Schuch and Mitch Martin, Leadership, Corps members.

Fishing--Fun in Winter, Too

By PAULA HOLMES
On these cold winter days when the wind comes roaring off of Lake Michigan and the temperature bottoms out in the subzero range, it seems like a perfect time to cozy up to a nice warm fire.

But for some people, snuggling up to a fire is the last thing on their minds. These hardy souls pull on their warmest winter garb and trek out to the nearest lake for some of that winter sport-ice fishing.

As soon as the lakes look sufficiently frozen over, towns of fish shanties spring up on the inland lakes and curls of smoke dot the skies.

What drives people to brave the weather for the sport?

"I don't know, I guess I just like to fish—even in the winter," Al Shindorf, an avid summer and winter fisherman, responded.

"I have pan fished all my life during the winter and in the last three years I have gotten into spearing," he said. "I enjoy it all."

and when Shindorf says he likes to fish, he's not kidding. The school teacher has two fish shanties that he visits nearly every day and sometimes twice a day.

"I set two shanties, one on Lake Charlevoix for spearing season and the other one on Torch Lake for pan fish," he explained. "After spearing season I will move the shanty on Lake Charlevoix to one of the smaller lakes."

If you are planning to fish as much as Shindorf does, he recommends building a warm shanty.

"It is almost impossible to enjoy ice fishing if you get cold," the fisherman grined. "And if you are going to fish all day, the trick to staying warm is the shanty."

Shindorf suggested that ice fishermen construct their shanties out of light weight materials.

"You should make the fish shanty as light as possible so that it can be easily moved," Shindorf said. "I have a sled to move my shanties on, but if they were any heavier it would be difficult to move them by myself."

The Norwood Township resident suggested using 2 by 4 pieces of wood instead of 2 by 6 pieces. He also recommended insulating the shanty with closed-cell styrofoam and heating it with a bottle gas heater.

Shindorf has found that closed-cell styrofoam is lighter and collects less moisture than the open-cell styrofoam. While he has one shanty heated with fuel oil and one with bottle gas he highly recommends the bottle gas heater.

"The bottle gas is cleaner and more efficient," the fisherman explained.

Once you get the shanty built, the next step is to get it on the lake. Shindorf suggests waiting until the ice is at least four inches thick before setting a shanty.

"If you follow that rule you won't break through the ice and end up in the lake," he said. "I went in on Torch Lake in about three feet of water last year."

"You know when you're not supposed to be out there on the ice," he laughed. "But every once in a while it happens."

Cutting a hole in the ice to get at the fish can be a long and tedious process, so Shindorf recommends foregoing the use of the traditional ice spud for the task in favor of a chain saw.

"The saw gets a little icy, but if you make sure you dry it out and oil it, the water and ice won't harm it," he explained. "And it makes cutting the hole a lot easier. You can go through a foot of ice and make a 2 by 4 foot hole in 15 minutes."

"It would probably take four hours with an ice spud," he estimated.

And with those hints you should be ready to fish. Shindorf suggests the novice start out pan fishing.

"There's a lot of action with pan fishing that makes it fun," he explained. "You always catch a lot of little fish, and you can go to any lake and catch some."

For bait he suggests using wax worms or moles.

"If you're not sure how deep you should be fishing or what bait you should be using, ask another ice fisherman," he'll be glad to help you," the fisherman said.

AL SHINDORF inspects the chimney pipe on his fish shanty. The shanty had a hard winter, Shindorf said, when it fell off of a pick up truck.

Sheriff's Substation May be Running by March 1

The proposed Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department substation for the eastern part of the county may become a reality by March 1, according to Sheriff George Lasater.

Lasater said a potential site for the satellite office has been found in the Village of Boyne Falls.

"We met recently with the Boyne Falls Village Council and we've received verbal cooperation from them," Lasater said. "They've even offered to give us an office and supply it with everything but a phone."

A definite site for the substation which will serve Boyne Valley, Melrose, Hudson, Chandler and Wilson townships as well as Boyne Falls, has not been selected yet however, Lasater said.

The new sheriff also predicted that the establishment of the new substation would not cost the taxpayers any additional money.

"I'm working with somebody else's budget," Lasater said. "But I'm trying to stay within it."

The establishment of a sheriff's substation was one of the campaign promises made by Lasater during last fall's political campaign for the sheriff's office.

In addition to the establishment of the substation, Lasater is also working to change the phone situation at the sheriff's department. Currently it is a long distance call from certain parts of the county to the sheriff's department.

"I don't feel anyone in the county should have to make a long distance phone call to get a hold of the sheriff," Lasater said. "With the establishment of the substation we hope to make it a local call to the sheriff from any part of the county."

It has been a busy first two weeks in office for the new sheriff. Besides the progress that has been made on the establishment of the substation, Lasater has also stepped up snowmobile patrols of summer homes and has worked out details for a volunteer chaplain at the jail and the creation of a sheriff's posse.

"A snowmobile has been assigned to the sheriff's department by the state. We are going to take the snowmobile out every day and check out cottages and summer homes in the county," the sheriff said. "This way if one of the homes has been broken into, we will have a better trail."

"The way it stands now, some break-ins we don't find out about until two or three months after they have occurred," Lasater said.

"We're not out to apprehend snowmobile violators with this expanded patrol although that is part of our job," he continued. "It's a preventative measure against b and c's."

The volunteer chaplain will be a part of the sheriff's posse, the sheriff said.

"We're working with the Charlevoix Ministerial Association in setting up a volunteer chaplain at the jail who will hold services for the inmates," Lasater said. "We are also working on a list of ministers from each town who would be interested in assisting sheriff's deputies when they are faced with potential suicides."

The chaplains will also be a part of the sheriff's posse which will operate like a police auxiliary. Lasater said he was still working out the details for establishing the posse.

About 15 million Americans' daily lives are affected in some way by birth defects. Each year some 1.2 million infants, children and adults are hospitalized.

The National Foundation March of Dimes supports research seeking causes and cures for birth defects, supports medical service programs for the prevention and treatment of birth defects, supports prenatal programs that encourage expectant mothers to protect her own health and that of her child, and supports prevention programs against 10, blood disease, German measles and other causes of birth defects.

Last year, the Charlevoix County March of Dimes collected $5,272.62 of the total collected, each county retains 40 percent with the remaining 60 percent going to the National Foundation.

Checks for $1,000 and $1,500 were presented to the Charlevoix Area Hospital by the March of Dimes last year for the purchase of a fetal monitor and for a radiant heat warmer for use in the obstetrical department.

In addition to the financial assistance, the Charlevoix County March of Dimes has offered films, literature and speakers to the hospital and schools throughout the county. They have also provided films used in the childbirth program sponsored by the Hospital Women's Guild.

City Council to Reconsider Grey Gables Theater Permit

By PAULA HOLMES

Can live music, dinner theater and reduced parking on Belvedere Avenue be compatible?

The question was debated during the Charlevoix Common Council meeting Monday night.

Dave Phillips, owner of the Grey Gables Inn, and his attorney, Michael Gibbons, requested the common council reconsider its nonapproval of an extension of an entertainment permit for the restaurant.

Phillips is seeking an extension of his entertainment permit from the State Liquor Control Commission, which would allow him to continue holding the dinner theater presentations he started last summer. The presentations were held in a newly completed addition to the restaurant.

When the liquor commission sought comments from common council before approving the permit, the council did not approve the permit because of the parking problem on Belvedere Avenue, which it felt was caused by the additional customers going to the Grey Gables due to the dinner theater.

Phillips presented the council with petitions Monday night containing the signatures of city residents who would like to see the dinner theater continue and also with copies of two proposed lease agreements which would allow Grey Gables customers to park at John Cross Fisheries and in the Bartlett's Decorator Center parking lot.

Gibbons pointed out that the parking problem occurs in the evening and that the two areas would provide ample room for evening parking. The attorney said Phillips would provide valet parking service for customers.

The attorney also pointed out that if the business was sold the council would have some control over the parking situation because a liquor license transfer must be approved by the council.

Still Have Problem

Phillips pointed out that denying him the entertainment permit would not cut down on the parking problem.

"I would still be allowed to hold wedding and retirement receptions in the expansion," he pointed out. "Many times I have more people attending those than I would at the dinner theater."

"I am trying to solve the parking problem on my own," he explained.

"I have tried since I came here six years ago to make it an advantage to have me here," Phillips continued. "I have done my best for the community and now I am asking them to back me up."

Mayor Edward Hansen pointed out that when Phillips made his original presentation for the building permit to allow the construction of the addition to the Grey Gables, he assured council there would be adequate parking on the lot next to the restaurant.

"But that evaporated," Hansen said. "And we have no guarantee that this won't evaporate, too."

Council finally decided to put the matter in committee for further discussion.

Parking Meters

In other business, Tom LaBlanc asked council how it determined which streets and which businesses should have metered parking spaces in front of them.

LaBlanc questioned why Kusina Motors did not have metered spaces in front of it when everyone else in town did.

Alderman Joe Morris explained that council was working on the problem of equitably distributing the spots. Morris said there were approximately 23 places where additional meters could be placed and that he had urged council to review the situation.

Sewer Facilities

Council also set the date for a public hearing on the proposed area sewer treatment facilities plan. The hearing will be held on Feb. 21.

Mayor Hansen said the city is going to have to move quickly after the hearing in order to qualify for the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) funding for the project which runs out Aug. 31.

"Some say this is the last time that the federal and state governments will fund these projects at 80 percent," Hansen said.

Oscar Stroud, Charlevoix Township supervisor, agreed. "We're going to have to move," Stroud said. "And we're (Charlevoix Township) ready to go."

"The others may be a little slow on the lake, but I think they will go along with it once we get going," the supervisor said.

"You're the lead applicant and I think you're going to have to lead Marjorie Hansen and Norwood (townships)," he said. "But lets go. If it's wrong we'll straighten it out as we go."

Council also discussed the abandonment of State Street right of way off of U.S. 31 by the Clark Station, Charlevoix.

City Gets Windfall From Power Co

By PAULA HOLMES

It was almost like winning the lottery.

The Charlevoix Common Council learned Monday night that it can expect a rebate of approximately $47,000 from Consumers Power Company.

Mayor Edward Hansen told the five aldermen present at the council meeting that the power buyers group the city belongs to, the Michigan Public Power Rate Payers Association has finally settled its rate dispute with Consumers Power Company.

From now on the power company will be billing Charlevoix and all members of the group at a lower rate for their electricity.

"For several years we have been affiliated with other cities who buy power from Consumers," Hansen explained. "And in 1975 when Consumers raised its rates, we as a group went to the Federal Power Commission and asked that they intervene in the proposed rate hike."

And for the last 15 months the power buyers, the power commission and the power company have been quibbling over what the rates should be.

"We have now settled at a rate lower than what we have been paying for the last 15 months," Hansen explained. "As near as I can figure, we should be getting about $47,000 back from Consumers."

The mayor said that city customers would not be getting a rebate on their bills, however.

"During this period the city has been absorbing the increased cost of power from Consumers," Hansen explained. "In the last year we have absorbed increased costs amounting to almost $20,000."

Hansen said the city has been charging residents for their power on the basis of fuel cost adjustments and has not had a set rate for electric power. He said the council has just begun reviewing the electric rates and is expected to set the rates for power bills by April.

Social Services Department to Move to New Offices Feb. 1

The Charlevoix County Department of Social Services will open at a new location Tuesday Richard H. Tilden, Director of the Department, has announced.

At that time the offices will be moved to a new building located on M-66 one-quarter mile south of the Charlevoix city limits across from the Kit Carson Lumber Co. The one-story building has been constructed by Robert Ouderkirk and leased to the Michigan Department of Social Services.

The Department of Social Services has been located in the county building since that building was opened in 1968. Because of the growth of the department and the merger with the welfare department in 1965, the available facilities at the present site were no longer adequate.

In addition, the expansion of county departments also necessitated additional space which was being occupied by the state agency. The leasing of a building elsewhere solved the problem, Tilden said.

The building has metal exterior construction with brick trim at the front and stucco trim at the windows. The trim will be added in the spring. The interior is paneled with approximately 5,400 square feet of floor space which is carpeted throughout.

It will house a waiting room, a large business office for the clerical staff, a multi-purpose room which will be utilized as a conference room, 17 offices, storage areas and toilet facilities.

Tilden said that with the building will house 17 offices, it is constructed so that the space can be utilized for additional offices when that need arises.

Public Assistance and Social Services offices will be housed in the building. At the present time, Tilden is Department Director and Vasco Zucchiatti is Assistant Director. The staff includes six assistance payment workers, four social service workers and six clerical workers. The nineteenth member of the staff is Ms. Sue Wickert, Special Services coordinator.

Community Chest Still Needs Help

The Charlevoix County Community Chest is still looking for help from area residents in reaching its $19,000 goal for this year. The community chest has slowly but surely collected $12,000 toward its goal—about 63 percent of the total amount. But the unit would like to obtain the remaining $7,000 and is appealing to county residents to send in their contributions if they have not yet done so, Elaine Martin, community chest treasurer, said.

The community chest is depending heavily on the letters it sent out in September to solicit funds for the 14 local organizations it supports. The unit tried to send a letter to every resident and business in the area, but anyone who was missed is urged to send or bring in contributions to Mrs. Martin at the First State Bank in Charlevoix.

Organizations being funded by the community chest this year include: the Salvation Army, the Charlevoix City Recreation Department and Mt. McSuba, Bergmann Center, Inc., Girl Scouts of America, Crooked Tree Council, DAC Counseling Center, Boy Scouts of America, Scenic Trails Council and the Charlevoix County Chapter of the American Red Cross. Other organizations aided through the community chest fund drive are the Charlevoix Area Hospital geriatric support fund, the Charlevoix Community Nurses fund, Camp Dagget, the Charlevoix County Big Brothers and Big Sisters, Michigan United Way, Northern Michigan Planned Parenthood and the Charlevoix House.

The community chest also uses $387 of the funds it collects to cover its own expenses.

Sign Language -- Fascinating, Helpful

The world is full of sounds—the sounds of nature, the sounds of traffic and the sounds of people talking. But for some people the world is silent. And due to their deafness, they are unable to participate in a sound-filled world. For some, particularly deaf-mutes, there is no easy means of communicating with these people who live in a world of sound.

But Fran Scott of East Jordan is attempting to change all that. Mrs. Scott is going to be teaching a class on sign language through the East Jordan Adult Education program. Assisting Mrs. Scott will be Elaine Dhaseler, who is deaf, and Debbie Kimble, both from Charlevoix.

"Sign language is a beautiful language," Mrs. Scott said. "It is almost like the hula dance. Every movement means something, and you can say so much with so little."

Mrs. Scott said there were many situations where people with normal hearing could use sign language to communicate with someone who is deaf. "You'd be surprised how often you use it once you learn how," she said.

Mrs. Scott, who has lived in East Jordan since July, first became interested in sign language when she worked as a school bus driver for special education students in Milford. One of the students riding the bus was deaf.

"I said to myself, there's no way I am going to have this student for 180 days and not talk to him," she explained. "So I went to the Human Resources Center in Pontiac and took an 80-hour class in sign language."

As her ability to converse with the deaf student increased, so did her interest in working with the deaf and soon Mrs. Scott applied to be a foster parent for deaf children, too. And she began using sign language to communicate with other people, too.

"One time I was working in a dentist's office and a patient came in who was deaf," she recalled. "At that time all I knew was the sign language alphabet, so I had to spell out all of the words."

"It was slow, but we finally got the idea across," she said. Mrs. Kimble agreed that knowing sign language comes in handy even if you aren't deaf. She learned sign language from her friend Miss Dhaseler. They both work at Charlevoix County State Bank and wanted to be able to communicate with each other.

People interested in taking the class which will begin Tuesday, Feb. 8, should contact the adult education office at 582-6766.

SHOWING HOW PEOPLE really can communicate with their hands are: Brad Rosecrants, Elaine Dhaseler, Debbie Kimble and Fran Scott who are spelling out the title of a sign language class offered through the East Jordan Adult Education program, "Speaking With Your Hands."

HEALTH

Health is ever-present in every human. Nature has provided man with good health and with the knowledge to maintain that good health. The controlling force in man is his instinct, or innate intelligence. Man's brain transmits nerve energy impulses to all body structures through the spinal cord, the spinal nerves and millions of tiny nerve fibres.

So long as man's nervous system functions properly and transmits the brain's messages through the body, good health abounds. When nerve pressure or impingement in the spinal column interferes with the efficient flow of nerve energy, disorder and disease result. Sickiness is the result.

However, scientific and gentle chiropractic adjustment at the hands of a competent chiropractor free the nerves to perform their proper duties, and nature restores the affected body parts to normal. Healthy, happy living once again becomes a part of life.

Healing and good health do not come through the elimination of or covering-up of symptoms. The cause for the disorder must be located and corrected. When the cause has been eliminated, nature effects the cure by restoring the affected body organs to normal, efficient operation. Through chiropractic adjustments, nature is able to perform her natural duty of health maintenance.

Mileage Ratings on 1977 Cars Available from Federal Units

If this is your year for a new car, you'll want some hard information for comparison shopping — like how many miles to the gallon different cars get, and how much head and leg room and trunk space each will give you.

The Federal Energy Administration and the Environmental Protection Agency have a new booklet that will help you make your choices. "Miles Per Gallon Ratings for 1977 Cars" is designed to help you compare the fuel economy of similar sized vehicles. To make it easier on you, the book groups passenger cars and station wagons into classes according to their interior and trunk size. Each car is rated for mileage in both city and highway driving, and a figure is included that is a combination of city and highway driving. For a single free copy of "Miles Per Gallon Ratings for 1977 Cars" send a post card to the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 632E, Pueblo, Colorado 81009. For California cars, write Consumer Information Center, Dept. 632E, Pueblo, Colo. 81009.

The booklet also tells you about some factors that influence gasoline consumption: An engine that's already warmed up (such as one that was used in the last 4 hours) requires less fuel to reach its most efficient operating condition than a "cold" engine.

Trip length also affects gas mileage. Shorter trips (under 5 miles) do not allow the car to warm up to its peak operating temperature and engine condition. So combine your short trips whenever possible. This will not only save you gas, but be better for the car.

Your car's condition has a bearing on how many miles to the gallon you get. On the average, a tuned-up vehicle gets approximately 3 to 9 percent better gas mileage than one that has not been properly maintained.

And be sure to keep your tires inflated to the proper pressure. Underinflated tires can cut your gas mileage.

"Miles Per Gallon Ratings for 1977 Cars" (free) is one of over 200 selected Federal consumer publications listed in the current edition of the catalog, "Consumer Information." Published quarterly by the Consumer Information Center of the General Services Administration, the free catalog is available by sending a postcard to the Consumer Information Center, Pueblo, Colorado 81009.

Kadens Has Sole Possession of 1st Place

By FRANK MARTIN

Kaden's Emporium moved into sole possession of first place in the A League of the Independent Basketball League after ousting

Townhouse by a 58-53 score Thursday.

In other action Credit Union upset Swanson's by a score of 58-53 and Way Oil defeated Willett Roofing 64-55 Thursday night. In action earlier in the week, Townhouse won over Swanson's 57-45; Kaden's trounced Willett Roofing 82-55 and Way Oil defeated Credit Union 70-56.

The battle for the league lead was a seesaw one all the way with neither team having more than a five-point spread at any time. Townhouse forged to a 16-11 first period lead only to have the challengers counter with 21 points to 17 for the Barmen and a 32-31 margin at halftime. Kaden's, with a chance to upset the strong Townhouse crowd, managed a 46-44 lead at the third period before winning the league lead.

Jim Bauman had 18 points. Al Loeze 13 and Steve Young 12 for Kaden's. Dan McKenzie and Bernie Ward had 10 points each for Townhouse.

Way Oil had an easy win over Willett Roofing after leading 18-14; 36-27 and 52-38 by quarters. Tim Carey, Roger Crain, and Dale Boss with 14 points each and Larry Potter with 12 points paced the winning cause. Rick Vanstadium with 20 points and Jim Danbert with 11 were top scorers for the Roofers.

Credit Union overcame a 20-12 first period deficit to go ahead 31-28 at halftime and 42-40 at the end of the third period before winning by a three-point margin over Swanson's. Ron Boss with 25 points and Matt Blair with 20 were top scorers for Credit Union. Bruce Meggison had 18 and Doug Winnell 16 for Swanson's who floored only four players.

Earlier in the week, Townhouse defeated Swanson's 57-45 after leading them 29-23 at halftime. Chuck Wright had 14 points and Ward and McKenzie 10 each for Townhouse. Meggison scored 16 and Kevin Swanson 10 for the Roofers.

All Loeze with 17 points, Jim Bauman with 16, Steve Young with 15, Keith Fitzpatrick with 12 and Kirk Kujawski with 10 points led Kadens to a 40-29 halftime lead over Willett Roofing before coasting to a 82-55 win. Jack Danbert had 15 points, Jim Danbert 12 and VanStadium 10 for the Roofers.

Credit Union held a slim 30-29 lead over Way Oil at halftime but were unable to capitalize on the advantage as the Oilers took the game by a decisive 70-59 score. Tim Carey had 19 points, Roger Crain 16, Mike Bode 12 and Potter and Boss 10 each for Way Oil. Blair and Ron Boss had 15 points each and Dean Ginter 14 for Credit Union.

Prosecutor Plans Rent Hike Investigation

Charlevoix County Prosecuting Attorney Roy Hayes has started an investigation into the reasons behind a 25 percent rent increase for the residents of the Charlevoix Apartments on May Street.

Hayes' action is an outgrowth of a meeting held Friday by a group of tenants of the 40-unit apartment complex.

"I don't know that there is anything legal that I can hang my hat on," Hayes explained in a telephone interview. "But I feel sorry for the people and I want to help them."

The prosecuting attorney said he had not found anything illegal or out of the ordinary about the rent increase. However, he has just begun his investigation of the facts and he said it would take a while to assemble the information. The Charlevoix Common Council is also considering looking into the matter.

The residents of the apartment complex met in the Community Room of the First State Bank building Friday to hear Frank Vaydick of Saginaw, owner of the apartment buildings, explain why he is increasing the rents 25 percent.

The tenants asked for the meeting with Vaydick following the receipt of notices announcing the rent increase effective March 1.

Vaydick explained that the rent increases were necessary because he lost $12,000 on the building last year due largely to unforeseen increases in the cost of operation. The apartment building was built with money borrowed by Vaydick from the Farmers Home Administration for "low income" housing. He is paying 1 percent interest over a 40-year period on the borrowed funds.

Under FHA terms he is limited to $3,200 cash profit a year, but he stated that even with the rent increases he will probably not make more than $400 this year. FHA terms do not permit him to operate at a loss, he said.

Most of the tenants of the apartment building are senior citizens, when they moved into the complex, believed that their rents would not be raised unless their Social Security payments were raised, one tenant

Up Five-Fold Over 1975

Felony Convictions Increase

By PEG OHLE
There were 55 convictions for felonies in Charlevoix County Circuit Court in 1976, resulting in 10 prison commitments, 22 probation decisions, 21 delayed sentences, and two youthful trainee placements.

These and other figures are included in the annual report of Circuit Court Probation Department prepared by David Bailey, Probation/Parole Agent.

In addition to the felony convictions, there were seven convictions for misdemeanors, by which three persons were sent to jail, three put on probation, and one given a deferred sentence. The number of felony convictions increased five-fold over 1975, from 11 to 55, while misdemeanor convictions remained the same.

"I predicted a large increase in the number of convictions in Circuit Court this year," Bailey comments, "based primarily on the Board of Commissioner's earlier decision to implement a full-time, professional prosecutive staff."

Bailey further explains that, "Although the total number of misdemeanor convictions in Circuit Court has remained essentially the same, a greater proportion of the Court's time was involved in felony cases, an apparent direct result of the Prosecutor having the necessary time to identify and prosecute the most serious offenders under felony charges, even to the point of trial if necessary. The Court can, therefore, follow through with commitment or an appropriate treatment plan on these serious offenders."

Bailey predicts that the number of convictions will fall back slightly in 1977.

"This guess is based on two factors," he said, "the first being that certain habitual offenders have been removed from the community and the second being that certain portions of the community have been deterred by the increased efficiency of the judicial system, or put in the simplest terms, the certainty of arrest and convictions under the current system."

The report shows a large increase in the number of crimes against people, a total of 19 felonies and misdemeanors compared with 31 crimes against property. (12 drug convictions were not added to these figures since they do not seem to readily fit either category). In 1975, there were three crimes against people and fifteen against property.

"It is hard to say whether the increased number of assaultive and potentially assaultive crimes this past year actually reflects an increase in this type of crime or whether the Prosecutor has been better able to identify and prosecute this type of offender," Bailey states.

Young adults from 17 through 24 years of age accounted for 76 percent of the convictions, compared with 16 percent in the 25 through 34 age group and eight percent in the 35 and older age group.

The work of the Probation Officer of two types. He conducts pre-sentence investigations in all offenses where the maximum sentence is a prison sentence, and, by custom, in almost all other criminal cases brought before the Court. He also supervises these individuals under the suspended, delayed or probation sentence of the Court and advises the Court if a particular offender becomes a danger to the community.

Bailey carried out 59 pre-sentence investigations in 1976; 54 of them were of men and five of women. He supervised 75 probationers during the year, of whom 33 were removed before December 31.

A breakdown of felony convictions shows they were the following crimes:

Winter's Fate Decided Today, Ground Hog Looks for Shadow

Have you been feeling a little beastly lately? Has all this winter weather gotten to you, making you feel like you've been forced to crawl in a hole and hibernate?

Well, you are not alone. Repeatedly near ground hogs are also beginning to feel that way.

Traditionally on this day, Feb. 2, also known as Ground Hogs Day, the furry little creatures drag themselves out of their warm little burrows to have a look at the weather.

If they see their shadows, they are scared, or else they decide—depending on which legend you are reading—to go back into their holes for another six weeks or so of winter hibernating.

But, if they don't see their shadows, the animals know that it is time to come out of hibernation because spring is just around the corner.

The Courier could not locate any ground hog burrows for observation as to the fate of winter, so we decided to contact the people who have been giving us our weather statistics all year and ask them how long they thought winter would last this year.

Lloyd Kuebler, who keeps the snowfall and precipitation records at the Charlevoix Sewage Treatment plant, said he didn't know when winter would end this year.

"It's anybody's guess," he laughed.

Kuebler said the snowfall has been heavier this year and the temperatures have been lower, but he doesn't know if that means winter will last any longer than normal.

"They say that if the ground hog sees his shadow there will be six more weeks of winter, and if he doesn't see his shadow we'll probably have six more weeks anyway," he said.

A member of the U.S. Coast Guard Station said he thought winter would probably end sometime around July 1.

"I hope it ends by then," he laughed. "I wish winter would end tomorrow, but I don't think that's going to happen."

Petoskey Hospitals' Merger Has Little Effect Here

The recent merger between Little Traverse and Lockwood-MacDonald hospitals in Petoskey will have little effect on the Charlevoix Area Hospital.

There is no evidence that the merger of the two Petoskey hospitals, which was announced on Jan. 19 by the two boards of directors, will have any adverse effect on this community's hospital, according to Richard Krueger, hospital administrator.

"We have worked closely with Little Traverse and Lockwood-MacDonald hospitals in the past and we will continue to do so," Krueger said.

One of the reasons the two

Petoskey hospitals agreed to merge was to eliminate the duplication of services between the two organizations. Krueger said Charlevoix Area Hospital has been sharing services with the two hospitals as a means of improving patient care and keeping patient costs down for several years.

For example, Little Traverse Hospital has been sharing laboratory services with Charlevoix hospital since 1971, Krueger said.

"Dr. Jean Webster, pathologist (at Burns Clinic) has been director of our laboratory since 1971 and the staff of pathologists and personnel at Little Traverse Hospital have provided us with valuable services that would be too costly for us to attempt without their cooperation," Krueger explained.

"This has all been carried on in the interest of better service to our patients and better utilization of staff personnel, which tends to reduce the overall cost of health care to our patients," the administrator continued.

Krueger said that at this time discussion of the possibility of sharing additional services such as supplies and purchasing is also being conducted in an attempt to reduce the cost of hospital functions for all three area hospitals.

Good luck and here's to happy treasure hunting.

Voters Approve Two Issues, Deny One in School Election

The new version of the three Rs—Remodel, Repair and Renew—three proposals supported by the Charlevoix Board of Education and a citizens committee, didn't quite go over with the voters of the Charlevoix School District last weekend.

Voters passed two out of three proposals before them during the Saturday election, approving requests for repair of existing buildings, and the renewal of millage levies.

A request for a 1 mill tax levy for five years to repair and maintain the Charlevoix Middle School and present buildings and a renewal of a 6.5 mill levy for three years for operational purposes was approved by the voters.

However, the proposal seeking $2.19 million for the remodeling of the present high school was defeated by 63 voters with 864 people voting against the proposal and 801 voting for it.

The 6.5 millage renewal will allow the present program to be continued. This was a renewal of millage that expired in December.

Superintendent James McKinney said the board of education and the administration was pleased that the millage levy had been renewed and that the middle school repair work could begin.

"However, we are disappointed that the problem at the high school was not resolved," McKinney said.

The superintendent pointed out that the high school has been a problem for boards of education for the past 10 years. "They have seen evidence of a growing need, recognized it long before it reached its present proportions and have tried to do something about it," he said.

McKinney said the board must now take another look at the problem. Some solution must be arrived at because of the increasing enrollment at the high school level. The school was constructed to hold 472 students and currently 640 students are attending classes there.

Are the coffee shops capitalizing on the recent increase in coffee prices? I had a cup of coffee in a local coffee shop today and paid 35 cents for it. I talked to some friends of mine that told me that it was even higher in some other places. Upon checking at the local supermarket I found a three pound of coffee averaged out to be about $2.30 per pound at the retail level. Assuming that there are only 100 cups of coffee in 1 pound, the price per cup is slightly over 2 cents. It seems to me that a $25.00 return on less than $2.50 investment is a pretty fine return.

Editorials/Opinions

Recent School Election
A Positive Step, But High School Needs Help

Things are looking brighter for Charlevoix.

In the midst of one of the snowiest and coldest winters in anyone's memory, Charlevoix residents have thrown off what could be pretty depressing circumstances and have done something positive for their community and school district.

Last Saturday Charlevoix voters struck a positive blow in the name of education and in the name of economy. The residents not only voted yes on the operational millage renewal at a time when most school districts are sweating out another approval of such tax levies, but the voters also approved a 1 mill levy over five years for repairs at the middle school.

It's been a long battle between the boards of education and the school district voters over what should be done with the middle and high schools. For ten years the two groups just could not get together on a proposal that both would support.

Now a compromise has been reached—at least on the middle-school-and-improvements can start to be made.

We are especially glad that the second proposal—the proposal to repair—was approved. We feel that with the current economic times it is foolish to waste energy because of improperly constructed doors and windows. These items can be replaced and repaired for a savings to the school district that can perhaps be applied to further repairs.

and improvements in the building and in the curriculum.

We also feel that it is foolish to tear down a building that has stood for 50 years and appears to be structurally sound and able to stand at least about 50 years. We feel it is wise not to waste our resources but instead to repair and improve them.

However, we were disappointed that voters did not see fit to have any expansion at the high school and we are urging voters to attend the school board meetings and speak with the school board about what sort of compromise plan would be palatable to the majority of the voters.

Something must be done at the high school. The building is packed to the gills with students now and there is no indication that the enrollment will decrease. The birth rate may be holding steady, but the number of people living in the community is not.

Each year more families move into the area which require other families to move here to provide services for the new families moving in. All this puts a strain on the school system.

The Courier urges voters to come up with suggestions for the school board. They are working for the community but they can't provide what the community wants unless they get some feedback from the voters.

As a community we have taken a positive step forward in dealing with our school problems. Let's keep going.

Don't Let Winter
Get You Down,
There's Plenty to Do

Well, it's February. We've entered into that last long stretch before we see the patch of ground at the end of the snow bank.

And we've got quite a challenge before us. According to numerous reference books, February tends to be the most bone chilling, generally miserable month of the year. It also tends to be a rather depressing month and the time when most people begin to get cabin fever.

Charlevoix residents should take heart, however, and not let the doldrums get them down. There are plenty of things for people to do to cure several cases of cabin fever.

If you feel like you're going to go crazy if you don't start getting out of the house soon, why not sign up for an adult education class or attend some of the classes at the community college?

Also, the Department of Social Services is always looking for people who would be willing to spend a few hours each week helping those less fortunate members of our community. And who knows what kind of warmth could be brought into the community if we all spent a little time thinking of others.

And don't forget the recreational opportunities offered through the city recreation department.

Last but not least, the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce is planning a special Winter Cup Festival to help bring a smile to everyone's faces.

So don't despair. February may be here, but there is plenty to do and before you know it, winter will be over.

Supports Farm Bureau

Dear Editor:

Flying over the crystal blue waters and majestic mountains of the beautiful state of Hawaii and touring through the vast areas of sugar cane and pineapple fields, gave us a reason to be proud that these farmers represent American Agriculture and most are members of the Farm Bureau. They were also the hosts to the more than 14,000 members attending the 98th annual Farm Bureau Convention held in Honolulu, Jan. 9-13.

Bill and I joined 549 Michigan Farm Bureau Members to attend the meetings and to enjoy some of the pleasures of just being in the warm sunny islands for a week's vacation.

Farm Bureau in Michigan has suffered a hard blow due to the very tragic P.R.H., a human mistake. There has been so much adverse publicity, many problems and suffering as the result of this very unfortunate tragedy.

We wonder, had it happened to any other feed supplier would they have just closed their doors and declared bankruptcy leaving the farmers to their own plight, or would they have hung in there and fought tooth and nail to help the unfortunate farmers to get back on their feet as Farm Bureau Services did.

Farm Bureau is people controlled by members for bettering our economic well being. We have the organization to face the issues, to meet the challenges of tragedy. As our State President, Elton Smith, has said, "we must be concerned, responsible, and understanding and be willing to participate." Farm Bureau is the best darn farm organization we've got. Where we can do more together than we can ever do alone. So we need good Forget the honor of being called to Washington to work on the Jimmy Carter team. I am turned on by words, not politics.

And Wade McCree Jr. is a sonneteer. A sonneteer writes sonnets. He sometimes. A sonnet is a poem which contains 14 lines divided into three quatrains followed by a couplet. (If you are properly impressed, I will now close my dictionary.)

It was a coincidence, that I met Judge McCree at a holiday party the night before the media revealed that he might become solicitor general of the United States. It was a touch of class that, during 2 hours of conversation, McCree never even hinted at the possible honor coming his way.

Most of us mortals would handle such a situation in the manner of Detroit Mayor Coleman Young. A Carter representative asked Young if he would be available for consideration for a job in the Carter administration. No job was offered. But Young made it sound as if Carter wouldn't move to Washington if Young didn't agree to live next door.

Young's syntax was so politically adroit that he fooled the Detroit News completely. The News published a front-page story saying Young had refused Carter's offer to become secretary of Housing and Urban Development. Young was quoted as saying he felt it was his higher duty to stay in Detroit and save us all from perdition. It was marvelous publicity for the mayor, who faces re-election this year.

But it wasn't true. It was a misunderstanding, to be polite about it. Or the mayor got carried away by the sound his own horn blowing. If you prefer the rude description, Young put a hundred of other big shots who sat by their phones throughout the Carter transition period.

Judge McCree explained it simply. "I have been asked about my availability for consideration," he told a reporter in December. "But that's as far as it's gone. I'm not really in a position to say I've been offered anything because I haven't."

QUESTION: How do you explain to your children why comedian Freddie Prinze took his own life?

ANSWER: You don't, because all of the acceptable answers are unacceptable.

A broken marriage? Divorce goes with the territory in Hollywood. Drugs? When Prinze was stopped for erratic driving recently, only a mild sedative showed up in his blood tests.

Finances? As one of America's fastest rising young actors, Freddie Prinze had the world by the tail. But "Chico" is gone, killed by his own hand, and we are at a loss for proper answers when the children ask "why?"

For most of my life, my father, now 81, has singled out the winter of 1934 as one of the worst in history. He remembers how the temperature hardly went above zero during the entire month of February and how much trouble it was to keep the house warm.

I also have vague recollections of that winter, mainly how deep the snow was when we walked to the grocery store. But dad telephoned from Southfield Friday night to concede that the winter of 1934 couldn't hold a blow-torch to the winter of 1977.

"It is even worse," he admitted, "than the winter of 1948."

And that, my friends, was the winter he spent in North Russia with American Expeditionary Forces, just a hoot and a holler from the Arctic Circle.

So if you want to make room for this awful winter in your record book, go right ahead. We're not likely to have another like it for quite a while, regardless of how the jet streams flow.

ALTHOUGH WE admire the derring-do of our father, I said, "I'm trying to keep going through this worst of winters, we are convinced that year-

I want to boycott coffee. I really do, but basically I'm weak and cannot endure pain.

Last week, I paid more for three pounds of coffee than I paid for a winter coat the first year I was married, but I can't help myself.

You cannot imagine the pressure I get from the women in the neighborhood. The other morning I practically ran to the coffee kiosk at Lois's house.

Just inside the door Lois said, "Want a cup?" She put an empty cup in my hand. "Where's the coffee?" I asked.

"I never promised you coffee," she said. "That's not funny, Lois. Do you have any idea what I would give for a cup of coffee? I'd sell my children."

"Wouldn't we all?" I'd sell my self-respect. "Braggart."

"Lois! I'd sell my bowling trophy!" "Will you get hold of yourself? We've got to stand firm together or there is no telling how high the price of coffee will go."

"Look," I said regaining my composure. "I never thought I'd admit this to anyone, but I am older than the rest of you and I lived through the Great

That's class, which is always honest and often has nothing to do with politics.

Last week it was announced in Washington that McCree will get the job. If Griffin Bell is confirmed as attorney general, McCree will be his solicitor general.

Which is all exceedingly impressive stuff. But none of the news-articles mentioned that McCree is a sonneteer. You read it here first.

I am supposed to be a writer, and I am never thrilled to learn that some accountant or lawyer can write better than I do. It doesn't seem fair. I never plead cases or audit books. Why don't these smarties stick to their professions and leave the writing to those of us who can't do anything else?

At that Christmas party, when he might have been bragging that he was a poet, I said to him, "McCree, I've read some of your sonnets. I wanted to point a couple of them out to you. But my wife made me listen."

And heard the sonnet McCree had written on the back of an envelope in December. "But that's as far as it's gone. I'm not really in a position to say I've been offered anything because I haven't."

...Harold (Sam) Kaufman

Harold J. (Sam) Kaufman is County Director for the four-county Northern Michigan Community Mental Health Services Board, which is really a branch of county government. This week he tells the Courier about services rendered under jurisdiction of the Board.

COURIER: What counties are included in your organization?

KAUFMAN: Charlevoix, Cheboygan, Emmet and Osego counties.

COURIER: What kind of services do you provide?

KAUFMAN: We offer 24-hour emergency services for individuals who are experiencing a crisis and are in need of immediate help. We offer professional counseling services for individuals who are experiencing an emotional upset, including individual, family, and group therapy. We offer professional counseling services for individuals returning to the area from state facilities for the mentally ill and mentally retarded.

We offer preventive services which are intended to reduce the incidence of mental dysfunction through activities which alleviate factors leading to emotional impairment.

COURIER: Where are your services available?

KAUFMAN: Locally, for the mentally ill, we have the Petokey Area Counseling Center in Petokey, and for the mentally retarded we have the Bergmann Center and six in the Charlevoix House in Charlevoix.

COURIER: How do people arrange for your services?

KAUFMAN: A secretary or answering machine is available at the Petokey Center each weekday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. for information and making appointments. Emergency service can be obtained by calling 347-4370 day or evening.

COURIER: Who are on your staff and what does your service cost?

KAUFMAN: Our staff consists of mental health professionals with training in social work, psychology, counseling and psychiatry. Fees vary according to family income and the size of the family. The fee is set at the initial interview. No one is denied service because of inability to pay.

COURIER: Where do you get your funds?

KAUFMAN: Our programs are funded through the Michigan Department of Mental Health and the four County Boards of Commissions. Ninety percent is state and federal money and 10 percent is local. This year Charlevoix County has budgeted $17,227 for us, based on $1.08 per capita. By state law, every county pays according to this formula. Our total budget this year is approximately $500,000, with about $60,000 coming from four counties and the rest from federal and state funds.

COURIER: Why is local mental health service important?

KAUFMAN: We are trying to keep people out of mental institutions and near home. It costs about $30 a day to keep a person in a state institution and the county is now responsible for 10 percent of the cost of institutional care for mentally retarded and mentally ill persons from THESE CHARLEVOIX sixth graders are enjoying camping out at Ferris State College.

Field Trip a Hit with Sixth Grade Students

The most recent field trip of the Charlevoix Middle School sixth grade classes has been receiving high reviews from the students.

"We had a great time," one student exclaimed while waiting for his parents to pick him up at the middle school.

"It was super," another said. "And the circus was fun, too."

The 129 sixth graders left town last Wednesday on a school bus bound for the Shrine Circus performance in Grand Rapids. The students were attending the show as the guests of the Northwest Michigan Shrine Club.

The trip was planned as the annual one-day outing it usually is, but instead it turned into the first annual overnight for the sixth grade students. And that was what made the trip so much fun, according to the sixth graders interviewed by the Courier.

While the students were inside watching the show complete with monkeys, lions and tigers, the weather outside was pulling some monkeyshines. By the time the students were ready to go home the roads were nearly impassable.

The bus did manage to make it to Big Rapids, however, where Ferris State College kindly put up the students and five teachers, three parents, three drivers and six members of the shrine club.

"The boys had to sleep on the floor, but the girls got couches," one female student said, explaining the system.

All of the students were supplied with pillows and blankets at the Banker Center at the Ferris State College. "We even had a pillow fight," one boy volunteered. "That was fun."

"Where was the teacher?" a girl classmate asked him. "Oh, he fell asleep," the boy giggled.

Then it was up bright and early the next morning for breakfast and back on the road by 8 a.m. The students arrived at the middle school at 11 a.m. to find that the school had been cancelled due to the snow storm.

Wednesday may not have been the best day for a field trip, but it will be long remembered by the middle school students.

Local Twirlers Take Top Prize

The Spectrums of Charlevoix, a dance and baton twirling team of five members, captured a first place in U.S.A. competition at Allegan recently.

This is a first for a Northern Michigan team according to their instructor, Mary Lou Smith, who explained that the team members twirl batons while doing a dance routine. Each team is given up to four minutes to do its routine before four judges. There are also individual performances.

The winning team was composed of Brenda Boss, Dawn Bartlett, Lisa Hoffman, Sherry Jensen and Penny Kane. All are students in the Charlevoix Schools.

In the solo division, Lisa Hoffman placed first in the 12-year old category; Brenda Boss, second in the 15-year and over category and Sherry Jensen, fourth in the 13-year division.

The regional contest was sponsored by the U.S. Twirling Association.

Accompanying the troupe to Allegan were their instructor,

Mrs. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Boss and Mrs. Robert Hoffman.

Mrs. Hoffman said the costumes were made locally. The group would like to acknowledge the assistance given by Elaine Tompkins of the Cheeba Cloth Shop.

So Watch Out!

It's the Year of the Snake

For anyone who follows the advice found in fortune cookies, the message in 1977 is: "Watch out!"

This is the Year of the Snake-or will be at soon as the lunar new year arrives on February 18. In the Asian calendar, it's a year when it pays to be especially careful.

The serpent is capable of remaining quiet for long periods, then striking suddenly and dangerously.

Last year was the Year of the Dragon, supposed to bring great change and exciting events. In China, where all this began more than 45 centuries ago, it did exactly that.

China went through a change of government and two severe earthquakes in 1976. Mao Tse-tung's widow, Chiang Ching, was ousted in disgrace, and may have reflected on that old Chinese curse: "May you live in exciting times."

The Chinese zodiac contains 12 animals, and each comes around five times in a 60-year cycle, which then starts anew. This provides for differences between one ox year and another, for example, according to their positions in the cycle.

Without these variables, soothsayers would be out of work. But since each animal has its own hours of the day and favored seasons within the year, there is ample material to fill the books printed annually that instruct individuals born under various animal signs on the best way to arrange their lives.

The 12 years are listed as the rat, ox, tiger, rabbit, dragon, snake, horse, sheep, monkey, rooster, dog, and pig. Oriental mythology says Buddha told the animals to gather on a certain day and he would assign them the Year of the Rat should have good fortune—particularly if born at night.

Buddha asked the rat to inform the cat. But the rat didn't—which is why there is no Year of the Cat, and explains why cats chase rats to this day.

Numerous strict rules, such as that one warned a rabbit never to marry a snake, are less heeded today. But the animal zodiac still serves in helpful ways.

No Asian man would be so rude as to ask a woman her age. He can, however, ask which sign she was born under, then do a little quick arithmetic.

Yet the rat, also translated as mouse, isn't all bad in this colorful pantheon. Since rodents lived only in houses penditures are computed, Wilson said.

The travel bureau was given a budget of $23 million from the state to operate on and turned back $13 million in tax revenues to the state.

"We have a return of $90 for every $1 spent," Wilson pointed out to the business people at the luncheon.

Wilson said he expected the budget to be even larger this year. He said the bureau would like to conduct a more active campaign against such competitors as Ontario, Canada, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Illinois, Indiana and Ohio.

face one of the coldest winters in history at the same time. The thermostat does have to be turned down to save energy and money—but don't lose heart. We're not, but we're not. Proper clothing can add another "trick up your sleeve."

The trick is to wear clothes that entrap air, so your body heat can't escape. Trapped air within the garment and between the body surface and other layers of fabric acts as insulation. Thicker feeling fabrics will be warmer than thinner ones. Fabric thickness rather than weight makes clothing warm.

Several layers of light weight clothing offer better insulation than one or two heavy clothing articles. The fitters will build up dead air pockets and entrap your body heat. We're not, but we're not. Proper clothing can add another "trick up your sleeve."

Fabric construction is more important than fiber content. The knit construction of a synthetic acrylic may be warmer than wool because of its ability to trap air. Thermal fabrics also entrap air.

Down is a very good insulator and offers warmth without weight. It breathes and allows body moisture to escape. It is also washable.

IT WAS ALL hands in the air as Scott Boss (21) and Pat Schaefer (51) grab away a rebound from Onaway's Gilbert Morgan (40).

BUD KLOOSTER (45) was all alone for this shot. Klooster paced his team during the Onaway game with 22 points.

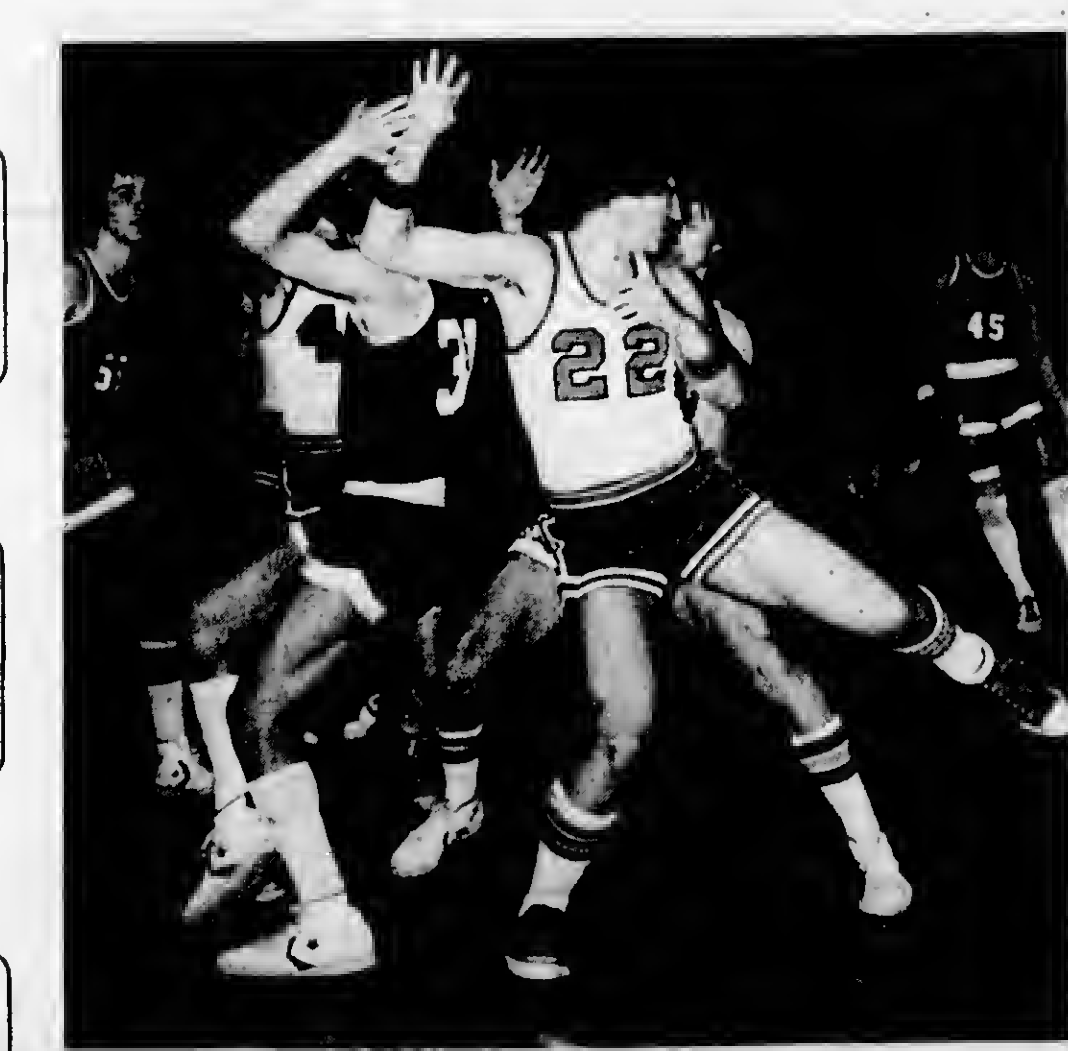

Rayders Lengthen First Place Lead

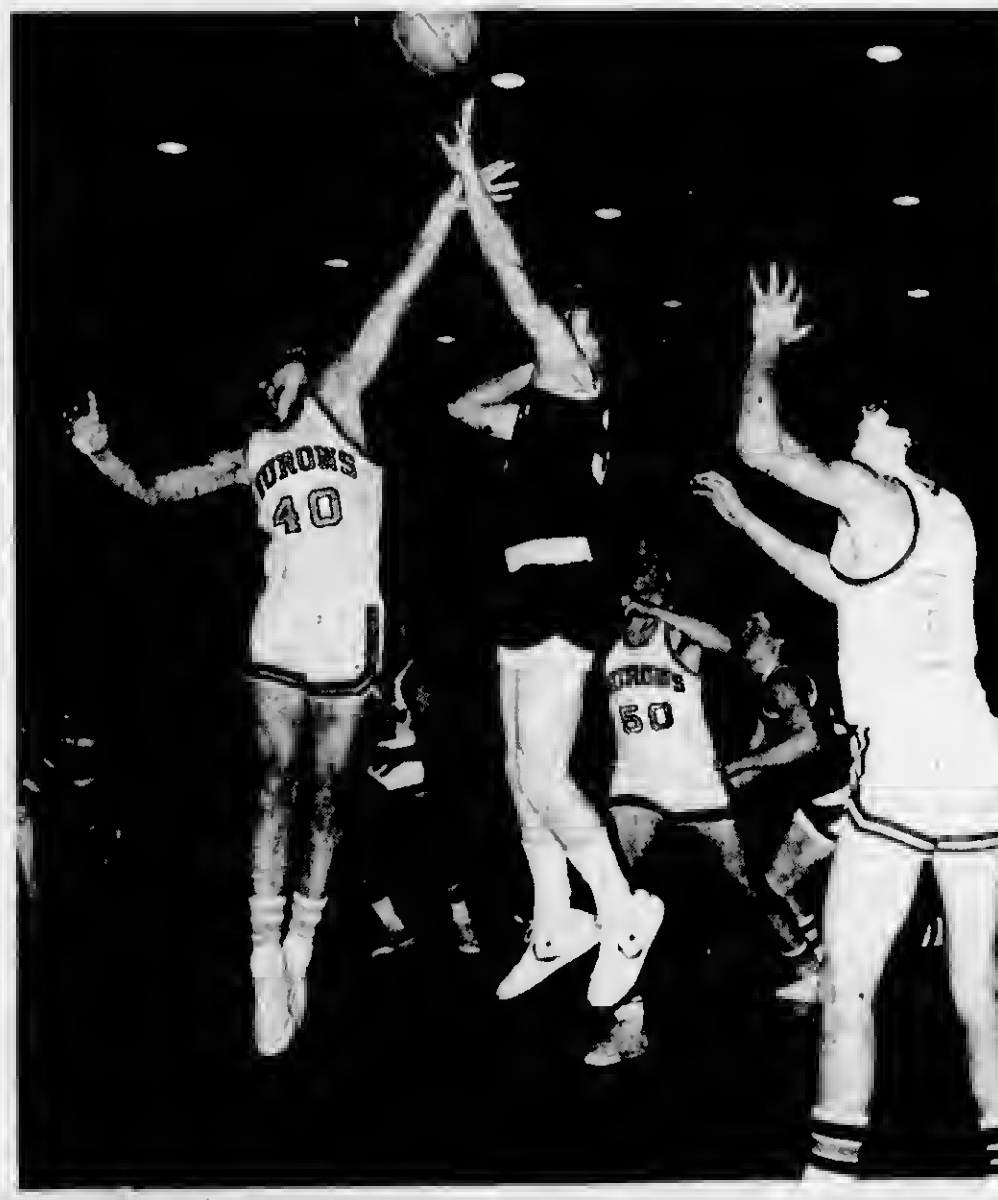

IT WAS Bud Klooster (45) high in the air for this basket as his opponent Curt Vogelheim (50) watches.

SCOTT BOSS (21) attempts a pass to Dave Tollas (41) while the Hurons Len Gabrysiak (34) runs interference.

IT WASNT quite clear who had the ball, but everyone was definitely blocked during this part of the game.

HURONS CURT Vogelheim (50) and Mark Pilarski (40) try to stop this Rayder shot with little success.

Rayders Down Hurons, Extend League Lead

The Charlevoix Rayders lengthened their lead over the Hurons in the Michigan-Huron Shores league lead to 9-1 Friday night with a 91-67 victory over Rogers City.

In their game with Rogers City Friday night, the Rayders got off to a slow start and trailed 12-10 at the quarter before finding the range to take a 35-27 lead after outscoring the visitors 23-15 in the second period.

The Rayders have yet to play three of their toughest games before closing out the season-St. Ignace on the Saints' floor Friday; Boyne City here on Feb. 11 and Potoskey there the following Friday.

In between they will face

Harbor Springs Tuesday and Port Huron here on Feb. 8.

In their game with Rogers City Friday night, the Rayders got off to a slow start and trailed 12-10 at the quarter before finding the range to take a 35-27 lead after outscoring the visitors 23-15 in the second period.

Bud Klooster set the pace for the game with 26 points including 12 of 12 free throws. He was followed by Scott Boss

Mark Gruke had 21, Mark Pilarski and Curt Vogelheim 13 for Rogers City.

B League Standings Remain Unchanged this Week

Action in the Independent Basketball League last week was limited to games played in the B League.

Tri-City Asphalt defeated Klooster John Deere 73-50; Freedman Aircraft dumped Medusa 86-49; LaBlance Insurance won over Hoskins 68-32 and County State Bank edged Wojan Aluminum 51-32. This week B League games will be played on Thursday and the A League games will be moved ahead to Wednesday.

Tri-City Asphalt, the only undefeated team in the B League, continued to overpower its opponents. This week it was a 73-50 win over Medusa 17-11; 45-20 and 65-32 by quarters before winning by a 37 point margin. Terry Blissett led the scoring with 23 points, Ed Holm 18, Dave Norton, 14 and Mike Crain, 10. Roger Gowell had 16 points and Hal Evans 10 for Klooster's.

scoring for the first time this season Tuesday when they chalked up a 101-61 win over the Onaway Cardinals.

Coach Dave Moyer emptied his bench as the Rayders jumped to a 35-8 first period lead, increased it to 48-20 at halftime and 72-49 as they headed into the final eight minutes.

The Rayders never made a trip to the free throw line during the first half as they scored 24 of their 45 field goals. Their 11 of 15 charity shots were made during the second half. They had a total of 22 personal fouls, half of which sent Onaway to the line during the first 16 minutes. Bud Klooster paced the game with 22 points. Matt Doan added 16; Dave Tollas, 11; Neil Dziedzic, 10; Jim Alger, nine; Scott Boss and Pat Schaefer, eight each; Brian Williams, six; Steve Berlage, four; Kip Cinnamon, Jim Elzinga and Tom Fowler, two each and Woody Pearson, one.

Health Classes Offered by Rec Department

The Charlevoix Recreation Department will sponsor a series of eight health exercise classes during April and May at the Charlevoix Elementary School gymnasium.

The classes will be presented one hour per week for eight weeks with Erin Arvillia as the instructor. The classes will be available for one hour beginning at 7:30 or 8:30 p.m. each weekday but Thursday and any hour between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. on Saturday.

Each class period will include approximately 45 minutes of exercises and 15 minutes of health education instruction covering topics selected by the group. Miss Arvillia, a fourth year medical student at Michigan State University, said the object is to improve not only one's physical condition but also one's mental capacity for incorporating therapeutic exercise and health habits into everyday living.

The cost of the two months program is $8. Women interested are asked to send their name, age, address, phone number along with a list of health topics to Erin Arvillia in care of the Charlevoix Recreation Department, City Hall 210 State St., Charlevoix 49720.

Junior Varsity Whips Rogers City Team

The Charlevoix JV's, in their meeting with Rogers City Friday night, had to snap a first period 17-17 tie before going on to win by a score of 53-47.

In fact, the young Rayders had to go to the free throw line to salvage the game after being outscored 23-19 from the field. Capitalizing on trips to the line where they connected on 15 of 24 attempts while collecting only 11 personal fouls to 16 for the visitors, the Rayders managed a six point victory. The young Hurons completed only one of six attempts.

After the 17-17 first period tie, Charlevoix pulled away to a 30-25 halftime lead only to have Rogers City trim the margin to two points, 35-33, going into the final period.

Pat Schmidt led the scoring for Charlevoix with 14 points. Bob Plumm added 10, Doug Buday and Kevin Kratt, nine each; Todd Williams, five; Barney Way, four and Gilbert Nojort, two.

Dave Idalski had 23 for Rogers City.

Jerry Skippersgosh with 19 points led County State Bank to a win over Wojan Aluminum after heading them 9-5; 19-12 and 32-20 by quarters. Don Smith had eight points for Wojan's.

Volleyball Team Loses To Strong Huron Squad

The Charlevoix Girls Volleyball team not only lost to Rogers City in matches played on the Hurons floor Wednesday night but it was forced to spend the night away from home when a blizzard struck the area late in the day.

The storm with winds up to 50 miles per hour cut visibility to zero and caused drifting of roads and made driving hazardous. Coach Pat Carland, her 31 team members and other students and their bus driver, Harold DeYoung, were housed overnight with families of Rogers City team members.

JVs No Match For Onaway Squad

A 75-52 score was posted Tuesday night by the Charlevoix Junior Varsity squad as they downed the visiting Onaway Cardinals.

The young Rayders tallied 35 field goals and nine of 21 free throws while picking up 15 personal fouls as they led the visitors 33-14 at halftime and 54-28 at the third period after trailing 12-10 at the end of the first eight minutes.

Ron Ferris had 14 and Stan Waite 12 points for the visitors who scored 22 field goals.

Charlevoix Grapplers Capture Benzie Title

By FRANK MARTIN

The Charlevoix Wrestling Team, coached by Norm Probert, captured the title at the seventh annual Benzie Central Invitational Wrestling tournament held Saturday. It marked the first time the Rayders have taken the title.

Charlevoix tallied a total of 152 points to make the championship. Traverse City placed second with 134 points; Grayling, third with 127; Frankfort, fourth with 107 points; the host team fifth with 76 points and Elk Rapids, sixth with 23 points. Coach Probert said that the dual meet format was used in the tournament for the first time.

Two teams were unable to attend due to weather conditions in southern Michigan.

Traverse City was a late replacement when the Flushing tournament was forced to cancel because of weather.

Under the dual meet format, the winner is determined on a point system based on pins, times and decisions, Probert explained.

The Rayders piled up their points by winning over Traverse City 42-32; Benoit Central, 47-24 and Elk Rapids, 63-6.

Charlevoix grapplers placed in 12 of 13 weight classes. Charlevoix forfeited in the heavyweight class.

Individual championships were won by Mike Kately in the 122 pound weight class; Craig Golovich (138); Gary Probert (165) and Gregg Chappuis (178).

Other medal winners were Ron Hilton (112), second; Dave Golovich (98); Lee DeMicheil (106); Jeff Skelton (119); Andy Keller (155); third; Don Frost (126); Jerry Keile (145) and Dennis Whitley (191), fourth.

Skelton drew high praise from Probert for his performance against Larry Haughn of Traverse City who entered the tournament with 18 straight pins to his credit.

Haughn had 10 straight matches without an opponent scoring a single point against him. Though he was outclassed, Probert said Skelton kept moving throughout the match scoring a total of five points against the Class A State Medal winner. Though Jeff lost 19-5, his performance of scrappiness and determination set the tempo for the Rayders team who went on to defeat Traverse City. Probert said this was a real victory for him because in the only times he had met Traverse City in the past he had lost.

Mike Kerr had the most pins in the least amount of time, three in 4:51. Jim Vellette of Elk Rapids had the most takedowns, seven.

Charlevoix will be at Cadillac Thursday and will host the Michigan-Huron Shores Conference tournament Saturday. A total of six teams will be entered in this meet with Rogers City defending the title the Hurons have held for two years.

There is a strong resonance in the popularity of cultured pearls, not just in the United States, but Europe and Asia are also seeing larger quantities of pearls as well. Refined in Japan has been shown in the areas of colored and baroque pearls as well as the traditional round cream colored variety.

Winter Festival Set to Chase Blahs Away

Initial plans for a Charlevoix winter carnival, the Winter Cup Festival, have been announced by Jacquie Merla, executive director of the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce.

The festival, cosponsored by the chamber of commerce and the Charlevoix Lions Club, will be mixed with a series of events sponsored by other civic groups to help chase the winter blahs away during the last weeks of the month.

"We are planning this as a community event," Mrs. Merla explained. "We hope everyone will turn out and be a part of it, either as a participant or a spectator."

The carnival will open with an ice sculpture contest in East Park. Charlevoix High School students, who will hold their winter homecoming during the same weekend, will place their sculptures in East Park rather than at the high school.

Also on Friday, the Charlevoix-Gaylord basketball game, the final scheduled game of the season, will be followed by the Winter Homecoming dance at the K-5 school. A Winter Homecoming King and Queen will be selected by the high school student body and will reign over the festivities.

Cross Country ski races on a course to be announced will open Saturday's Winter Cup Festival activities. Open Cup Downhill ski races and the Mardi Gras Ski competition for skiers 18 years and younger will be held at 10 a.m. at Mt. McSaubia with trophies being offered to winners.

Also during Saturday, several hundred young musicians will be in Charlevoix for the annual District II Band and Orchestra Festival being hosted by Charlevoix High School. This will be an all-day event.

Saturday night has been designated Mardi Gras night.

In the community with restaurants and nightclubs planning special events for the entertainment of their guests.

A Mardi Gras Jazz Festival featuring the Slabtown Marching Society of Traverse City will be presented at the high school gymnasium under the sponsorship of the Community Cabaret at 8 p.m.

A cross country Olympic ski clinic will be held at 1 p.m. Sunday at the Municipality Golf Course. A hockey tournament will be held at 3 p.m. at the Charlevoix Middle School and the Lions Club will be drawing for prizes at the rink at 4 p.m. to conclude the three-day event. The service club will be selling raffle tickets throughout the weekend for the drawing.

THIS MONTH is Boy Scout Month and to celebrate it members of Cub Scout Pack 11 have put a display in the window of the Sears store on Bridge Street. Here Dwayne Bean and Tom Pederson work on the exhibit. For more information about Scouting read today's Meet Charlevoix on page 5.

City Council Proposes to Sell Property to Ohio Manufacturer

New industry may be moving into Charlevoix within the next year.

Charlevoix Common Council approved a resolution Monday night authorizing Mayor Edward Hansen and City Clerk Judy Przybylski to sign a purchase agreement with the Trison Company for property on Martin Road.

The city owns a 758 by 257 foot parcel next to the Charlevoix Chemical Company that the manufacturing company is interested in purchasing. The proposed price for the parcel is $15,000.

The Trison Company, which is located in Ohio, produces master brake cylinder parts for General Motors. The industry is supposed to be pollution-free and quiet.

Part of the reason it wants to move to the Charlevoix area is that the company is having problems getting the additional natural gas it needs to expand its operations. Also the company has found that it doesn't matter where it operates from and the owner would like to move to this area.

City administrator Allen Sauerberg explained that the purchase agreement, if the company does not construct its proposed 7,000 square foot building on the property by February 1978, the property will revert to the city.

In other action, the common council approved a resolution of abandonment of State Street from north of Stover Road to M46 and U.S. 31. The road has not existed between the Clark Station, the County Bank building and Erber Oil Company property since 1967 when it was informally abandoned.

The request for formal abandonment was made by Michael Gibbons, representing Erber Oil Company. The city did reserve an easement for any utilities that might be running along the line of the former road.

Council also heard a request from Wayne Hoss for the purchase of a tractor with a briem on it for the maintenance of the ice skating and hockey rinks.

Boss explained the only adequate way to clean the ice is with a briem. If snow is left on the ice when it is being flooded the new surface will not freeze properly.

Boss pointed out the tractor could be used for a lawn mower during the summer. No action was taken on the tractor purchase.

Appointment of members to an Ad Hoc Committee for establishing charges for sewer treatment was discussed but no action was taken. Council will hold a public hearing on the proposed expansion of the sewer system in the city and in the surrounding townships Feb. 21.

High School Falls Short Of Accreditation Criteria

By FRANK MARTIN

Some changes will have to be made at the Charlevoix High School if it wants to keep its North Central accreditation, the Charlevoix Board of Education learned Monday night.

The Code of Federal Regulations for Boards of Education and Administrators was presented for consideration. Action on the policy will be taken at a later date.

At the same time, the board voted to follow its policy of hiring a coach for only one major sport. As a result, the boys track coach position remains open. The athletic director, Dale Burges, will be asked to make a recommendation for the vacancy.

Max Novak, an Ardeth Legion property on school property was designated as a parking area for these people. However, they must request permission from the principal.

The Code of Federal Regulations for Boards of Education and Administrators was presented for consideration. Action on the policy will be taken at a later date.

With the approval of the millage issue, one mill for five years to repair the middle school, the schedule and budget were discussed briefly. At the top of the schedule is the repair replacement of windows to cut back on heat loss.

Hemingway Country Exhibit Donated To County by Consumers Power Co.

"Charlevoix County is Hemingway country, that's why we at Consumers Power Company feel that this exhibit belongs here," Richard Dahlquist, area manager for the Northern Region for the power company, said in presenting a Hemingway display to the county.

The lighted display, which now stands in the lobby of the Charlevoix County Building, contains 12 pictures of scenes of Hemingway Country where the famous author spent many years in his youth.

The exhibit was assembled in the early 1960s for use at the former Big Rock Nuclear Plant Information Center on Little Traverse Bay. The display was viewed by thousands of visitors to the center. Since the closing of the information center, the display has been exhibited in Consumers Power Company offices across the state.

The exhibit is a 7 foot exhibit contains photographs of familiar scenes in Horton Bay and other Charlevoix County communities.

In accepting the gift for the county, Clyde Cunningham, chairman of the county board of commissioners said: "We are indeed fortunate to receive such a fine display. I thought immediately of the county building where it can be shared by everyone who visits the building."

"We do too little to call attention to the county as Hemingway Country," Cunningham continued. "This (display) will surely do that."

Praise Medusa

To the hotline,

We hear so many bad things about Medusa Cement. Why don't you print something good about them.

Like how much they pay for taxes every year. Why don't you print this on the front print.

I think they deserve a pat on the back once in a while.

Fuel Waste

I would like to know why we are paying so much in taxes and fuel at the Middle School when on a day like today they had the windows half open and fuel is so high.

Concerned Taxpayer

From here, where I sit, it seems to me that there is something very fishy going on. On one hand, we are asked to conserve fuel from all sides. On the other side, we are having motor sled races going on all around. Don't they use up precious fuel? And now, you have a young Petroskey father of two dead of racing and on Sunday, yet, those two children will not miss him! Remember, he died while wasting precious fuel. Those snow machines guzzle gas and plenty of it. You don't have a 40 or 50 h.p. motor going full blast on just a snuff of gas. Much as I like to follow the sport, I believe that at a time like now we should be curbed. I think such thoughts as I drag my weary old feet here and there instead of driving and live without visiting distant friends.

P.S.

John Martin

betcha never thought you'd make the front page!

Charter Commission in Dilemma Over How to Handle Utilities

The City Charter Commission is alive and well and working harder than ever. It seems the nine commissioners have hit a snag in the preparation of the proposed charter. They are undecided about how to handle the section dealing with the establishment of a board of water and light.

Last October, the charter commissioners put the finishing touches on the proposed charter and then with common council permission sent the document to a charter consultant attorney for review.

That document contained a section establishing a three-member board to operate the electrical utilities. Presently the city administrator takes care of the utilities as part of city operations.

The charter commissioners believed making the utilities a separate operation would result in a more efficient operation of the $1 million business.

However, the charter consultant raised questions about the wisdom of establishing a separate autonomous board to run the utilities.

So the charter commission rewrote the section turning the water and light board into an advisory council. But, after meeting with Roger Westbrock, manager of REA, and hearing his comments the commissioners were undecided as to which method was better.

"We've hit a real dilemma," John R. Clock, charter commissioner explained. "We have three ways we can go, we can leave the utilities the way they are, we can make a strong, independent board that is free from political pressure, or we can create an advisory panel to the common council."

Clock said the charter commissioner was planning to discuss the dilemma with Richard Gorman, Potosky City Manager, Allen Sandberg, Charlevoix City Administrator, Larry Savage, Traverse City Manager and Forbes Tompkins, Boyne City Manager.

"But we would like to hear what other people have to say about it, too," Clock said. "We are looking for suggestions and would like to have people attend the meetings."

The charter commission has been meeting every Tuesday at 7:30 p.m.

Sharon Alberts, supervisor of the intensive care-coronary care unit at Charlevoix Area Hospital, watches patient monitor.

Charlevoix's Intensive Care Unit Busy

By PAULA HOLMES

The patient is rapidly wheeled down the corridor from the emergency room to a special wing in the hospital.

Immediately several members of the health care team—nurses and technicians—swarm around the heart attack victim and begin attaching him to various machines and performing various tests on him.

In a mere 15 minutes the procedures are finished and the ailing man is resting in his bed in a room in a special wing under the watchful eye of two specially trained nurses and an electronic monitor.

The above may sound like a scene right out of television's "Emergency!" but actually it describes what happens at the Charlevoix Area Hospital when a patient is admitted to the intensive care-coronary care unit (ICCU), according to Sharon Alberts, R.N., supervisor of the ICU wing.

Within 15 minutes of a patient arriving at the ICU door, he or she is attached to a cardiac monitor, an oxygen machine, the blood pressure is taken, the laboratory technician draws blood, the X-ray tech performs a chest X-ray, an electrocardiograph (EKG) test is given, pulse is taken and an intravenous needle is inserted to pump fluids into the patient.

From that point on the vital signs, such as blood pressure and respiration, are checked every 15 minutes until the patient stabilizes, Mrs. Alberts explained.

Two specially-trained nurses on each shift run the three-room unit with the aid of an electronic monitor. The monitor is placed at the patient's bedside and at the nurse's station for complete coverage.

The 11 nurses which staff the ICU section are all certified coronary care nurses. Most of them have taken the special classes through the Michigan Heart Association, while others received training in different places.

The staff also participates in continuing education courses on the bi-monthly basis right in the hospital and they constantly quiz each other to make sure they are up-to-date on the latest procedures.

"The area is so specialized that you have to constantly keep using the information and techniques you have learned or it goes stale," Mrs. Alberts explained.

The ICU unit at Charlevoix Hospital opened in 1973 and was made possible through donations to the hospital in memory of three area residents. The first year the unit cared for 84 patients. Last year more than 190 patients were served in the unit.

Mrs. Alberts said the unit has greatly improved the medical care to area residents. She said 15 patients have been revived after their hearts had stopped due to the special equipment in the unit. Before the unit opened those patients probably would have died, she said.

Also heart attack victims can now be taken directly to Charlevoix hospital instead of to Potosky and this has probably saved many lives, too, Mrs. Alberts said.

Most of the patients admitted to the unit are heart attack victims. However, the unit also has patients suffering from respiratory illness such as asthma and from trauma such as a car accident victim. The unit also cares for post-operative patients.

Ronald Geer, former Charlevoix County Drain Commissioner, was appointed Veterans Affairs Counselor by the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners during its meeting last week.

Geer's appointment was made following more than two months of quibbling between the county commissioners over who actually had the authority to make the appointment, the commissioners or the Committee on Veterans Affairs.

The veterans committee was of the opinion it had the responsibility of appointing the counselor, while several county commissioners felt the county board should make the appointment upon the recommendation of the veterans committee.

To insure that it would make the appointment, the county commissioners voted in December to remove the veterans affairs counselor post from the budget.

Prosecuting Attorney Roy Hayes had issued the opinion that if the post had not been budgeted that only the county commissioners would make the appointment.

Geer will be employed on a half time basis as veterans counselor for a trial period of six months. He was one of three applicants for the job. He replaces Lois Waskoski who resigned from the position two months ago.

In other appointments, Chairman Clyde Cunningham appointed Commissioner John Kujawski to the Criminal Justice Advisory Council, which was formerly the Region 10 detectives board. Commissioner Keith Anear was appointed as an alternate Health Department board and Helen Cherry of South Arm Township, Toni Garlock of Boyne City and Max Novak of Charlevoix were appointed to the Special Elections Scheduling Committee.

James Gels, M.D., was added to the list of county medical examiners.

In other action, the commissioners voted to pay $100 dues to the Michigan Northern Counties Association and $4,885 dues to the Northwest Regional Planning and Development Commission.

The spine is a mighty shock absorber within the body; and it is the structure which protects the spinal cord, the lifeline of the body's nervous system.

Sudden impacts of falls, collisions or "whiplash" which are too heavy for the spine to withstand, can result in painful and often crippling—injuries.

The spine is composed of 24 vertebrae separated by discs. The spinal column contains the spinal cord, consisting of millions of nerves which carry vital nerve energy to all parts of the body.

Broken Water Pipes Cause Drought at Carey Boot Shop

The drought which hit California has spread to Charlevoix.

Carey's Boot Shop on Bridge Street was without water for 10 days, but it wasn't due to the lack of water in the city.

Water was running in the shop on Saturday.

A water service pipe to the store froze and burst last week, cutting off the water supply.

When the city crews attempted to thaw out the pipe, they discovered it had been severed when the gas mains were put in and repaired with a rubber cuff.

City Administrator Allen Sandberg said the city was trying to repair the pipe without digging up the alley because the city would like to replace the entire line in the spring and doesn't want to dig up the alley twice.

"We've been carrying jugs of water from home," Mrs. Charles Carey, owner of the store with her husband, said explaining how they were coping with the situation. "We bring those plastic milk jugs in full of water every morning and they carry us through the day."

Less Furniture warehouse also suffered from the water shortage, but Ralph Iless said it had not affected working conditions.

Sandberg said several water services had frozen during the week along Petoskey Avenue and in the Dixon Avenue area. More than 90 customers were affected by the bursting pipes.

The city administrator said the city is planning to develop a program to lower as many of the water services as possible this summer.

"The pipes are only one inch or three-quarters of an inch and fairly easy to freeze," Sandberg pointed out. "Some of them have been giving us problems even in less severe winters."

Most tankers operating today have good safety records, according to the world's leading maritime insurer, Lloyd's of London. The few exceptions, however, cause dramatic disasters.

Coast Guard figures show 15,000 tankers called at United States ports during 1975, and 85 ran aground. Six of these accidents caused oil spills. Hearings at this session of Congress will consider how to reduce the number of accidents, even though America's oil imports continue to rise.

One petroleum company officer says that using 250,000-ton tankers to deliver Middle East oil to the United States would cut shipping costs by 30 percent.

Letter People Make Learning to Read Lively

ANDY FORTIN works on one of the worksheets that accompanies the Alpha 1 reading program. First grade children have learned how to spell more than 450 words so far this year. Also in front of Andy is one of the meeting greeting cards used to introduce new letters and their sounds to the students at the Charlevoix Elementary School.

FIRST GRADE TEACHER Sue Tillotson explains the difference between letter boys (consonants) and letter girls (vowels) with the aid of a poster from the Alpha 1 reading program now in use at the Charlevoix Elementary School.

By PAULA HOLMES

"Now children, listen closely before you write this word down," the first grade teacher said during a spelling exercise. "This word has something special—a super squish."

"Now think—what's your starting clue box, the catch and the super squish?" she warned.

Sounds like a foreign language, but actually it is the sound of first graders learning how to read at the Charlevoix Elementary School under the new Alpha 1 program.

The Alpha program is a phonetic means of learning to read through the use of visual features which gives them a clue to the sound," Mrs. Tillotson said.

To reinforce the special features, the first graders have been involved in special activities as they were introduced to each letter. When the students met the letter boy T, who happens to have lots of teeth, they took him to the dentist. When they met letter boy V, they made vegetable soup.

"We did as many things as we could to reinforce the sounds of each letter and to introduce them to words that used that letter," Mrs. Tillotson said. "And the parents have been great about cooperating with us during these special activities."

Although this is the first year the entire Alpha program has been used to teach reading at the K-5 school, the program is not new to the students or the teachers.

"We have been using parts of the program for three years as a phonics program in connection with reading, but we didn't place much emphasis on it," Mrs. Tillotson explained.

The teacher said when the program was first introduced, two teachers used Alpha 1 and with it."

The children learn the various letter sounds by meeting letter boys and letter girls. Specially made 1 by 2 foot cards portray the picture of each letter person. The letter boys are consonants and the letter girls are vowels.

And each letter has its own special feature. For instance, the letter boy M, any first grader will tell you, makes an mm sound and has the special feature of munchy mouth.

"The children might not remember what sound the letter makes, but they almost always remember the special feature which gives them a clue to the sound," Mrs. Tillotson said.

No New Taxes Needed On Tourist or Other Industry, Senator Davis

If the Michigan Legislature had its way, Northern Michigan businessmen would board up their windows and put closed signs on all their doors.

At least that's what it looks like with most recent Republican proposals to levy an additional, statewide 1 percent tax on hotel and motel room rates.

Democrats claim the prime backer is State Senator Robert Davis of Gaylord.

In a recent news release, State Senator Michael J. O'Brien (D-Detroit), chairman of the Senate Tourist Industry Relations Committee, criticized the proposed hike saying it is "a bad idea that would severely hamper Michigan's important tourist industry."

Michigan now levies a 4 percent statewide tax on motel and hotel rooms. The revenues generated by this tax, which last year amounted to $6.1 million, go into the state general fund.

In addition, some counties have legislative authority to levy an additional tax on room rates up to 5 percent which must be used to help finance their tourist and convention business promotions.

"Adding on another 1 percent statewide tax to the four percent we now have constitutes a 25 percent increase and would, I am convinced, make it extremely difficult for Michigan to remain competitive in the tourist and conventional business," O'Brien said.

"That extra 1 percent is a lot of money when you're talking in terms of the convention business brought to Michigan by the big corporations and associations."

"Those people will start going elsewhere when they see the difference that 1 percent would make in their hotel and motel bills."

Tourism is Michigan's second largest industry and for our area it is number one.

It's almost hard to believe that a legislator from a resort-oriented area would even consider such an outlandish increase.

Small businessmen in this area are already feeling the pangs from Michigan's new Single Business Tax.

Under the present tax structure, our small businesses, which are heavily labor-oriented, are paying a greater proportion to its earnings than other businesses in metropolitan areas.

This proposed tax hike on motel and hotel room rates would only add an additional burden to an already troublesome situation.

We would hope that our state senator would do everything in his power to realize the taxpayer's burden in Northern Michigan instead of increasing it.

As with his efforts to repeal the Single Business Tax, we will be looking for Senator Davis to block any type of effort to increase the tax burden on our tourist-oriented business.

Schools Should Consider Setting Up Programs For Gifted Students

We urge Charlevoix School District to look into providing special education classes for the gifted children in our school district.

After attending an information session on the various types of programs that can be implemented for gifted children, we feel great strides can be taken to begin programs even without any funding. Phyllis Maul, consultant from the Kalamazoo Valley Intermediate School District, presented many thought-provoking ideas for ways to challenge the bright child on a limited budget during the session.

All such a program takes is some dedication and a little ingenuity on the part of the school district's administrators, counselors, teachers and parents. Mrs. Maul stressed that no one knows the potential of the gifted child and we agreed with her when she said she was sure of one thing—the gifted child will never reach his or her potential if he or she is not challenged in school.

Much time, thought and money has been spent on providing special education programs for mentally, physically and emotionally impaired students. We feel that some time should now be spent to help the gifted student, too.

In the past, it has been thought that the exceptionally bright child could get along by himself or herself. But we don't believe this is true and we urge parents, teachers and administrators to take action to correct the situation.

Coming home to roost.

Clockwise
by Bob Clock

After reading in the Sunday papers how the winter of 1976-77 is dealing a body blow to the psyche of American citizens, I decided to check out the story on my own. I pulled on my Mockinaw and my high buckle arctic and trudged through the latest blizzard to the home of my good friend and analyst, Dr. Seymour Heartache.

I punched the bell and seconds later a uniformed butler was standing in the doorway.

"Is Dr. Heartache in?" I asked stepping into the foyer.

"This is a personal or professional visit?" the butler asked stiffly.

"A little of both," I said.

"You'll find Dr. Heartache in the study," the butler said, motioning toward a massive oak door at the end of the hall.

I let myself in and found my good friend and confidant seated before a roaring fire and smoking a fat Havana cigar. A half filled brandy snifter stood at attention at his elbow and stacks of market quotations were piled on the sofa beside him.

Dr. Heartache seemed genuinely glad to see me and after exchanging pleasantries he pulled up a chair for me in front of the fireplace.

"You must be doing very well," I commented, sitting down and accepting a drink of brandy. "I've never seen you better before."

"It's the weather," Dr. Heartache smiled. "This is the best winter in years."

"It's the new! Brand new this winter," Seymour boomed. "Well I tell you, the money was rolling in so fast I just didn't have time to spend it. So I asked myself, why not a bigger? I found him in the Nieman-Marcos catalogue. It's a real gem."

"How come you're so busy all of a sudden?" I asked.

"It's the weather," Dr. Heartache smiled maliciously, looking out the window at the swirling snowflakes and trees bent double by the wind. "I have never diagnosed so many acute cases of cabin fever during my quarter century on the couch. It's almost an epidemic. My appointment calendar is booked solid through March and there's no end in sight."

"How do you diagnose cabin fever in its early stages," I said unceasingly.

"Oh, there are many symptoms," Dr. Heartache said.

Letters to the editor

Urges Local Attendance At Energy Seminar

Dear Editor:

On February 17, at 7:30 p.m. a meeting on the subject of energy will be held in the Board room at Northern Michigan Electric Co-op, across from the High School athletic field. Clyde Johnston, of NMEC, will be the principal speaker. His subject will be power generation, not rates, but it should help everyone to understand the correlation between generators, lines and rates. If you use electricity, this meeting should be worth your time.

We have had personal dialog with Mr. Johnston, among others, on the whole problem for some weeks, and this meeting is a direct result of the dialog, so we are sure it can be a fruitful session.

In course of discussions with many people concerning energy, we have come across a phenomenon that needs exploration. It has two facets. First, there is a semantic problem, we say "energy," nine out of ten replies indicate the listener heard "nuclear." Reminds us of the priest who heard "money" when we said "charity."

Energy, like God, is everywhere. It is in sunlight, wind, water, earth, plants, animals and in our own living bodies. Nuclear energy is only one very exotic and powerful form of energy, and we would like to suggest it is time to clarify these word meanings. Otherwise, we can never get down to the essential task of communicating about either word.

The second facet of the problem is the effect of the word "nuclear" has on people. It's too bad we don't have a Mark Twain, or a Will Rogers to do this part, lacking that, we submit our humble effort. Nuclear energy has proponents and opponents who are very strong, and after enough conversation with both sides, it begins to come across to us as a new form of the ancient "babe of the sea" story, although there are males and females on both sides. Simply expression, then, we shall call all pros "he" and all cons "she."

He sees nuclear power as something glamorous, exciting, a holy grail which will bring him straight to heavenly glory. If he can just get his hands on it, he calls it a "nuclear romance," a very love affair with an atom.

She sees nuclear power as something hideous, disgusting, an abomination, a desecration, a frightful thing. She does not want anyone to use it, she fears its effect on herself and her children. She calls it "nuclear fever," disease that will destroy life from the face of the earth.

The quarrels between this "couple" have repercussions that would put the biggest H-bomb to shame. Consider lawyers weeping or having violent temper tantrums in court. Judge treating the litigants and their attorneys as criminals in the course of civil actions. Newspaper headlines describe the action, "generating bitterness" instead of electricity.

Thus do puny creatures, floating on tiny grain of dust in the vastness of the universe, disrupt ourselves. It's enough to make one weep, but it might be better if we'd all snuff it each other and see if we can't find a place to start over.

A good place to start could be the above-mentioned meeting. Please come, and bring lots of good will and smiles.

Sincerely,
Bob & Lucille McKown

It was one of those days when I wanted my own apartment. Unlisted. My son was telling me in complete detail about a movie he had just seen, punctuated by "3,000." You know? "My teeth were falling asleep."

There were three phone calls—strike that—three monologues that could have been answered by a recording. I fought the urge to say, "It's been nice listening to you."

In the cab from home to the airport, I got another assault on my ear, this time by a cab driver who was rambling on about his son whom he supported in college, and in his last year, you put a P.S. on his letter saying, "I got married. Her name is Diana." I told him, "What do you think of that?" and proceeded to answer the question himself.

There were 30 whole beautiful minutes before my plane took off. Time I spent with a man with no thoughts, to open a book and let my mind wander. A voice next to me belonging to an elderly woman said, "I'll bet it's cold in Chicago."

Stone-faced I answered, "It's likely." "I haven't been to Chicago in nearly three years," she persisted. "My son lives there."

"That's nice," I said, my eyes intent on the printed page of the book.

"My husband's body is on this plane."

"I don't think I have ever detected myself more than I did at that moment. Another human being was screaming to be heard and in desperation had turned to a cold stranger who was more interested in a novel than the real-life drama at her elbow."

All she needed was a listener, no advice, wisdom, experience, money, assistance, expertise or even compassion, but just a minute or two to listen.

It seemed rather incongruous that in a society of super-sophisticated communication, we often suffer from a shortage of listeners.

We talked nonstop and steadily until we boarded the plane, then found her seat in another section. As I hung up my coat, I heard her plaintive voice say to her seat companion, "I'll bet it's cold in Chicago."

"I prayed," I said, "Please God, let her listen."

Why am I telling you this? To make me feel better. It won't help, though. (Copyright 1977 Film Enterprises, Inc.)

No Pictures Please

My pet peeve is newspapers that publish pictures of lost pets, trying to find homes for them. My wife doesn't need any help adopting strays, and I would appreciate it if the dumb newspapers would hush off.

You've seen those pictures. A cute little puppy with warm eyes has been dumped off at the dog pound by the meanest friend in town. The dog answers to the name of Adorable and loves little children, old people, and naturalized citizens. He hasn't been fed in three months and you can hang your heart on his ribs, please.

This lost dog is scheduled to be stomped to death and minced, not necessarily in that order, five minutes after you see his picture which was taken on death row. His only chance for salvation is you, the reader.

Is there room in your heart, and in your 15-hour home, for one cuddly little puppy who never hurt anyone and who wants nothing more than to live, to lick your hand, and to chew your furniture?

Will you let this puppy die?

The next day the newspaper brings that, as a result of its puppy story and whopping circulation, 3,456 people stormed the dog pound, screaming to adopt Adorable.

Fortunately, the dog had already been minced, so everyone got some.

But, anyway, my wife doesn't need to look in the newspaper to find stray dogs. She can tell a lost dog from a found dog just by hearing it bark 15 blocks away.

AND SHE IS NOT UNUSUAL. I recently surveyed 22 men, all married and all sitting on bar stools. Each man admitted his wife was a pushover for unloved strays of all breeds.

In fact, 17 of the men said that's what caused their marriages. They had once been strays themselves. Ten of the men still wore collars with buckles. Five of them revealed broken leashes tucked into their pants. And one man swore his name was Prince.

According to my wife, stray dogs are always running away from cruel homes. They are never lost because they are dumb. They are lost because they had to flee 600 miles to escape viciousation, and they must travel without the aid of a road map. Did you ever see a dog with a glove compartment?

During a recent Sunday stroll, I asked my wife, "How do you know that dog is lost? It's wearing a vest and a tie and appears well fed. It is trotting purposefully. How do you know it is not on the way to a happy home and a kettie of cats?"

"I can tell," she said. "That dog is lost. We should take it home."

THIS IS A REMARKABLE talent and she does not reserve it for animals. My wife can pass a stranger on the street and immediately tell you if he is lost.

"That man is not happy," she said one block past the dog. "I think his wife has left him and she won't let him visit the children. So he doesn't know what to do with himself on Sunday afternoons."

"Well," I said. "We certainly should take him home and give him some Alpo."

It's worse with children.

"Look at that mother," she said a few minutes later in a crowded shopping center. "She is yanking her little girl around by the arm. She boogies at her and she has been slapping her. I'll bet she beats the poor little girl every night."

"I know it belongs to that poor little girl. I can tell by the way she keeps peeping the air."

It was easy to find the husband. His broken leash was trailing out of his pants and rattling on the sidewalk.

Onward and Upward.

Meet Charlevoix

...Gene Steele

The Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce is an important part of our town. The chamber has been instrumental in bringing more tourist trade to the community and is making Charlevoix a nicer place to live.

This week Gene Steele, the newly elected president of the chamber board of directors, talks about the direction he would like to see the chamber take and about the upcoming Winter Cup Festival, which will be held Feb. 25-26-27.

COURIER: What would you like to see the chamber accomplish during your term of office?

STEELE: I would like to see us establish a better line of communication between the members, the board, Jacques (Marta, executive director), and myself. One thing we're planning to do is hold general membership meetings so that we can get the feeling of the people who belong to the chamber. Also Jacques and I will be spending more time talking with various members to get their feelings on things.

COURIER: Do you have any other goals you would like to accomplish?

STEELE: I would like to see more local businessmen join the chamber and I would like to see the members become more active in participating in chamber activities. The chamber is just like most organizations, a few people carry the ball. I would like to see more people get involved.

COURIER: When Jack Wilson of the State Travel Bureau, spoke to the chamber he suggested that one way to increase an area's tourist business was to plan more events for the off seasons in the spring and fall. Is the chamber planning to do that?

STEELE: I would like to see us extend the tourist season to six months from the two and one-half to three months it is now. People mean commerce and commerce means dollars. We're a tourist town and I would rather see us be that way than an industrial town. But, that means it is important for us to do things to get people up here. We are planning to extend the color cruises in the fall and I would like to see us add something in the spring. Also with the increased interest in cross country skiing we may be able to increase the market in the winter. I know the people are going to like the area once they get here. We have plenty of other things for them to do when they are here.

COURIER: Will you be able to accomplish all these things?

STEELE: We may not be able to get them all done during my term in office, but I think we will accomplish a lot. The chamber has a fine board this year and the members have a lot of enthusiasm. I see great things happening here this year.

COURIER: Tell us about the Winter Cup Festival.

STEELE: It occurred to me that this is a good time of year to have some activity. A few years ago Dave Phillips started Marlin Gras to fill in the void and that was a good function. But I felt that a lot of people didn't participate in it because of the nature of the activity. Along with the Marlin Gras, the Charlevoix Lions Club has also been holding a winter carnival. Both activities were good ideas, but neither was doing very well. We felt it might be better to combine the two events and not have them conflicting with each other. It was natural to turn both events into the Winter Cup Festival.

COURIER: A lot of sporting events are included in the winter's winter festival, why?

STEELE: Because we are in the middle of the snow belt, it is only natural that any type of winter celebration would include winter sports. It was only logical that we would use the facilities we have such as the McSaba and the hockey rink, to come up with a good fun weekend that everyone could be a part of.

COURIER: How long have you been a member of the chamber?

STEELE: I've been a member ever since Charlevoix Properties started three years ago. I have been on the board of directors for two years.

COURIER: When did you come to Charlevoix?

STEELE: I moved here in 1971 with my wife Barbara and my two boys Michael, 10, and Charles, 7, from Grosse Pointe.

Needs Study Completed for Advisory Board

An evaluation of client needs at area centers for mentally impaired people has been completed. The Northern Michigan Community Mental Health Services Board learned at a recent meeting, Debbie Edwards, occupational therapist for the centers, reported "she had completed her evaluation of the needs and will now turn her attention to specific needs of clients."

The Program and Planning Committee will now visit each of the centers the board funds to review their 1976 evaluations. The centers involved include the Bergman Center and Charlevoix House in Charlevoix, the Lamplighter in Cheboygan, and the Gaylord Opportunity Center. The committee is composed of Sam Kose and Lillian Bergman, chairman of the board from Charlevoix County, Pauline Menninger, Elmer County, Lonney Campbell, Oscoda County and Howard Randall, Cheboygan County.

The mental health board was also advised that CETA positions had been funded through Sept. 30, 1977. Each agency the board funds has at least one CETA employee.

The board meeting is scheduled for 8 p.m. March 3 at the administrator's office, 325 E. Lake St. in Petoskey.

Petition Due Date Set Earlier in School Board Race

Nominating petitions for school board positions will be due earlier this year due to a change in the election laws. Because of the change, nominating petitions will have to be filed nine weeks prior to the actual school election instead of 20 days before the election as in the past. Charlevoix Superintendent James A. McKinney has advised residents of the Charlevoix School District. Candidates seeking election to the Charlevoix Board of Education during the scheduled June 13 election will find their nominating petitions by 4 p.m. on April 11.

A second change in the election law requires circulating the petitions in each voter registration unit in the school district. For example, a petition must carry the name of the unit of government where the petition was circulated—either the number of the ward in the City of Charlevoix or the name of each township in the school district. In the past, a single petition could be circulated any place within the school district.

The number of signatures needed to have a candidate's name placed on the ballot is based on 1 percent of the number of votes the largest vote-getter received in the last election. In the Charlevoix School District this amounts to 20 signatures.

Nominating petitions may be obtained at the school business office on Garfield Avenue or at the county clerk's office.

Special Ed Needed for Gifted Students, Too

Exceptionally intelligent students have been considered to be the children with the least problems in the classroom by teachers, administrators and parents alike.

But this is not necessarily true, according to Phyllis Maul, consultant with the Kalamazoo Valley Intermediate School District.

"Sometimes I think gifted students are the most handicapped of all students in the classroom," Mrs. Maul said while conducting a seminar on programs for the gifted child at the Charlevoix-Emmett Intermediate School District last week.

"One of the brightest students I ever had was getting Ds in English," she continued. "He would play games with the teacher and answer the first three questions on a test perfectly and then quite down the test. He wasn't being challenged and he decided to play games instead."

Heart Disease Major Killer in Area

Is the mortality from heart disease on the decline in Charlevoix County? How big a hazard does it continue to be, locally and in other areas of the country?

Special interest centers on the disease at this time because February has been designated National Heart Month and because of recent reports by the National Center for Health Statistics and others, that a reduction in the heart toll has finally been recorded.

The number of deaths in the United States from heart disease, the general term that includes strokes and other ailments of the cardiovascular system, has dropped to less than one million a year, the figures for the last two years show. The mortality is now down to 979,000.

The reduction is attributed chiefly to the development of improved methods of diagnosing and treating the disease and to new surgical procedures, dietary controls and a cutback in cigarette smoking among older people.

In Charlevoix County, heart disease is responsible for some 56.1 percent of the total mortality, based upon an average of the last three annual reports made by the U.S. Public Health Service. Elsewhere throughout the United States, by way of comparison, it accounts for 51.4 percent of the total. It amounts to 53.8 percent in the State of Michigan.

Despite the gains that have been made, however, heart disease remains the biggest threat to human life, causing more than one-half of all deaths in this country. In Charlevoix County's area, where the official reports show the average annual mortality from heart disease, cancer, accidents and all other causes at 190 a year over the three-year period, some 110 are attributed to heart disease. Not included are deaths locally of non-residents.

The nation's economic loss resulting from heart disease comes to approximately $23 billion a year, according to an estimate made by the Health Insurance Institute. This includes medical expenses, loss of income, reduced production and the like.

The cost in Charlevoix County, on that basis, related to the incidence of heart disease locally, is about $2,845,000 a year.

Many Men in County Choose Early Retirement

In Charlevoix County, as well as in most other sections of the country, a significant portion of the male population over age 18 is, by choice, not going to school, not working and not intending to work.

For the most part, they are able-bodied men who have sufficient sources of income or adequate financial backing to enable them to get along without working, many of them at a comparatively young age. Also among them are people who are unable to work because of poor health.

In this non-work category, based upon the latest figures from the Department of Labor and the Department of Commerce, are an estimated 1,110 local residents. Included are some 310 who are between 16 and 65 and 800 who are over 65.

They represent 19.4 percent of the county's population.

It was cold also. I think our County plows are doing a wonderful job in keeping our county roads open this severe winter weather.

Rayders Rout Ramblers

By FRANK MARTIN
With two games remaining to be played, the Charlevoix Rayders assured themselves of part of the Michigan-Huron Shores basketball title Friday night with a 58-52 victory over Boyne City.

Charlevoix will travel to Petoskey on Friday and will host Gaylord in the final game of the season the following week.

The game between the arch rivals got off to a slow start with five minutes passing before either team found the basket. Charlevoix went ahead 4-0 but the Ramblers came back to take an 11-6 first period lead.

Six baskets by the Rayders, including three by Klooster, two by Doan and one by Dave Tollas kept Charlevoix in the game as the third period ended 34-34. At this point

Three buckets each by Matt Doan and Bud Klooster and one each by Pat Schaefer and Neil Dziedzic brought the Rayders into the 22-22 half-time tie.

Charlevoix had not made a free throw, counting entirely on points from the floor. The Ramblers, on the other hand, had 13 buckets and eight free throws.

With the pressure on and the Rayders in control of the ball most of the time, the Ramblers sent Rayders to the free throw line to pick up 12 of their 24 points scored in the final period. The Ramblers had their best period from the floor scoring six field goals. Charlevoix had a total of 23 field goals and 12 of 22 free throws. The Ramblers came through with 20 field goals and 12 of 21 free throws. The Rayders had 20 personal fouls and the Ramblers 21.

Charlevoix capitalized on 45 percent of their shots from the floor as the Ramblers connected on 40 percent.

Klooster again paced the game with 21 points followed by Matt Doan with 19, Schaefer with six and Doan, Tollas and Dziedzic with four each.

Boone's Greg Upton was held to 14 points. Ted Beyer had 11.

JVs Lose Squeaker To Boyne City Team

A last quarter surge by the Boyne City JV's cost the Charlevoix team a victory Friday night as the visitors won 60-59.

Charlevoix had taken a 12-7 first period victory and held on to a 25-22 halftime and 42-39 third period lead only to see it evaporate as time ran out.

The young Rayders had 23 field goals and 13 of 23 charity shots while collecting 20 personal fouls. Boyne City came through with 24 field goals and connected on 12 of 26 free throws. The team had 22 personal fouls.

Pat Schmidt and Doug Buday had 14 points each; Kevin Kratt 11, Barney Way eight and Gilbert Nolrot and Bob Plunin six each.

Tim Hartwick had 14 points, Dean Hicks 12 and Mike Anzell 11 for the visitors.

COUNCIL MINUTES

FEBRUARY 7, 1977 8:00 p.m. The Common Council of the City of Charlevoix met on the above date and time with Mayor Hansen presiding. Aldermen present: Morris, Plumm, Wood, Whitley, and Wallace. Absent: Alderman Erber.

Mayor Hansen corrected the Council Minutes of January 24, 1977, changing the motion to appoint Robert Timms, Dan W. Genei, and Robert A. Barnum as "members" of the Board of Review, rather than "candidates" as it now reads. The minutes were approved as corrected.

Enter Alderman Erber. Several residents of the Southside Apartments appeared before the Council to ask Council's assistance in their effort to block an increase in their rent. Mayor Hansen informed the General Public present that ownership of Southside Apartments had changed hands and the City may not have the right to interfere legally in this matter. He suggested the residents try to get the status of the Southside Apartments changed by F.H.A. from low income housing, as it is currently, subsidized housing, which would put a ceiling on rent charges equal to 25 percent of a resident's income. The Mayor will try to determine if a large enough percentage of the present residents have incomes that would justify the change of status by F.H.A.

Hill Vogel appeared before the Council, representing the Charlevoix Lion's Club and the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce, to request use of the City sidewalks, streets, and park property for a cross country ski race on February 26, 1977. The event, part of the Winter Cup Festival to be held February 25-27, 1977. Mr. Vogel also said events would be held at Mt. McSaba Ski Hill and the Middle School hockey rink.

A motion was offered by Alderman Wallace and supported by Alderman Morris to allow the Charlevoix Lion's Club and the Chamber of Commerce use of the City sidewalks, streets, and park property for a cross country ski race on February 26, and Mt. McSaba Ski Hill, and the Middle School hockey rink for Winter Cup Festival events February 25-27, 1977. Motion was adopted by the following yeas and nays: Yeas: Aldermen Morris, Plumm, Wood, Whitley, Erber, and Wallace. Nays: None. Absent: None.

Wayne Boss appeared before Council to request that they consider the purchase of a small tractor, with a broom mounted on a hydraulic front lift for sweeping the ice skating rink and the hockey rink. The matter was referred to the Utility Committee for their consideration and recommendation.

A written request submitted by Bruce McPhillips, raising his fee for plowing snow at the Airport from $2.00 per hour to $3.00 per hour was referred to the Airport Committee for their study and recommendation.

Resolution No. 77-24 to waive the residence requirement for Alderman Black, full-time secretary for the Office of City Administrator, was referred to the Ordinance Committee to determine if the present residency requirement is adequate and/or desirable.

The following Resolution was offered and moved for its adoption by Alderman Wood, and supported by Alderman Whitley.

RESOLUTION. RESOLVED, that the City of Charlevoix absolutely abandon that portion of former State Street from North of Stover Road to M-46 and U.S. 31, being 350 feet of the City of Charlevoix Street System.

SUBJECT: HOWEVER, to a reservation of an easement over and/or across and under property as may be necessary for the purpose of constructing and/or maintaining sewer mains, water mains, gas mains, and/or electric light or telephone conduits.

Resolution was adopted by the following yeas and nays: Yeas: Aldermen Morris, Plumm, Wood, Whitley, Erber, and Wallace. Nays: None. Absent: None.

Council adjourned.

City Denies Grey Gables Permit

By PAULA HOLMES
Charlevoix Common Council may end up in court over its decision Monday night to deny an entertainment permit for the Grey Gables Inn.

"We'll just have to take this to court," Dave Phillips, owner of the establishment, calmly told friends and supporters as he left the common council chambers following the 4-2 vote upholding the denial of the permit.

Phillips had been seeking council approval of an entertainment permit would allow him to continue holding the dinner-theater presentations he started last summer. The performances were held in the banquet room addition to the Grey Gables.

Alderman Susan Erber reported to the council that following committee investigation of the situation, she was recommending denial of the entertainment permit because of the parking problem on Belvedere Avenue.

Mrs. Erber said she had received seven letters from Grey Gables neighbors, and other aldermen, particularly Joe Morris and George Plumm who represent the ward, said they had received numerous phone calls complaining about the parking problem.

However, the council chambers Monday night held about 20 people who had come to support Phillips in his bid for the permit.

Michael Gibbons, Phillips' attorney, pointed out to the council that the State Liquor Control Commission had approved the permit following its own investigation. Gibbons also pointed out that the state committee had not taken into consideration in its study of the permit application.

"Council has a chance to act innovatively with this permit," Gibbons urged. "Denial of the permit doesn't serve the citizens that have complained about the parking and it deprives others of the dinner-theater, a thing of a cultural nature that has not been available in our city."

Another city resident added: "Dave Phillips has done more for this town than anyone else and if this council does not pass this they should all be taken off it."

But common council was unmoved and upon motion by Mrs. Erber, which was supported by Morris, denied the permit. Aldermen Erber, Morris, Plumm and Ivan Whitley supported the denial while Aldermen Jeannine Wallace and Ray Wood opposed it.

Mayor Edward Hansen pointed out that the council had been assured two previous times that adequate parking would be provided for Grey Gables customers.

"But it has never materialized," Hansen said. "For council to approve this for a third time, is not prudent."

Council members did say they would be open to suggestions from Phillips over parking improvements.

School Board Hires Presnell, Evans as Track Coaches

By FRANK MARTIN
The Charlevoix Board of Education hired a track coach and an assistant track coach, selected a realtor to sell the Building Trades house, and approved a Code of Ethical Relationships Monday night.

Plas Presnell, who has been a member of the Charlevoix High School faculty for three years, was named track coach and Hal Evans, who has been with the school system four years was appointed assistant track coach. Both have served as assistant football coaches.

The Thomas Real Estate Co. was selected as the realty agency to handle the sale of the building trades project house located in Hampton Village. A second bid was received from Charlevoix Properties but since this firm had handled the sale for two years it was decided to go with the Thomas agency. There is an arrangement, however, whereby either realtor may sell the property and share in the commission.

The board approved the Code of Ethical Relationships for Board of Education members and educational administrators as per recommendation of the Michigan Association of School Boards. The policy had been presented at an earlier meeting.

A proposed policy for procedures for boards of education business were introduced for study and will be acted on at a later date.

Supt. James A. McKinney reported on a request made earlier regarding the possibility of having a member of the board become a candidate for the Char-Etu Intermediate School District Board of Education. There had been a question regarding conflict of interest but under a recent court ruling, upsetting a 1965 opinion, it would be possible to serve on both boards.

After hearing the opinion, Max Novak, president of the board said "This end of the county is long overdue for representation on the board. I think we should support such a candidate."

In reporting on the high S.E.V. school districts consortium which Charlevoix joined earlier in an effort to halt the loss of state aid revenue, Supt. McKinney reported that the appeal to have the issue heard by the Supreme Court had been denied.

In reporting on the recent meeting with the Charlevoix County Road Commission regarding snow plowing on weekends so school buses could run on Monday, Supt. McKinney said that the experience was "frustrating." However, the road commission decided later to use funds made available by the Board of Commissioners from anti-recessional fiscal funds to keep roads open so the problem was solved for this year.

March 7 was set as the date for the next meeting.

Winter will reign supreme over Charlevoix this weekend as the community celebrates the Winter Cup Festival.

Sponsored by the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce and the Charlevoix Lions Club, the event will feature a variety of winter sports for which trophies, medals and patches will be awarded.

Many Pavech, former Red Wing hockey player, will be in town to present the trophies and other awards.

The ice sculpture by Charlevoix High School students will be staged in East Park. The judging Friday afternoon will officially launch the festival. Prizes in the amount of $100, $50 and $25 are being offered for the best sculpture done by classes, clubs or individuals affiliated with the school.

Saturday's events are designed for winter sports enthusiasts who wish to participate. These events will include the Cross Country Ski Cup races at 10 a.m.; the open ski cup races at Mt. McSaba for 15-19 year old boys and girls at 1 p.m. followed by the Mardi Gras ski competition for boys and girls under 18 years of age. This event is sponsored by the Grey Gables Inn.

The cross country races at 10 a.m. will begin at the municipal dock where entries may register beginning at 9 a.m. The races will feature three races, the one kilometer for the kids plus 10 and 25 kilometers for all entries. The races will start from the dock and travel a route out Park ave. to Lake Michigan, along the lake to Melissa and return via Grant st. to Park ave. and to Bridge st. and north across the bridge and out Michigan ave.

Registration for the downhill races at Mt. McSaba at 1 p.m. will begin BILL CUNNINGHAM describes where the expanded sewer treatment system will go in the city of Charlevoix, during a public hearing on the topic Monday night in the common council chambers.

Few Objections Raised Against Proposed Sewer

By PAULA HOLMES
Few objections were raised during the unveiling of a proposed expanded sewer treatment system for Charlevoix Monday night.

At a public hearing on the proposed expansion, Wayne Bross and Bill Cunningham, engineers connected with Shadko and Associates, engineers for the project, suggested the city complete separation of the combined storm and sanitary sewer system, increase the capacity of the May Street interceptor, service the Terrace Avenue area, the Robinson Street area, the Stover Road area from May Street to Ferry Avenue and extend service along the east side of U.S. 31.

The engineers explained that the separation of the combined storm and sanitary sewer systems was necessary to provide increased sanitary sewer capacity so that outlying townships could connect into the Charlevoix system.

The city has been designated as part of a sewer facilities area which includes: Charlevoix, Haynes, Marion, Norwood and Eveline townships, by the Department of Natural Resources (DNR). The governmental units have been given a special grant to study the most effective means of handling waste materials in the area.

According to the engineers, the most effective means of taking care of sewage is to have the outlying townships connect with the city sewer treatment facility.

The engineers also pointed out that separation of the storm and sanitary sewer system would prevent the raw sewage overflows that now occur in the Pine River channel during the rainy season.

The men said the sewer system had been expanded into certain areas of town because it was needed.

"Who needs it," one couple asked. "We own most of Westwood Avenue and we didn't ask for it."

However no one else voiced any objections to having the sewer system expanded into their area.

The completion of the separation of the storm and sanitary sewers is expected to cost $671,000, the engineers said, with the local share amounting to $134,000. The city would pay 50 percent of the cost and the townships would foot the rest of the bill.

The total cost of the proposed extension of the sanitary sewer to Terrace Street, Ferry Avenue and Eaton Street would cost $25,500 with the local share amounting to $10,500. The cost of expanding along Bridge Street from Carpenter Street to the south city limits would cost $131,438 with a local share of $26,288.

Sewer expansion along Robinson Street and Westwood Avenue would amount to $46,575 with a local share of $9,315 and along Belvedere Avenue from May Street to Bridge Street would cost $50,019 with a local share of $10,004, which would be born by the townships.

Sewer costs would be born by the residents through a fee schedule set by the city. The engineers recommended setting up an ad hoc committee to figure out the costs the township residents would have to pay.

Letters Help to Break Down Walls

By PAULA HOLMES
He walked quickly into the room and took a seat next to the strangers.
The blue of his shirt was reflected in his blue eyes which were somehow distant and guarded. They looked at the strangers and they then darted quickly away.
His youthful face belied his years and concealed the eagerness he had learned, but his body did not. He slouched carefully in the vinyl chair writing up an invisible and yet constructive wall between him and the visitors.
For Robert Powell, 1973, an inmate at Marquette State Prison, life is a series of walls and bars, real and imagined. In the four years Powell has been in prison serving a life sentence for second degree murder, he had learned to be careful of everything.
Yet as guarded as he is, Powell still seeks contact—meaningful relationships—with the outside world as he copes with life on the inside.

It was his desire for this outside contact that led him to participate in a pen pal relationship with a Charlevoix family, the Ron Ritsmas.

"When you are in prison you have a real need for contact with the outside world," Powell explained. "The only way you can get it is by corresponding with someone on the outside."
And that search for outside contact can bring involvement with a variety of different people, Powell said.
"I was involved in a pen pal program with the Worldwide Church of God before I met the Ritsmas," the inmate explained.
He answered a request for minutes looking for pen pals and got 70 responses from various people.
"Of course I had trouble writing to all of them," he said. "I would just get a batch of letters done and it was time to start all over again."

"Some of them got mad and quit writing," he continued. "Others had problems of their own and would write to discuss them with me."
"I ran into a lot of people that had problems and didn't know where to look," he recalled.
He even received a letter from a divorced woman saying that she wanted to marry him. She came to the prison to meet him and brought her children along, too.
"I could have married her and made it look good on the record," he mused. "But I told her she didn't need me."

So Powell was wary when he again put his name in the list as an inmate who would like to correspond with someone in the congregation of the Atwood Christian Reformed Church. But he found the Ritsmas interesting and kept up the letter exchange.
"I didn't know what to think about them," he recalled. "I was beginning to wonder with the others if a good relationship could exist through correspondence and I began to wonder about the Ritsmas, too."
"I wondered what their interest was," he said.
But the correspondence flourished and soon Nancy Ritsma had plunged into helping Powell develop the thesis he was working on for his masters degree in elementary education.
A former elementary school teacher, Powell began work on his masters almost as soon as he entered Marquette Prison.

"If you have had an education, the prison system offers you nothing," he explained soberly. "I had to work on my masters. I had to do something."
Northern Michigan University (NMU) offers undergraduate courses at the prison and Powell saw them as his chance to get started with his advanced degree.
So he enrolled in a masters program at the university and began a course that took him all the way to the University of South Dakota in an attempt to complete classes that would qualify him for that degree.
Now he is working on his thesis on tutoring, again with the help of correspondence. A teacher in Nebraska, who corresponds with another inmate at Marquette, has agreed to carry out whatever experiments he needs to complete the paper.
And for one man, through correspondence and concern, the walls are tumbling down.

THE WALLS of this castle-like building separate the inmates of Marquette State Prison from contact with the outside world. Several Charlevoix residents are trying to help him stay in contact through a penpal program.

...And to Show People Care

By PAULA HOLMES
"There's one basic human need and that is to know that someone cares for you," the woman said in a soft voice.
And in her own small way Nancy Ritsma is trying to let one person—a complete stranger to her—a few short months ago, know that she cares about him and wants to make a difference in his life.
Nancy, her husband Ron, and her four children participate in a pen pal correspondence with Robert Powell, an inmate at Marquette State Prison. The family knew nothing about the man when they started writing to him. He was just a name on a list of people who needed friends.
The letter writing began as a project of the Evangelical Committee at the Atwood Christian Reformed Church. Another couple at the church was writing to an inmate in an Ohio prison and suggested that they write to him, too.
Mrs. Ritsma said her family had gained a lot from the pen pal experience, too. "I wanted the children to learn about the importance of caring for other people," she explained. "This was their learning something that was caught rather than taught."
Mrs. Ritsma said the family had learned a lot about the corrections system, through the correspondence, too. "Rehabilitation doesn't exist," she said. "The men need to have better work opportunities so that their time is occupied with worthwhile things to do."
The Narwood resident feels one way people on the outside can help in the rehabilitation process is through a pen pal correspondence.
When we talk about rehabilitating crime, we should be willing to do something about it," she said. "And the problem stems from no rehabilitation and no follow up once the person is out of jail. When a person gets out of jail he goes right back into the situation that got him in jail in the first place," she continued. "One thing that citizens for you is to keep up these correspondences and help the person get reeducated."
Mrs. Ritsma suggested anyone interested in corresponding with an inmate write to the prison chaplain and ask for a list of names of people who would be interested in correspondence.

Charlevoix Losing Its Sweetness, Sugar Maple Trees Dying Off

There's a new sound coming across the airwaves in Northern Michigan.
"WJML radio station in Petoskey is under new ownership and is trying some new things."
The Harrington Broadcasting Company, owner of the station, was sold to a group of Muskegon investors, called Greater Muskegon Broadcasters Inc., and has been renamed Petoskey Broadcasting Company. The sale was effective Feb. 1.
"Since the purchase some changes have been made in the news presentation, the 'Sound Off' and 'Instant Ads' programs and in the music format."
Most of the major changes that were going to be made have already taken place," Dave Walker, operations director, explained.
"From now on WJML listeners will be hearing network news at five minutes before the hour and local and regional news a few minutes before that, Walker said.
"And there will be more emphasis on news in the morning," Walker said. "We have added programs of entirely local and regional news at 6:25, 7:25 and 8:25 a.m."
Walker said the changes had been made to better serve the listeners.
"Most people have to be at work on the hour—7 a.m., 8 a.m. and 9 a.m. so they would miss the newscasts," he pointed out. "Now they can hear the news on their way to work."
Changes were also made in the "Instant Ads" program so that working people would also be able to participate in the program, Walker said. Instant Ads will now be aired seven days a week at 10:20 a.m. and 11:20 and 2:20 p.m.
Walker said the same number of calls will be taken just at three different times.
"We believe in the theory of the program it was just that it was at a set time and not everyone could take advantage of it," Mike Harrington said while discussing the changes.
The "Sound Off" program has also been changed to Action Line. Under the new program, a phone line is left open between 5 and 6 p.m. for area listeners to call in their concerns and questions about issues in Northern Michigan.
"The questions will be recorded and then the next day the news department will contact someone that can answer the question," Walker explained. "Then the question and answer will be aired during the day."
"Instead of just listening to complaints we're willing to solve problems," Walker said.
As far as the music is concerned it will be the same that has always been played.

Charlevoix Losing Its Sweetness, Sugar Maple Trees Dying Off

A little of the sweetness is going out of Charlevoix.
Many of the sugar maples that have been the providers of sap for the Charlevoix maple syrup makers are dying, according to Allen Sandberg, city administrator.
Sandberg said he wasn't sure why the trees were dying, but he pointed out that the sugar maple variety is not salt tolerant and that most of the maple trees in town are planted along major streets.
"I may be that over the years the salt has seeped down into the ground to a point where it is affecting the roots," Sandberg said.
The city official said utility department crews were currently in the process of removing about 50 dead trees from city streets, most of them sugar maples. Sandberg said the trees had been checked in the fall and marked with an orange dot so that the city crews could cut them down during the winter months.
The city administrator said that many of the trees would be replaced with new ones, although it will depend on the spacing as to where the new trees are planted.
He also said the sugar maples would not be replaced. "Their root systems are too large and they crack the sidewalks and get into the sewer pipes," he explained.

To Help Get Program Underway

Improvements should be completed at Lake Michigan Beach Park by the end of the year thanks to the efforts of the city and the Charlevoix Women's Club.
The city has received a $5,000 grant from the Bureau of Outdoor Recreation (BOR) for driveway repair, drinking fountain construction and the construction of ramps to the bath house for handicapped people.
The construction must be completed by the end of the year and the city and the women's club are working together to get the program going.
The city is also considering seeking another grant from the BOR which is designed to prevent erosion in critical areas. These funds would be used to develop hiking paths in the park to prevent erosion by walking where no path exists. Development of a parking area would also be included in the application for the second grant.

Sheriff's Department Busy This Week

The number of complaints received by the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department increased to 45 the week of Feb. 11-18 according to the report released Friday by Sheriff George T. Lavater. Of the number received, 35 were closed and the remaining 10 are still under investigation.
A breakdown of the 45 complaints shows six were felonies, eight misdemeanors, one civil, 20 under other categories and one was unfounded. Six male inmates were booked.
Seven accidents, including five property damage and two personal injury accidents, were reported. Ten traffic arrests were recorded; seven warnings issued; one notice to appear issued and 17 traffic assists made.
Dog complaints were up to 35 last week; three summons were issued; eight warnings issued and 18 animals disposed of.
Twenty-five civil papers were processed; 59 telephone calls received; 145 meals served to inmates and two doors on business places in the county found open.

Participate in Activities Of Winter Festival and Chase Away Winter Blahs

We're hoping everyone in Charlevoix will get out next weekend for Charlevoix's Winter Cup Festival.

The festival, co-sponsored by the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce and Charlevoix Lions Club, will be jam packed with activities for people of all ages.

It's a chance for Charlevoix residents to knock off those winter blues and have some fun. Everyone should find something that will suit his or her fancy.

The carnival opens with an ice sculpture contest in East Park. Charlevoix High School students, who will hold their winter homecoming during the same weekend, will place their sculptures in the park.

And while the high school students will be busy with their homecoming game and festivities, others will want to join in with local restaurants in their own special celebrations.

Both downhill and cross country skiers will be interested in the competitions taking place on Saturday.

Those looking for more of a cultural reprieve may want to listen to several hundred young musicians who will be at Charlevoix High School for the annual District II Band and Orchestra Festival being hosted by Charlevoix High School.

Saturday night has been designated Mardi Gras night with restaurants and nightclubs planning special events for the entertainment of their guests.

Sunday rounds off the weekend with a cross country ski clinic and afternoon hockey tournament.

As you can see, the Charlevoix Winter Cup Festival will be a weekend for people of all ages.

It represents an effort of a lot of people, who have been trying to put together an event where everyone can have a good time.

All the festival planners need now is you to come out and have a good time.

So, if you haven't already country skiers, do so and we will see you at the Charlevoix Winter Cup Festival this weekend.

City Should Reconsider Effects of Changing Bridge Opening Hours

A move to adjust the Pine River Channel bridge openings needs to be reexamined.

Already recommended by the Charlevoix City Council, the Michigan Highway Commission is considering a request to eliminate the noon, 1 p.m. and 5 p.m. bridge openings.

Those behind the move have indicated that this schedule change would lessen traffic flow interruptions during peak summer periods.

While on the surface the move appears to have merit, we wonder if there might not be serious disadvantages.

For example, Charlevoix has developed an international fame for being a summer boating resort community with people traveling for miles to enjoy our natural harbor and beauty.

If they learn that it is going to be difficult to get in and out of the town during the lunch hour, will they take their trade some other place?

We would hate to see our fine image of hospitality altered.

Bridge Street has traditionally had a summer traffic problem because of the bridge openings.

However, the problems caused by the bridge openings have also meant economic benefit for us with the boat traffic.

During the heat of the summer, it is easy to get upset with the traffic congestion. We feel that the traffic flow should be looked at in different lights, instead of blaming it all on the boaters and bridge openings. Perhaps we want to look at alternative traffic routes.

We urge both the Charlevoix City Council and other residents to reconsider their existing view to change the bridge openings and remember the benefit of our summer boating economy.

Consumers Urges Care In Thawing Out Pipes

Dear Editor:

The very severe cold weather has caused water services to freeze in many areas as you are no doubt aware. Across Michigan, we have experienced a number of potentially hazardous situations as a result of electric welders or similar high wattage direct current devices being used to thaw these frozen services.

Some of the resulting problems from the use of this method are as follows: Any uncontrolled current can follow the gas service line and discharge back to ground possible causing an arc-burn hole in the gas system and a gas leak. This same current could also follow the customer's electric service entrance ground back through the service neutral drop to Consumers' Power Company grounds because this could be a lower resistance path than the water pipe. This could cause a house fire or damage to the customer's or Consumers' Power Company's grounding system. In order to prevent the current flowing in the electrical grounding systems or the gas system it is necessary to isolate the water service from the customer's water system and also to disconnect the ground wire to the water system to the customer's ground system. We strongly recommend this procedure be used; to do otherwise would create a potentially dangerous situation to life and property.

If you have questions, please feel free to contact me at 941-1789. Wendell B. Eby

New Nuke Plant Will Raise Electric Costs

To the Editor:

Consumers' Power Company's ratemakers should begin to be aware of the excessive and needlessly high burden they will bear if Consumers' Power persists in continued construction of the Midland nuclear plants which they are unable to finance to completion.

The Attorney-General and the Public Service Commission have been informed of the starting disclosure from the Midland n-plant suspension hearings.

The Attorney-General's concerned response is, I believe, worth sharing with the public and about the threatened impending financial disaster for ratemakers.

He writes: "I am as concerned as you are that Midland will develop into an economic disaster for Consumers' Power Company's ratemakers, in the same way that the Palisades Plant has, but on a larger scale."

"I agree with your sentiments that any action by the Public Service Commission that would require ratemakers to pay any portion of the cost of the Midland Plant before that plant actually goes into commercial operation, would mean that the ratemakers would be paying something for which they may never receive any benefit.

"My staff attorneys are presently analyzing the issues to be considered by the Commission at the hearing commencing in March, concerning construction work in progress and deferred tax accounting with respect to various construction expenditures."

Joseph Temple of Dow Chemical's operating board has stated in sworn testimony that the plants are "a bad deal" for Dow—disadvantageous to the Midland division, the employees and the community. If the n-plants are a detriment to Dow Chemical how can they be of any value to the small businessman and ratemayer of Michigan?

I urge citizens and ratemakers to write their legislators, the Public Service Commission, Attorney-General Frank Kelley and Governor Milliken, asking them to halt the ruinous course that Consumers' Power Company is pursuing.

Bob died the other day. He was my closest link to the tragedy of the Vietnam war.

I knew Bob for 26 years. We belonged to the same poker club for most of these years. We belonged to the Holiday Duffers Club which was 8 men who met every warm holiday to play terrible golf together.

I don't think Bob agreed with half of the stuff I wrote through all those years. Certainly he didn't go along with my constant cooing during the Vietnam war. And for good reason.

But Bob never jumped on me for writing dumb things. Not seriously. He would call me a lousy golfer and a stupid poker player. He wouldn't call me a pinko traitor for urging amnesty for Vietnam draft dodgers. And he had good reason to call me worse than that.

A good friend can disagree with you without being disagreeable. Bob was a good friend. He was only 58 when a heart attack suddenly killed him. I find now, typing these inadequate words, that I cannot think of him without getting wet eyes.

I am thinking about a poker night in May of 1970. It was at Bob's house. It was the night I was struck by the big difference between 2 trips.

The Apollo 13 astronauts were then on their way back from moon country. That's one of the trips. Between beers and shuffles, there was considerable talk about the 3 men risking their necks in space.

And later, when the space task faded, Bob was asked the whereabouts of his wife. He explained that she was out of town but "she'll walk through that door at 10:20 p.m."

Which brings us to the second trip.

None of the other players asked Bob how he could be so certain of the time his wife would return. We knew. She had made the trip so many times before, and so had he, that it was easy to set the clock by their departures and arrivals.

At 10:20 p.m., she came through the back door.

For the umpteenth time, she had been visiting her son Ed at a nearby veterans hospital. A year earlier, he had suffered a head wound in Vietnam. Now he was almost totally paralyzed, almost speechless.

That was 7 years ago. Ed is now 29, and still spending most of his time in a hospital bed. That's the way it is going Seed catalogues have started turning up regularly in the mail, a sure sign that spring is almost here.

It is also a sure sign that the lowly adjective, doomed to extinction during the heyday of the late Ernest Hemingway, is alive and well and living in a hothouse somewhere in Illinois.

For my money, a trip through a seed catalogue is the next best thing to a mid-winter vacation in Florida. Although you remain physically bound in this frigid zone, your mind wanders months into the sunny future.

The bleak drifts that presently inhabit the back forty disappear mysteriously and in their place stand rows after rows of early peas in "plump, well-rounded pods four to five inches long. Extremely heavy bearing. Pods and foliage bright green. Bears long after other varieties are finished. Absolutely our best."

No! No! Send me a dozen packets. We'll dry what we don't eat and have pea soup next winter.

I know salesmen are supposed to put their best foot forward, but it seems that the seed people oversell everything from salsify to horseshall. Anyone would be a fool not to buy what they offer. "Sturdy young plants will be covered with a multitude of blossoms."

"Climbs to more than seven feet tall."

"Can be grown with the very best results under a wide variety of soil and moisture conditions."

"Early bearing." "Drought resistant." "That's one I like." "Drought resistant."

I also like catalogues which show where in North America such and such can be grown. There's a little outline of the United States with a purple overlay. Most of the seeds offered will do well as far north as Hudson Bay. "Vigorous young plants can withstand early frost and temperatures as low as 23 F."

These are the little annoyances the seed catalogues let you discover for yourself.

One catalogue we received this winter is pushing peanuts for North Central states, including Michigan. It also suggests a variety of cotton for use in northern gardens. "Attractive fluffy white pods are a conversation piece north of the Mason-Dixon line."

Perhaps the nicest feature of the catalogues are the honest-to-goodness photographs of tomatoes, cucumbers and green onions. But, my friends, I'll wager you have never seen such garden produce in real life. The seed companies certainly have cornered the market on the best color presmen in the nation.

Tomatoes come through particularly well. They are a deep red, smooth skinned, dimpled with dew and wearing little green berets on top.

Cucumbers are a deep velvety green, as smooth as ice cream. Sometimes they are pictured languishing under a huge cucumber leaf.

Green onions usually are photographed in bunches, with clean white stalks tapering into brilliant green tops.

The problem with the catalogue pictures is that my garden produce never looks the same. Where are the ugly black zipper marks around the tomato? Where is the fat green tomato bug that squishes when you pick him by mistake? Where are the aphids and the grubs and the corn borers? Are they unworthy of a photographer's talents?

Lastly, where is the fat brown rabbit with a leaf of Black Seeded Simpson lettuce clenched between his fat brown jaws? That would make a dandy picture.

These are the little annoyances the seed catalogues let you discover for yourself.

I have a friend who has been trying to sell his house for six months and frankly, I'm worried about her.

The other morning, while having coffee, I excused myself to use her bathroom. She threw her body across the door and said, "Do you really have to use this? I mean, you could wait and stop at the service station on the way home, could you?"

"Get hold of yourself, Gloria," I said. "Ever since you listed your home you've developed a clean fetish."

"Are you finished leaning back on that pillow?" she asked, grabbing it and pinching it up with her fist.

"See what I mean? You're going crazy with neatness. What happened? We never see a newspaper at your door any more. I almost hate to ask, but where are your children?"

"I laundered and stored them until after we move," she said, grabbing the cup and saucer away from my lips and rinsing them under the faucet. "Face it. No one buys a house that looks like it's inhabited."

"That's a dumb thing to say."

"It's true. Take your average model home. The light switches might not work, the walls smell like paste, there is no water, and the doors are hung backwards. No problem. The house will sell. But if the lids are up on the bathroom commode—forget it!"

"I don't believe that at all."

"It's true. Take this house. Please, it was a model home when we bought it. I'm here to tell you a virgin house is the most beautiful sight in the world. There was even a bowl of waxed fruit on the coffee table. Then we moved in. First, it was a basketball in the foyer, handprints around the light switches, a cardboard box in the utility room to hold the dog, cup dispensers on every wall, a calendar over the stove, notes on the refrigerator, an ironing board in the dining room, a boot in the flower bed, rolled-up newspapers in the spout, 50-pound bag of fertilizer on the porch, a bread car in the window..."

"And the waxed fruit?"

"It's still in the bowl with initials carved into it, along with a brush battery, two marbles and a transistor radio. The illusion is gone."

Just then the rector came up the drive with a prospective couple. "Quick," yelled Gloria, grabbing her sweater. "Put the coffee pot in the oven, the mail in the freezer and follow me to the basement. Just pray they don't stop in the driveway. I waxed it yesterday."

A Tale of Two Trips to be the rest of his life. And his mother and 2 brothers will spend the rest of their lives visiting him and bringing him home weekends and taking him to concerts.

That's how Bob spent the last 8 years of his life, which ended way too soon. But Bob would not have complained about his burden if he had married it until he was 35.

I haven't fully identified Bob's family because that's the way they want it. Their friends already know. They see no reason to parade their trouble before strangers. They don't want to put their hearts out. They don't want publicity for what they gave for their country.

I hope they'll understand why I find myself wondering, again, the same thing I wondered on the poker night of Apollo 13.

Three astronauts soared away and returned to the adulation and tears of an entire nation.

Thousands of boys went to Vietnam and returned battered, or in boxes. And only their families wept and really cared. And still care, and ache.

Sure, I was awed by the incredible technology and courage that put us on the moon. But I was saddened by a nation that sweat blood with the astronauts but didn't care that 369 men were killed in Vietnam the same week, and didn't care that hundreds more had been doomed to hospitals for life.

Who gave the most for his country? Who received the most in return? The astronauts now own airlines and make TV commercials. Ed is still paralyzed, and thousands of his fellow soldiers are still dead too young.

In 1970 I wrote: "Shoot me if you will, but I don't give a damn about trips to the moon. Not as long as my friends are making trips to that hospital."

I feel the same way today. Bob has made his last visit, but his son is still in the hospital. And this is still an armed world where we must point guns at us.

In memory of all the Bobs, and all the Eds, someday the guns must be put down. Someday there must be an end to the flag-draped caskets and the trips to the hospital.

Then it will be time to take a trip to the moon.

Meet Charlevoix

...Judy Przybylski

Just keeping a checkbook balanced can be a herculean problem for some people and they couldn't imagine having to keep the finances of an entire city up to date.

But when you mention keeping the books for a $3 million business like the City of Charlevoix to Judy Przybylski, she doesn't bat an eye. This week Mrs. Przybylski discusses her job as city clerk with the Courier.

COURIER: What types of things does the city clerk's office handle?

PRZYBYLSKI: The clerk's office takes care of the first of the month we are generally pretty busy balancing everything out. And everything has got to be just perfect when you do that. If you make a mistake you've got to find it. It's a lot easier to find those $100,000 errors than those $1 ones. Usually it was the operator and not the machine that made the mistake, too. It's hard to be a machine is smarter than you, but that's the way it works.

COURIER: How does the bookkeeping and accounting for a public unit differ from the bookkeeping for private business?

PRZYBYLSKI: The bookkeeping for the city is different in the types of transfers that you make.

COURIER: What do you like best about your job?

PRZYBYLSKI: I like working with figures and I have a lot of them to work with here. Also I like the people that I work with.

COURIER: Do you have much contact with city residents?

PRZYBYLSKI: Not usually. The clerk's office deals with people that do business with the city.

COURIER: How long have you worked in the Charlevoix clerk's office?

PRZYBYLSKI: I have worked here since October, 1972. Ida Heise appointed me deputy clerk in 1974. I was appointed city clerk last November.

COURIER: Have you worked for any other cities?

PRZYBYLSKI: I worked for two and one-half years in the Petoskey clerk's office with the elections.

COURIER: How do you like being a city official?

PRZYBYLSKI: I'm really busy. I like the job I never thought I would be in an elected official, though.

COURIER: How do you feel about running for office for the first time this April?

PRZYBYLSKI: It's a big step. But, I'm into it now. It's kind of scary, too.

COURIER: Are you a Charlevoix native?

PRZYBYLSKI: Yes and my father Robert Sonnierville worked for the city, too, in the police department I guess working for the city runs in the family. I don't know where it's running in, but I guess you could say it runs in the family.

COURIER: Tell us about your family.

PRZYBYLSKI: I have a daughter, Kelly, who will be a year old next month. My husband Mike works for Metric Tool south of Charlevoix.

PRZYBYLSKI: Arietta Bergmann handles all of the election related jobs and then I have another full time person working with me and a part time person.

COURIER: On a typical day what do you do?

PRZYBYLSKI: Well there's always bills to take care of and we spend a lot of time handling transactions and doing accounts receivable. Also everything we do has to be posted on the machine so Charlevoix County's contribution to this mountain of trash is estimated at 13,500 tons a year.

How much of it could profitably be recycled or converted into energy?

According to the Environmental Protection Agency, it is a growing problem. The nation's trash pile has been rising steadily and now amounts to more than 100 million tons of solid waste per year.

That is enough, it says, to fill garbage trucks, lined up bumper to bumper, three abreast, all the way from New York to Los Angeles.

The single largest component of this waste is paper and paper products, amounting to over 50 million tons. Discarded food is next, about 24 million tons. Glass,

Space Age Technology Part Of Health Care System, Too

Space age technology has done more than put a man on the moon.

It has also improved man's health, according to Jim Hooper, associate supervisor of the Charlevoix Area Hospital laboratory.

"The machinery we are using in the lab is a direct spin off of the space age technology," Hooper said. "The solid state electronics perfected for the rockets are also used in the microcomputers and other equipment we use to diagnose diseases."

And it is the same space age technology that has allowed the Charlevoix hospital to expand its lab facilities and to provide better care to the residents of the Charlevoix area. For the last two years, the laboratory department has been acquiring the specialized equipment necessary to complete intricate lab tests for the physicians and patients at the hospital.

"Our machines are small, but they are efficient and they have helped us go from being a lab that was handling 1,000 procedures a month to a lab which does 3,000 procedures a month," Hooper said.

The medical technologist said that the equipment has also allowed the lab to complete more tests at the hospital instead of sending them to Little Traverse Hospital or another laboratory for completion.

When 1,000 procedures a month were being sent to the lab two years ago, only about 50 percent of the tests were actually completed at the hospital, Hooper said. Now about 80 percent of the 3,000 procedures sent to the lab are handled at the hospital.

"We have changed from being in the position of a forwarding lab to a lab that can handle the routine tests and the more complicated ones, too," he explained.

"There are still some tests that are sent out," Albert Hunter, also an associate supervisor of the lab, explained. "And there always will be some tests that we will send to someone else. There are some things where it is less expensive for us to send it out than to purchase the equipment to complete the tests."

Hunter and Hooper said that in addition to giving the lab the capability to handle more tests and more types of tests, the special machinery has also given the lab the capability to insure that the tests are accurate.

"You get a much better quality test now than you did 10 years or even five years ago," Hunter said. "And because of the efficiency and volume the machines can handle, the costs have remained about the same."

The Charlevoix hospital lab is associated with the Little Traverse Hospital lab. The pathologists at the Petoskey hospital serve as the directors for the Charlevoix lab. They are in telephone consultation with the lab's associate supervisors and they visit the facility several times a month to make sure that things are running smoothly.

In addition to the two associate supervisors, two medical technicians and one part-time secretary help run the laboratory.

JIM HOOPER, medical technologist at the Charlevoix Area Hospital, checks one of the machines in the lab that is the result of the current space age technology. Advanced technology has made lab machines more sophisticated and has improved lab tests.

No Cure for Common Cold, Just Relief

What could be more miserable than that stopped-up, full-headed feeling of a cold? No wonder people are quick to seek relief in different over-the-counter medications—hoping to speed up the cold's departure.

Well, no matter what you do, a panel of experts called on by the Food and Drug Administration says none of these products will cure or even shorten the course of the common cold. But, they can relieve some of the symptoms. To find out which ingredients are safe and effective, send for a free fact sheet called The Common Cold. Drop a postcard to the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 6425, Pueblo, Colorado 81009.

Here are some general information to help you choose when you shop. These ingredients were found to be safe and effective and not mislabeled.

-Cough suppressants (antitussives): Codeine, codeine alkaloid, codeine phosphate, codeine sulfate, dextromethorphan, dextromethorphan hydrobromide, diphenhydramine hydrochloride.

-Nasal decongestants: 1. In nose drops, sprays or rubs: ephedrine, ephedrine hydrochloride, ephedrine sulfate, racemic epinephrine, hydrochloride, naphazoline hydrochloride, oxymetazoline hydrochloride, xylometazoline hydrochloride. And phenylephrine hydrochloride which can also be in oral medications.

2. In inhalants:

prophylhexedrine.

3. In oral medications: phenylpropanolamine bitartrate, phenylpropanolamine hydrochloride, phenylpropylamine maleate, pseudoephedrine hydrochloride, pseudoephedrine sulfate.

Since most over-the-counter drugs lack specific information on proper dosages for children, a group of experts on pediatric drug therapy developed the following recommendations: the dose for children 6 through 11 should be half the adult dose, and for youngsters 2 through 5 it should be one-quarter of the adult dose. Asthma and cough preparations should not be given to children 2 through 5 in any amount except on the advice of a physician. Any product with an alcoholic content of more than 10 percent is not for children under 6.

For infants up to 2 years of age, the dosage should be determined by a physician and the labels on non-prescription drug products should make this clear.

The Common Cold (free) is one of over 200 selected Federal consumer publications listed in the current edition of the catalog, Consumer Information Center, published quarterly by the Consumer Information Center of the General Services Administration, the catalog is free by sending a postcard to the Consumer Information Center, Pueblo, Colorado 81009.

Mineral Role in State History Topic at Meeting 8 p.m. Tuesday

The role of minerals in Michigan history will be discussed at the regular meeting of the Charlevoix Historical Society to be held at the Community Room of the First State Bank at 8 p.m. Tuesday.

Edward Beutner, president of the Society and a geologist long associated with exploration and mining of iron ore and other minerals, will relate how the state's many resources were discovered and developed during the 19th century and the impact this had on the industrial development of the state.

Salt springs at the surface provided a clue to immense deposits that were found underground. The copper artifacts and nuggets exhibited by Indians led to the discovery of the important deposits of native copper in the Keweenaw Peninsula. The presence of iron ore near Negaunee was first noted by a land surveyor when he investigated the reason for the wild deflection of his compass needle. Coal, gypsum and limestone also contributed to the early economy of the state.

One successful gold mine operated before the turn of the century.

Later on the scene, dating from about 1925 and responding to advanced exploration techniques, were the oil and gas discoveries. Following World War II, uranium exploration in the Upper Peninsula created considerable excitement. However, only the low grade ore was indicated.

All persons interested in the mineral heritage of the state are invited to attend this meeting of the Historical Society.

Hearings on Deaf, Blind Education Slated

A series of public hearings will be held this week to review preliminary recommendations of a state wide study of educational programs and services for visually impaired and hearing impaired students.

Each of the four hearings will last two hours with the first 40 minutes devoted to a review of the study and the preliminary study recommendations by Educational Management Services, Inc. and State Department of Education representatives.

A 20-minute coffee break will then be provided to allow people to prepare written questions and to sign up for oral reactions to the plan. The last hour will be used for the presentation of the oral reactions, which are limited to three minutes a piece.

The meetings will be held from 7 to 9 p.m. Thursday in Lansing at the Michigan School for the Blind auditorium, from 10:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. at the Kent Intermediate School District Administrative Center in Grand Rapids, at 7 to 9 p.m. at the Bay de Noc Community College in Escanaba and at 1:30 to 3:30 p.m. at the Michigan School for the Deaf auditorium in Flint.

Written comments will be accepted for one week after the hearings by Educational Management Services, Inc., at 4310 W. 77th St., Suite 150, Minneapolis, Minn., 55435.

An interpreter for the deaf will be present at each public meeting and a Braille summary of the recommendations will be available.

ALSO HONORED were the 10-year employees. Pictured here are: John Lachman, manager, Barbara Watros, Florence Blanchard and Ed Purvogel, chairman of the board.

HOSKINS MANUFACTURING Company honored nine employees for their many years of service last week. Pictured here with the 15-year employees are: John Lachman, manager, Mary Ann Hamilton, Mary Reibel, Barbara Skeel, and Ed Purvogel, chairman of the board, in the back row. In front are Edna Gallagher and Mary Wertman.

Hufford Industries to Take Part In Trade Mission to South America

Hufford Industries, Inc., is one of nine Michigan firms in the metalworking field, making up a trade mission to Venezuela and Columbia.

Dick Sayward will represent Hufford Industries on the mission organized by the Michigan Department of Commerce's Office of Economic Expansion. Other firms making up the mission are in the Detroit, Lansing and Kalamazoo areas.

The trade mission, which will leave Feb. 27, is one of the state's first to Latin America. Venezuela and Columbia were selected because both countries offer mature markets for metalworking equipment, are experiencing rapid industrial growth and as a result of rising prices for raw materials, have large reserves of hard currency.

Venezuela, the largest single foreign supplier of petroleum to the United States, is reaping the benefit of a dramatic fourfold increase in oil prices over the last four years. Colombia has profited in recent days from the rise in the world price of coffee.

Since 1972, the state has maintained offices in both Tokyo and Brussels to aid Michigan companies in penetrating the European and Asian markets. The Office of Economic Expansion believes increased exports from Michigan not only aid the total American economy in its current balance of payment problems, but provide local firms with more profit and employment. Exporting also helps Michigan businesses by allowing them to better utilize production facilities, and by cushioning the effects of domestic business cycles.

Norton Herman, OEE director, said

Training Session Slated March 2 On Pesticides

A training session for anyone interested in being certified as a private pesticide applicator will be held at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, March 2, in the 4-H Center in Petoskey.

Tramling materials, study bulletins and application forms for the certifying test will be available at the meeting. Certifying exams will be given in this area at 7:30 p.m. Monday, March 14 in the 4-H Center at Petoskey and at 1:30 p.m. Monday, April 4, at Whiting Park.

Ed Robman, Charlevoix County extension director, said all individuals must be certified by the Michigan Department of Agriculture in order to purchase restricted pesticides after Oct. 1. Restricted pesticides will include all fumigants, aquatic pesticides, materials for forest areas, those materials used in aircraft and all materials with a skull and crossbones marked "Danger-Poison," Robman said.

Waterfront owners planning construction, dredging or filling below the ordinary high water mark of Michigan lakes and streams should plan ahead to allow time for obtaining the needed permit from the Department of Natural Resources.

If property owners think they will be involved in construction activity, shoreline or bottomland alterations this spring or summer, they should apply now to avoid the seasonal rush and a possible delay in receiving a permit. Craig Smith, administrator of the Inland Lakes and Streams Act at the DNR Regional Office in Roseconm, said because of established procedures required by the law, the DNR must take a period of 30 to 45 days to complete the processing and issuance or denial of permits. Many times because of the large volume of applications, it is difficult to provide responses to the applicants as soon as the department would like, Smith said.

Iceboats Replace Tugboats On Frozen Waters of Ohio River

Iceboats have displaced tugboats on the Ohio River in this winter, and it's no fun for industry.

One of the most important inland waterways in the nation has been frozen from bank to bank for the first time since 1948. The phenomenon has attracted thousands of sightseers, iceboaters, and skaters.

But while they enjoy the rare scene, hundreds of barges loaded with needed fuel oil, coal, deicing salt, chemicals, and steel have been immobilized, creating shortages that have closed schools and factories and killed hundreds of thousands of workers.

In a normal year, the Ohio has neither ice nor time for winter sports. Day and night, towboats herd strings of barges up and down the 961 miles between Pittsburgh, where the Ohio is formed by the confluence of the Allegheny and the Monongahela, and Cairo, Illinois, where it flows into the Mississippi.

"The Ohio is, above all, a working river," observes Phil J. Vesilind in the February issue of National Geographic. Before the freeze, the author obtained a first-hand look at the river's thriving commerce by shipping as a "novice deckhand" on an Ohio tow.

"The Ohio hauls more freight than the Panama Canal and carries more water than the upper Mississippi where the two rivers meet," he writes. "Some rivermen even insist it's the Ohio that flows into the Gulf of Mexico."

Mr. Vesilind points out that nearly 25 million people in parts of 14 states live in the 203,900-square-mile Ohio Basin, one of the world's most productive land areas.

"About 33 percent of this nation's recoverable bituminous coal underlies the Ohio Basin," he adds. "And of the nearly 116 million tons of coal moved on American river systems in 1975, about 86 percent was carried on the Ohio and its tributaries."

He notes that 33 coal-fired power plants line the Ohio and more are planned as the United States strives for energy independence. One plant, Kyger Creek, burns hundreds of tons of coal an hour to supply electricity for a nuclear-fuel processing facility 50 miles away.

"In the mystical arithmetic of steam and atoms," Mr. Vesilind says, "a kilowatt generated by Kyger Creek can help manufacture enough uranium fuel to produce 40 kilowatts in a nuclear power plant."

The author found that since 1946 nearly 150 chemical plants, making everything from plastics to painty hose, have been built in the Ohio Basin and today chemicals account for more and more river tonnage.

But now the river's traffic is down to less than 10 percent of normal, and Army engineers worry that a quick thaw later may send heavy ice flows rushing downstream, endangering the commercial craft forced to tie up at the Ohio's banks.

KEEPING TRAFFIC MOVING before the Big Freeze, a deckhand tightens the cables that lash together a string of 1,000-ton barges on the Ohio. The normally bustling river, supplying the productive industrial and agricultural Ohio Basin, has been choked with ice, halting shipments and forcing factories to shut down, idling workers in several states.

Winter May Lose Grip on Country During Predicted Mid-February Thaw

The January thaw will be a little late this year.

Like late February, Or, acknowledging the apparent potential of winter's bear hug on the nation, maybe early August.

Every town in the country, except up in unseasonably warm Alaska, seems to have discovered it hasn't been this cold since back in the winter of whenever—since before World War II, since the last time oranges froze in Florida snowstorms, or since the fabled winter of '88, the National Geographic Society says.

The winter of '77 won't let go until the middle of February, overmost of the United States, according to Dr. Donald L. Gilman, who is chief of the long-range predictions at the National Weather Service. It will be abnormally cold and windy at least until then.

All this, including the coldest fall since 1880, is being caused by a huge mass of unusually cold air that has oozed down from Canada and has stayed sitting in place for the last four months. Usually there is a lot more fluctuation in weather patterns.

For the record, a January thaw comes about two winters out of three during these fluctuations when a big, lazy high pressure system drifts across the country between storms.

For a few sunny days, the January thaw permits a crack in the icebox door, giving a glimpse of April as temperatures jump perhaps 30 degrees.

However, around the country it is February that is remembered in frigid fact and fable.

"Winter lingered so long in the lap of Spring that it occasioned a great deal of talk."

"The most serious charge which can be brought against New England is not Puritanism," reckoned writer Joseph Wood Krutch, "but February!"

The Red River Valley of the western border country of Minnesota usually enjoys the coldest winters south of Canada, just above zero.

In nearby North Dakota, a farmer's wife claims, "It gets so cold around here that when you toss out the kitchen dishwater it freezes hard before it hits the backyard."

The Arctic air may slide down the middle of the country, and cowboys say, "When a norther blows, the only thing between the North Pole and Texas is barbed wire."

One chuck wagon tale claims a good norther blows so cold it will freeze a skunk of ice across a pot of boiling campfire coffee.

February in Alaska may have been on the mind of Robert W. Service when he wrote, "Talk of your cold, through the parka's fold it stabbed like a driven nail."

Alaska's Barter Island regularly records February's coldest averages in the United States: nearly 20 below.

This is the time of year when some remember the key necks that once grew on milk bottles left on frigid doorsteps, or when every northern schoolroom steamed with radiators burdened by wet wool mittens.

In February—for Alaskans and others—winter begins to seem endless, with the certainty of a slowly thawing spring still far ahead.

Or, as the 19th-century comic Bill Nye once said, a time when "Winter lingered so long in the lap of Spring that it occasioned a great deal of talk."

Contact IRS About Late W-2 Forms

Taxpayers who have not received a Form W-2, "Wage and Tax Statement," from each of their employers by January 31, 1977, should contact the employers immediately. The Internal Revenue Service said.

Employers are required to supply the forms to all employees from whom they have withheld Federal income and Social Security taxes. Taxpayers must attach the Forms W-2 to the 1040 or 1040A individual income tax returns that they file, the IRS explained.

If employers have not provided the missing W-2 forms within a reasonable period of time from the date the taxpayers contacted them, the taxpayers should call their local IRS office for assistance, the IRS said.

Although some of their employers may not have supplied W-2 forms, taxpayers must still file their tax returns on time. Taxpayers who do not have all their W-2 forms should report all of their income and attach a statement explaining how they figured any tax withheld for which they claim credit, but for which they have no Form W-2.

The IRS said. Taxpayers who receive a Form W-2 after they filed their income tax return, and find that their estimates of income and withholding taxes are incorrect, should file a Form 1040X, "Amended U.S. Individual Income Tax Return," with the IRS Service Center where they filed their return. The 1040X should include a copy of the formerly missing Form W-2 plus a check or money order, if any additional tax is due, the IRS added.

Winter Homecoming Slated For This Friday Night

Winter Homecoming activities will highlight the week at Charlevoix High School.

Festivities will open Thursday as the student body selects a king and queen to reign over the weekend's celebration. The coronation of the lucky couple will be a feature of the halftime activities during the Charlevoix-Gaylord basketball game Friday night. It will be the last game of the regular scheduled season.

Candidates for the second annual Winter Homecoming Queen are: Kay Currey, Sandra Hodge, Teri Hufford, Amy Potter and Sue Winchester.

King candidates are: Matt Doan, Wally Drenth, Tracey Sell, Dave Tollas and Brian Williams.

Following their halftime coronation, the king and queen will reign over the Winter Homecoming Dance sponsored by the high school at the Charlevoix Elementary School. Charlevoix High School alumni are invited to attend the dance.

The Winter Homecoming King and Queen were nominated by the senior class and will be selected by the entire student body.

Also during the week, freshmen, sophomore, junior and senior classmen may be seen working on snow sculptures in East Park. The snow sculptures will be a part of the Winter Cup Festival activities which are also slated for the coming weekend.

The homecoming activities are sponsored by the Charlevoix High School Student Council.

Middle School Band Draws Good Remarks

Charlevoix's eighth grade jazz band drew good comments from the judges at the Jazz Festival held at Boyne City recently, the director, Steve Stargardt, has announced.

The consensus of the judges was that the Charlevoix group was one of the most exciting bands in the festival to listen to.

The local 17-piece jazz band was the youngest entered in the festival. The other seven were of high school age. The bands played for comment rather than rating, Stargardt said.

Judges were Dave Sporny and Jerry Ludwig of Interlochen and Tim Anthony of Central Michigan University.

Rayders Clinch Conference Title

THE PETOSKEY Northmen did have a slight height advantage over the Rayders Friday night, but that didn't bother Matt Doan (42) who used his jumping ability to get this one into the hoop. Charlevoix defeated Petoskey 66-62.

DAVE TOLLAS (40) had a clear path to the basket for this shot leaving Petoskey's Mike Buday (32) in his dust. Watching the shot are Charlevoix's Scott Boss (20) and Pat Schaefer (50). Charlevoix defeated Petoskey 66-62.

CHARLEVOIX'S BUD KLOOSTER (44) slips between Petoskey's Jeff Vratnina (30) and Waley Coffey (10) to grab the pass.

IT WAS A MAD SCRAMBLE for the ball at this point in the game and Petoskey came out ahead as Jerry Cosens (22) grabs the ball as his teammates Jeff Vratnina (30) and Vern Nickerson (14) and Charlevoix's Neil Dziedzic (30) and Matt Doan (42) watch.

COACH DAVE MOYER gives some advice to team captain Bud Klooster (44) during the Petoskey-Charlevoix game. Charlevoix took the lead early in the game and held on to it to win 66-62.

Varsity Makes It 15-5, Takes Huron Shores Title

By FRANK MARTIN

The Charlevoix Varsity, under the tutelage of Coach Dave Moyer, captured their first Michigan-Huron Shores Title Friday night after defeating the Petoskey Northmen by a score of 66-62.

The victory, which was in doubt a couple of times in the last five minutes when Petoskey trimmed the Rayders lead to three points, gives the new champions a 12-1 record in league play and a 15-5 overall record with one game remaining. Gaylord will be here Friday in the final game of the season.

"We're really happy" was all Coach Moyer could say after leading the Rayders to their first basketball title since Charlevoix joined the Michigan-Huron Shores conference in 1968.

He went on to say that "The boys deserved to win. It has been fun to work with boys who give so much time and effort to a game."

The game got off to a good start for the Rayders who ran up a 16-7 first period lead. Though they scored only 10 points in the second period, the Rayders were still ahead 26-17 at halftime.

Twenty-two points went in as the second half got underway, had the Rayders with as much as a 16-point lead at various times for a comfortable 48-36 advantage as the third period drew to a close.

In the meantime, Bud Klooster had gotten into foul trouble and with less than three minutes gone in the final period he picked up his fifth foul and went to the bench. Up until this time, he had been scoring from outside in addition to helping control the board and serving as floor manager.

With 2:15 remaining, Petoskey had whittled the Rayders lead to three points but two free throws by Dave Tollas padded the Rayders advantage to five. Another pair of free throws by Tollas put the Rayders ahead 62-55 but the Northmen came back with two quick baskets to cut the lead back to three points when Matt Doan, playing his best game of the season, dropped in two more from the line making the score 64-59 before Petoskey dunked in another two-point shot.

Don had 20 points for the game. Klooster scored 19; Tollas 10; Scott Boss, seven; Pat Schaefer and Brian Williams, four each, and Neil Dziedzic, two. Keith Nickerson had 14 points and Spence Damschroder 10 for the Northmen.

Girls Defeat Petoskey In Volleyball Action

The Charlevoix Girls Volleyball Team defeated a stubborn Petoskey squad in close games played here Wednesday night.

The Charlevoix team won the first two games by scores of 15-5 and 15-6, but were unable to sweep the series as the visitors fought back, throwing the game into air overtime before emerging the winners by a 15-17 score.

Coach Pat Carland said it was the strong serving on the part of the entire team as well as team cooperation which saved the victory for Charlevoix.

Charlevoix now has a 9-9 record in league play. They will close out the regular season at Gaylord Wednesday.

The Charlevoix JV's were also successful, winning by scores of 15-3 and 15-3 to bring their record to 9-5.

The playoffs in this sport will begin March 2 with the Class C tournament scheduled to begin at Elk Rapids March 12.

WVOY's Guys Panthers A Hit on Basketball Courts

A very unlikely looking basketball team has joined the faculty-sports boosters league in Northern Michigan.

And even with their unblemished record of 6-3 (at the time of this interview), the WVOY's Guys Panthers have dribbled their way into high demand for special fund-raising games at area high schools.

Composed of Tim "Meadowlark" Moore, "Dr. J" Yaroch, "Tyronne" Duison, "Hammer" White, "Curly" Carlisle, "Flash" Edger, "Booker" Maurer and "Captain" Bill Vogel, the team has helped raise more than $500 for special school projects throughout a four-county area.

"We also bring in several other 'ringers' from the surrounding area to help us with certain key games," Willie explained.

"We are looking for a new staff member here at the station, too," he continued. "The qualifications we're looking for include: he must be 6 foot 8 inches, and at least an All American at a major college."

Although the WVOY team didn't really get under way until fairly late in the basketball season, the response has been tremendous. Yaroch, organizer of the team, said,

"Right now our biggest drive is to survive our schedule," he said looking over the three games scheduled for this week.

"We take each game one at a time," he continued. "And we've been up against some of the most physical fit, well-rounded teams you've probably ever seen."

Yaroch said the radio station has been looking for a way to provide a community service and a way to gain more recognition for the station and had come up with the basketball team idea.

"Really there was no way that the schools could draw large enough crowds to make the type of money we've made at some of the games," he pointed out. "The area needed to have something like this."

The radio announcer said that the team doesn't charge for the games, not even for traveling expenses.

who will have to give up funds for food and clothing in order to pay the rent. Three tenants have already moved out of the complex.

The tragic part of the story is that she moved into the apartments because she believed, mistakenly at first, the complex was low income housing and that the rents would not be increased until her income was.

"My children have their problems and their own children," she continued. "They help me when they can, but I can't move in with them."

"And I don't want to have to move," she said. "I don't have the money for a deposit or to pay moving expenses or to leave my home."

Another woman said she was planning to move out after the weather got a little better.

"I have never had to give up buying food stamps in order to pay my rent," the second woman said. "But I am afraid I will have to if I continue to live here."

For almost a month the senior citizen residents of the apartment complex and other interested citizens have been trying to find a solution to the dilemma. They have appealed to local, state and federal officials for help. But the

Senior Citizens Still Fighting Rent Hike

By PAULA HOLMES

"I've worked all my life and I never thought I'd end up like this with no place to go," the elderly woman said.

"This whole thing worries me because I've never been out of any place," she continued. "Now, I don't know what's to become of me."

The woman, who asked that her name remain anonymous, is a resident of the Charlevoix Apartments on May Street.

She, along with the 40 other residents in the apartment complex, is facing a 25 percent increase in her rent. Unfortunately, the woman's social security check is not increasing 25 percent.

So she will become one of at least 20 of the residents who will be forced to look for housing somewhere else or who will have to give up funds for food and clothing in order to pay the rent. Three tenants have already moved out of the complex.

"My children have their problems and their own children," she continued. "They help me when they can, but I can't move in with them."

For almost a month the senior citizen residents of the apartment complex and other interested citizens have been trying to find a solution to the dilemma. They have appealed to local, state and federal officials for help. But the problem has been bounced from one governmental unit to the next, often as a basketball during tournament time and now the rent is due.

County Prosecuting Attorney Roy Hayes has completed his investigation of the situation and blames its occurrence on "tax and ineffective measures on the part of the federal government to insure that the money loaned for elderly or low income housing is actually expended for the elderly and those of low income."

Hayes turned the matter over to the Charlevoix Common Council to have the city look into whether or not there were misrepresentations made at the time of the approval of this project for zoning and occupancy by city officials. Mayor Edward Hansen said he would take up the matter.

James Storey, assistant to U.S. Rep. Philip Ruppe, said the Congressman's office has not yet received a letter from the senior citizens describing the details of the situation, but that the office would look into the matter as soon as it received the details.

Storey said that if the money loaned to Developer Frank Vaydick for the construction of the apartment complex came through the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD), Rep. Ruppe might be able to do something. However, if the money came through Farmers Home Administration (FHA), which Vaydick has said it did, then the state legislators would have to investigate the problem.

In the meantime, interested citizens have not given up the battle.

"I'm determined to pursue this until I find some answers, even if I have to go straight to Washington, D.C.," Shirley Roloff, volunteer advisor to many of the senior citizen tenants of the apartment complex, said. "I will not give up working against this 25 percent rent increase."

"I just can't believe that we can sit back and watch things like this happen to our elderly people and not try to help them in some way," she said.

"There's nothing out there of these tenants and already some of them are paying the rent increase."

"This problem is not only affecting them financially, but it's also affecting their health," she said.

Mrs. Roloff urged any senior citizen living in the complex who are earning under $4,000 a year to get in touch with her.

Cadillac PBB Case Interests Two Charlevoix Families

By PAULA HOLMES

When the state's first PBB-related trial opened Tuesday in Cadillac, two very interested Charlevoix County residents were in the audience.

Marty Jb Warner of Charlevoix, and Donna Hart of East Jordan, travelled to the Wexford County Courthouse to observe the proceedings of the civil suit filed by Roy and Marilyn Tacoma of Falmouth, against Michigan Farm Bureau Services, Michigan Chemical Co., and several other associated companies.

Both Mrs. Hart and her husband, LaVern, and Mrs. Warner, her husband, Doug, and mother-in-law, Grace Warner, have filed suit against the same companies with the Charlevoix County Circuit Court for damages caused to their livestock and themselves by PBB.

The Harts are represented by the same Grand Rapids law firm as the Tacomas, Law, Weathers, Richardson and Dutcher. Although no damages have been set in the Tacoma case, it is expected that the request will exceed $1 million for the loss of up to 200 head of Holstein dairy cows due to feed contamination caused when PBB, a toxic fire retardant chemical, was accidentally mixed with livestock feed in 1973.

The Warners are seeking damages in excess of $25 million for the loss of their 200-head herd and for the severe health problems they have encountered since being exposed to PBB. No trial date has yet been set in the Warner case. The family is represented by a Hancock law firm.

In addition to Farm Bureau and Michigan Chemical Co., the Warner suit also names the Charlevoix Co-op, ELLsworth Farmers Exchange, Michigan Salt Co., Northwest Industries, Inc., Vestical Chemical, Inc., and Vestical Chemical Corporation.

The Warners were one of the first families in the state to have PBB found in their blood during Michigan Department of Health testing. Since then they have participated in several other tests to determine the affect of PBB on human beings.

The far-reaching controversy over PBB was started when the chemical, also known as Firemaster, was accidentally mixed with livestock feed in 1973.

The chemical, manufactured by Michigan Chemical Co., was apparently mistakenly sold to the Farm Bureau instead of Nutrimaster, a feed additive. Farm Bureau then mixed the toxic chemical with feed and distributed it to farmers throughout the state.

Approximately 550 farms have been quarantined since then with thousands of cows, chickens, hogs and sheep either dying or killed because of the contamination.

Dear "Concerned": The Middle School heat distribution system is 50 years old. Most room thermostats don't work. When the coldest rooms are warm enough, the remaining rooms are much too warm. Therefore, windows get opened. Anytime you become concerned again, feel free to call me at 547-4407.

No New Teachers Hired
Charlevoix School District officials called to inform the Courier that it has not hired any new employees since the millage was passed as was stated in last week's Hotline. The officials pointed out that the school board has appointed coaches for track teams, but it has not hired any additional staff. The coaching positions were included in this year's budget.

STATE OFFICIAL SAYS NO CONNECTION BETWEEN PBB, HEALTH

By PAULA HOLMES
There is no scientific evidence that PBB (polybrominated biphenyl) has caused disease in humans, according to a disease control officer of the Michigan Department of Health.

"We have no discrete, scientific evidence of harm to humans as a result of PBB," Dr. John L. Isbister, of the state health department, told more than 30 people attending the Twin Valley Community Schools Community Forum Monday night.

Isbister said PBB has been found to be a weak cancer-inducing chemical in animals, but he quickly pointed out that animals differ from human beings in the way their bodies process chemicals. He also pointed out that PBB (polychlorinated biphenyl) is also a cancer-causing chemical in animals, but it has not caused any harm in humans. PBB and PBB are closely related chemicals.

"Since PBB is fat soluble, we know that it will be stored in the body for many years and we're not saying that harm won't be caused by the chemical," Isbister continued. "We're proposing to start a long range study to find out what does happen."

The health official said the state is embarking on a study which will involve three groups of people. The state hopes to enroll 2,000 people from quarantined farms, who ate their own meat and dairy products in one group, 2,000 people from farms that were not quarantined and who did not eat their own meat and dairy products, but who did eat meat from other farms in another group, and 2,000 people who have no experience with PBB in a third group.

Save Those Tonsils

The Creator has blessed each individual with a set of tiny but powerful organs, tonsils. Nature has provided this wonderful protective ring around the throat so that undesirable organisms are forced to cope with the resistance of this strong, lymphatic tissue. Occasionally tonsils are so overworked from lowered resistance they become swollen, filled with depressions and emit a foul odor.

Dr. Ricks

The wise parent readily understands that if the tonsils are sick there must be some reason for this condition. They would not consider having them removed unless everything had been done. If a child had an infected finger, would a parent cut it off at the slightest provocation, or would he try desperately to save it at all possible costs? The body does not grow a new finger, it does repair inflamed, overworked tonsils, once the cause of the trouble is removed.

This Winter's Been Busy for Cutter Sundew

By PAULA HOLMES
The U.S. Coast Guard Sundew has been a rare sight around these parts this winter.

WIND ROWED ICE has many passage difficult through the Great Lakes this season. Here a ship can be seen in the distance plugging through the ice (Photo by Paul Bennett)

The harsh weather has made it one of the busiest winters for the ice breaker in recent memory.

But it has been an interesting as well as a busy winter for the 40 enlisted men and seven officers aboard the ship, according to Lt. Cmdr. James V. O'Neill.

"There's always something going on," O'Neill explained. "Even when we get sent out to do one thing we never know where we will end up or how long we will be gone."

Mostly the Sundew has been and will be involved in ice breaking activities while escorting the oil tanker Amoco Wisconsin and her sister ships into Traverse City and Escanaba. But the Sundew has done more than just break ice.

"There was one day in January where we did every operation for which the Sundew was built," Cmdr. O'Neill recalled.

The Sundew is involved with anything that aids navigation on the Great Lakes. These operations include: fueling and repairing lighthouses, setting buoys, search and rescue and ice breaking.

On this particular day in January the cutter was out refueling a lighthouse when it got a call that a tugboat was disabled in Lake Huron. So off went the ship to the rescue.

As the Sundew was pulling the tug to safety, the crew members spotted the blinking light of a list buoy. So after dropping the tug off, the ship returned to pick up the buoy, which was more than 35 miles from its original location. The buoy had been moved by the force of the ice, O'Neill explained.

Following the pick up of the buoy, the Sundew was sent to break ice for a Canadian carrier that was stuck in the St. Mary's river for its last operation of the day.

Following that busy day, the cutter went back to simple ice breaking, which is no slick operation. The Sundew, which is basically a buoy tender with a reinforced hull and additional horsepower to give it ice breaking capabilities, has found it a struggle to navigate the Great Lakes this winter.

"Normally the run from here to the mouth of Grand Traverse Bay takes about one hour," O'Neill explained.

"During the last few trips it has been taking us about two days."

Except for 10 miles on the western shore of Lake Michigan, the body of water is completely frozen, O'Neill said. The ice is about 4 to 5 inches thick in the middle of the lake and 18 to 24 inches thick in the field ice with about a foot of snow on top of that.

"We have seen some wind-drowned ice that was piled about 10 feet above the surface and was probably frozen 5 to 6 feet below the surface," O'Neill said.

"We try to avoid going through that type of ice," he joked.

The Sundew breaks ice by riding up on top of it. Then the weight of the ship breaks through the ice. However this method doesn't always work. Especially this winter.

"We carry 12,500 pounds of cement on our buoy deck," O'Neill said. "If we get stuck we lift the concrete with a boom and swing it back and forth. It usually takes three or four times before the ship is freed."

"If we get really hung up, then we will transfer fuel," he continued. "Both methods rock the ship and loosen it up."

The type of ice not only determines how the Sundew will break through it, but also how it will assist a stranded ship. If the ship needs to go through field ice, the cutter will break a track and have the ship follow through.

"If there is any wind-drowned ice, it's too much pressure on the hull of the carriers, which are older than the Sundew's, to follow us through a track so we usually break a second track and then have the ship go through," O'Neill explained.

"It's a very slow procedure," O'Neill explained. "The only time it goes fast is when we are in flat ice fields."

Ice breaking is also a very noisy operation, the commander said. "Chunks of ice are battling constantly against the side of the ship," he explained. "If you can imagine the sound of a spoon hitting against a pan on a very large scale, that's what it sounds like to break ice."

School Evens Score, Honors Feindt

By FRANK MARTIN
In recognition of 15 years of dedicated service as score keeper for the Charlevoix High School, Larry Feindt was honored at a brief ceremony during the Charlevoix-Gaylord game Friday night.

DALE BURGE, Charlevoix athletic director, honors Larry Feindt for his many years of service as a scorekeeper. Standing in the center is Mary Feindt, Larry's wife.

In presenting him with a plaque, a duplicate of which will be expressed the appreciation of the high school and the athletic department.

The plaque read "Presented to Larry Feindt for his years of service, support and interest in Charlevoix High School athletics."

Mrs. Feindt was presented with a corsage.

After the presentation, Feindt said it was ironic that he should receive the plaque at a Charlevoix-Gaylord game because it was at such a game at Gaylord in 1962 that he first was asked to keep score for the first time. He recalled that Terry Rice, JV coach at the time, spotted him keeping score for the Charlevoix Courier, a service he had done for the newspaper for several years, and asked him to fill in for the regular score keeper who was not at the game.

Thus began a one-time service that developed into what might be considered a career of sorts. During the next 15 years he has traveled thousands of miles to schools of Hooper opponents during the regular season and to tournament sites.

At an average of 20 games per season, he probably attended a minimum of 300 games plus many tournament games. Only during the last couple years did he travel by team bus on long trips. Until then he had driven his own car.

Snow Days Keep Piling Up, Worst Month Yet to Come

By PAULA HOLMES
This year's harsh winter weather has taken its toll on more than just the street crews and the gas bill. It has affected the school system, too.

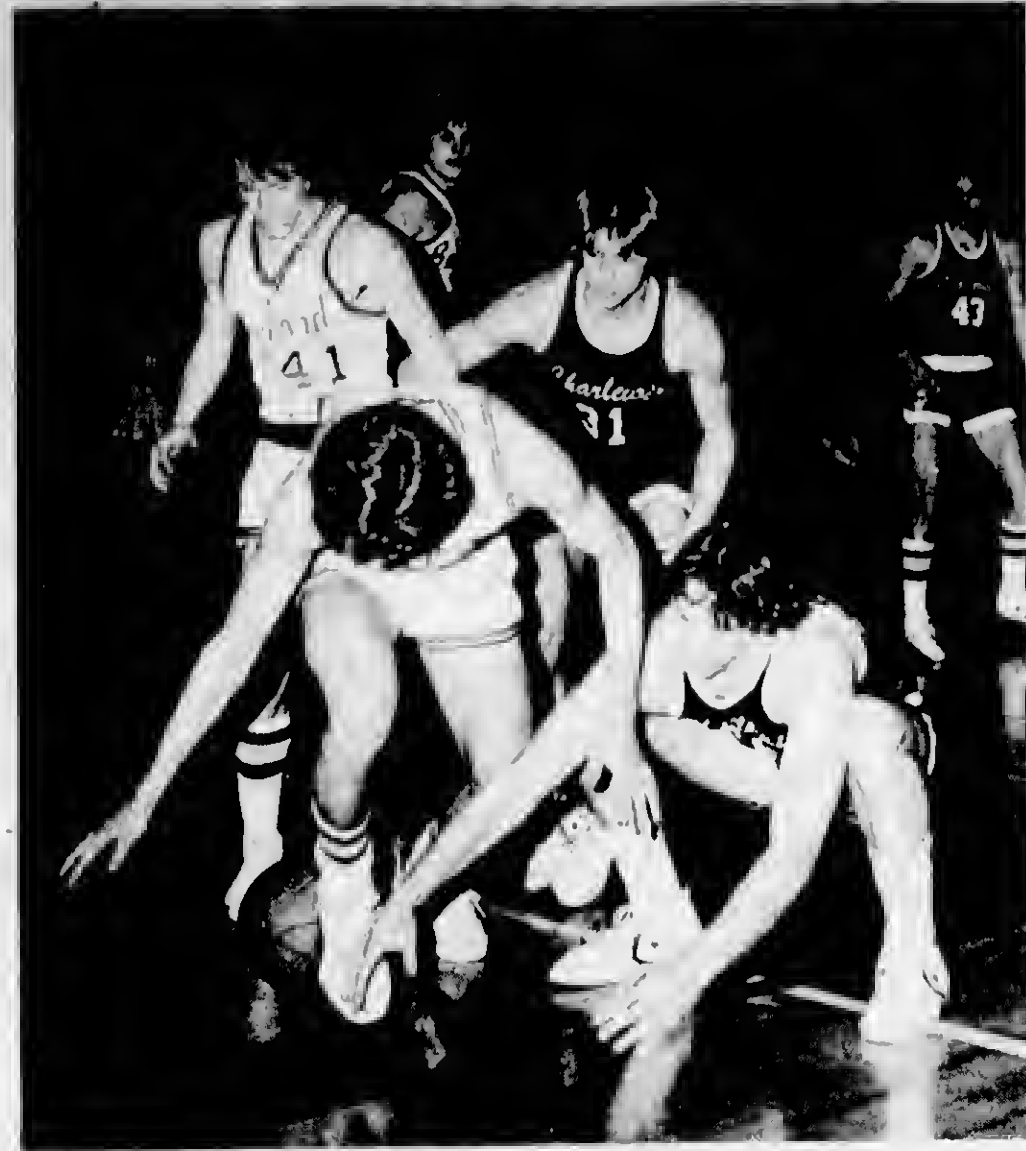

Strong winds and heavy snowfalls have caused the county's four school districts to close their doors for more than an entire school week so far this year. Many districts have had as many snow days already this year as they had during all of last winter. And it doesn't look like the end is in sight.

"Even as this story was being written, the weather changed again and added another one or two snow days, depending on the school district, to this season's tally."

"We've had six snow days so far this year and we had six days in total last year," James McKim, superintendent of the Charlevoix Public Schools, said. "Unless we get Florida sunshine next week, I'd say we have a good chance of surpassing that mark this year."

"We have off of March to go through yet

School Board Amends Contract

By FRANK MARTIN

The Charlevoix Board of Education, at its meeting Monday night, voted to amend its contract with the firm of Manson Jackson and Kane of Lansing to extend and include the renovations of the Middle School made possible by the approval of the 1.0 mill tax levy for five years.

The renovations are to begin when the first tax monies become available this year and continue through 1981. The amended contract will allow the architectural firm to complete plans for the long range program which will be carried out as the funds become available.

Other action taken by the board included the establishment of two regular school board meetings per month on the first and third Mondays. In the past, there was one regular meeting on the third Monday) with the second (on the first Monday) designated as a special meeting.

Allison Croucher of the faculty presented a film on the Community School Concept which related to the extension of the use of the school buildings beyond the normal school day by use of athletic facilities, adult education classes and similar uses under the guidance of a coordinator.

Supt. James A. McKinney advised the board that under a Special Education rule change, classes for special education students will be restricted to 15 students for a teacher. He said the school was applying for a waiver to the Char-Em Intermediate School District to allow 20 students per classroom.

He also reported that Bud Heeres, who is in charge of the current school year, the superintendent reported.

had been commended by the Michigan State Police for the excellent condition of the bus fleet. The commendation was received after State Police personnel had inspected the fleet.

Ned Habbell who operates a public opinion survey firm reported he would meet with the board on March 24 to discuss a survey in the community relating to school needs.

A request had been made for CETA employees to maintain and restore the Beaver Head light station on Beaver Island, McKinney reported.

At the present time the Charlevoix schools have had seven snow days. The school is allowed five for the school year so at this time two must be made up at the end of the current school year, the superintendent reported.

McKinney reported on the final report made to the State Board of Education by the Blue Ribbon Task Force relative to Intermediate School Districts, their functions and proposed financing. Mr. McKinney served as a member of the special task force.

The board also heard William Stevens and Doug Wilks speak on a proposed Senior League Baseball program. They asked if the school would consider summer baseball in the high school program. Dale Burge, high school athletic director who had researched the program, said it would not be sanctioned by the Michigan State High School Athletic Association so boys participating in the program would not be covered by the school's insurance program. He also said the program would cost an estimated $2,200 annually. No action on the request was made at this time. However, the issue will be placed on a future agenda.

The Open Meetings Freedom of Information Act was discussed briefly by Mr. McKinney who said an in-service meeting relating to Open Meetings had been scheduled for March 21 and a second on Freedom of Information on April 30.

The Charlevoix High School bands, the Rayder Basketball team, the Rayder Wrestling team and their respective director coaches were commended by the board for their recent accomplishments.

The next regular meeting of the board will be on April 4. The March 21 meeting will be an in-service meeting for the board.

With Rent Hike Fight

City Can't Do Much To Help Senior Citizens

There's not much the City of Charlevoix can do for the senior citizens and their supporters fighting a 25 percent rent hike at the Charlevoix Apartments on May Street, Mayor Edward Hansen told common council Monday night.

Several residents had attended past council meetings and had telephoned various aldermen asking them to help stop the rent increases which have already forced three residents to move out of the 40-unit apartment complex.

The tenants, many of whom are existing merely on social security income, cited they moved into the housing complex because they were under the impression the rent would not be increased unless their income was.

"There's no subsidy available for the housing on May Street," Hansen said. "That project does not qualify."

The mayor said the city and the housing commission couldn't even take over the project and have it qualify for subsidized housing.

The city official said he had been in contact with U.S. congressman Philip Ruppe's office, which had suggested he get in touch with the Farmers Home Administration (FHA) to find out more about Section 8 funding for the construction of subsidized housing.

Hansen explained the city housing commission had applied for these funds but had been denied last summer.

"I think we are caught in a cash shortage situation," the mayor said explaining why the city's application for funding had been turned down.

"Also we are low on the priority list for funding because they say we are not subject to the economic blight of other communities and that our local tax effort is low," he continued.

"I think we just lit them at the wrong time for this funding," he said.

Mayor Hansen said he would pursue the issue, however, and he plans to get in contact with the FHA office in Lansing this week.

The senior citizens had sought help earlier from Charlevoix County Prosecuting Attorney Roy Hayes. After investigating the matter, Hayes told the residents that the city might be able to do something if there was any misrepresentation made at the time of the approval of the zoning change for the housing project.

Hansen did not think there were any misrepresentations made.

About Grey Gables

Grey Gables should never have been permitted to build the banquet room in the first place until parking space was guaranteed. The same goes for the Complex that were built on Belvedere Ave. I also don't think that tax money should be spent on providing parking spaces for the business people. Businesses have a right to buy property behind their places starting at Antrim and continuing on to Park Ave. directly behind their places of business. This would provide their own parking facilities. If you will notice, that most cars congesting the parking places belong to employees and the store owners themselves.

Students Win Gold Medals

Charlevoix is now the home of four Olympic athletes—Special Olympic athletes that is.

Charlevoix High School entries in the wrestling division of the Special Olympics, held Saturday in Lansing, captured three gold medals and one silver medal, their instructor, Plas Presnell, announced.

Presnell said the gold medals were comparable to state championships. There were 100 entries from 24 regions across the state in last weekend's meet.

Taking first in their respective weight classes were: Curt Dixon in the 165-pound category, Vince Brodin (145), and Bob Bayer (105). Rick Hudson (145) won a second place and received a silver medal.

The entries were coached by Norm Probert, high school wrestling coach. Learning Center Instructor Presnell took the grapplers to Lansing. Dixon and Bayer won with three pins each, Brodin had three pins and a decision and Hudson had two losses.

Enroute to the Special Olympics, Charlevoix entries and Presnell attended the Golden Gloves boxing tournament in Grand Rapids.

Hospital Directors Approve Funding Feasibility Study

The Charlevoix Area Hospital Board of Directors has decided to embark on a financial feasibility study for a proposed expansion program.

The board of directors has recognized a need for certain increased space and work areas in several departments of the hospital, Richard Krueger, hospital administrator, said.

Those areas extremely pressed for space are: the outpatient emergency room, laboratory, radiology (x-ray), inpatient laboratory, medical records, employee dining room and storage, Krueger said.

The need for additional space is apparent from the increases in hospital activity in the past several years. Outpatient emergency care is up 116 percent, X-ray procedures have increased 152 percent and laboratory procedures are up 90 percent.

More patient beds do not appear to be needed at this time, however, the administrator said.

The board of directors employed an architectural firm to study the problems and purpose expansion plans that would solve the immediate and future space needs. Graback, Bell, Kline and Brown, architects and engineers located in Traverse City, produced a master plan for the hospital which proposed a program of phased expansion.

The first expansion phase suggested by the firm would provide entirely new space for emergency rooms, laboratory, radiology, physical therapy and inhalation therapy. It is estimated the expansion, which would be built with future expansions in mind, would cost approximately $700,000 at this time. The funds would probably have to be raised through community donations, government grants and loans from financial institutions, Krueger said.

Krueger said the Charlevoix hospital, which was built in 1953, has been through four expansion programs.

Kusina said he plans to start construction as soon as possible.

The Charlevoix resident is also proposing to expand the office building in a second phase of construction to run around the perimeter of the lot. To do this, however, he needs a variance from council for the location of the buildings and also permission to extend the wall along Bridge Street.

Council was in disagreement over the plans and sent the site plan for the second phase of construction back to committee for further review.

Edwards is planning to construct a 1,234 foot addition to Edwards IGA Market along Burns and Petoskey Streets. A building permit has also been issued for this cement block addition to the grocery store. City Manager Allen Sandberg told council he had also received a phone call from Weatherford Walker Developments of Southfield. The company is planning to develop a shopping center on M-66 and will be sending a proposed site plan to the council for review some time this week.

In Town This Spring

Flurry of Construction Slated

A flurry of construction activity will begin to take place in Charlevoix as soon as the snow melts this spring.

Charlevoix Common Council gave formal approval to two site plans Monday night for William Kusina and Richard Edwards.

Kusina is proposing to construct a 4,200 square foot cement block office building on property on the corner of Bridge and Harbor streets. The building will be divided into four offices.

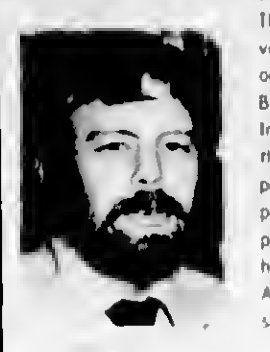

A building permit has been issued for the structure and

MARCH BIRTHSTONE

Blodstone is the old birthstone for March. This stone is dark green with flecks of red color throughout. The Agatestone has greatly replaced Blodstone for March, but much lore surrounds the ancient stone.

The Blodstone is said to have checked bleeding in various cultures, sometimes being held in the hand or placed on the injured area. The Franciscan friar Bernardino de Sahagun, a missionary to the Mexican Indians, shortly after the Spanish conquest, writes that in 1576 he cured many natives who were of the point of death from hemorrhage (a result of the plague), by causing them to hold in their hand a piece of Blodstone. By this means he claims to have saved many lives. For Blodstone or Agatestone jewelry for March, March jewelry, see the selection available at Reusch Jewelry.

CHIROPRACTIC IS DIFFERENT

When Chiropractic was first introduced to the world it constituted a need and different approach to the problems of health. The approach to health prior to that time had been a chemical approach. Chiropractic came along and said that the body receives all of the chemicals needed for health through the food we eat, through oxygen we inhale, and the water we drink.

Chiropractic stressed the fact that the cause of disease is within the body. It sought for that cause within the body. If Chiropractic had not been different it would not have any good reason for existence. It is its difference that permits Chiropractic to restore health to millions where other methods fail. It is this difference that makes it a separate and distinct profession, assuring society of the perpetuation of that difference which sick people need so much. Glens Market Plans Move to Charlevoix Glens Market and Family Center has announced plans to open a store in Charlevoix October 1.

The grocery store will lease space in a proposed shopping center to be located on M-46, Glen A. Catt, supervisor, announced. The Charlevoix store will be the 10th-market to be opened by the Northern Michigan grocery chain.

Walker, of Weatherford Walker Developments, stressed that plans for the proposed shopping center are still tentative. He said that the site plan for the 44,300 square foot building have not yet been submitted to the Charlevoix Common Council. He said the plans would probably be sent to the council this week.

Walker said the company proposed to have a 10,000 square foot junior department store, a 5,000 square foot drug store and two or three smaller stores in the shopping center in addition to Glens Market. However, no leases for the other stores have yet been signed.

The developer said plans for the shopping center include a structural theme for the structure with covered walkways. Walker said the company has recently completed a shopping center in Rogers City. That center houses an IGA, Ben Franklins, Walgreens and a Dairy Queen.

Walker said the company is proposing to construct the shopping center.

Glens Market has signed a lease with Weatherford Walker Developments, of Southfield, which is proposing to construct the shopping center.

Managing the grocery store will be Ray Gilmore, currently store manager at Manicella's. Gilmore, a Gaylord High School graduate, has worked in six Glens Markets during the last 10 years.

The 28-year-old man is a Vietnam veteran and a member of the Lions and Jaycees. His hobbies are bowling and model ship building. His wife Linda, is a second grade teacher in the Manicella School District.

The other Glens Markets are located in East Jordan, Gaylord, Grayling, Kalkaska, West Branch, Mio, Manicella, Roscommon and Rose City.

Airport Planners Seek Public Input

An informational meeting about the Charlevoix Municipal Airport will be held at 8 p.m. Thursday in the Community Room in City Hall.

The purpose of the meeting is to get local input about what the area residents would like to see happen at the airport. Alvin Ronger, engineer in charge of developing a master plan for the airport, explained.

The city is seeking federal funds for improvements to the airport. In order to qualify for the funds, a master plan must be designed for the facility.

"No proposed improvements will be presented at the meeting," Ronger said. "We aren't that far along in our work."

"What we would like to find out is what the people who use the airport think," Ronger said. "What facilities they think are adequate and what they think is inadequate."

Ronger said the engineers working on the master plan would also like to hear from local businesses and industries about their future use of the airport for shipping.

Sheriff Starts Program to Acquaint Students with Law Enforcement Field

By FRANK MARTIN

Five Charlevoix High School students are making their mark at the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department. The students are part of a pilot Youth Cadet program initiated last week by Sheriff George T. Lasater. The program is designed to provide career exploration for students interested in the law enforcement field, Lasater explained.

"The program is a career exploration program, not a recruiting program for the sheriff's department," Lasater explained. "It has been conducted successfully in Kalamazoo County and I think it will go here."

"I feel it is an excellent way to acquaint young men with law enforcement as a career," the sheriff continued. "Some people spend several years at various jobs before they settle on one as a career. In this program, these people, through the same in-service program we give all our new officers, will be introduced to all phases of law enforcement and at the conclusion of the course should be able to make a decision about it as a career."

Plans call for the five students to attend classes one night a week for the next 12 weeks with Sheriff's deputies, posse members and Hays City auxiliary police. The course, which is the same one offered to men seeking to become certified officers, will cover such areas of law enforcement as communications, arrests, traffic, transporting, patrol complaints, jail security, criminal statutes and the laws of criminal justice.

As their training progresses, the students will be allowed to work with members of the sheriff's department as the officers carry out their various duties.

The students will be identified as cadets with their own uniforms, cadet badges and hats. They will work strictly as volunteers. They will support their own program by raising funds for their badges, hats and other equipment. The uniforms are used ones no longer needed by the sheriff's department. Ski and Shore has already donated $25 to the program.

Sheriff Lasater said the students are under no obligation to continue with the program if they decide it isn't for them.

That's what it's all about—career exploration, Lasater explained. "It's purpose is to expose people to the basics of law enforcement and then let them decide if this is the career they will seek for themselves."

High schools throughout the county have been invited to participate in the program, which is open to high school juniors and seniors who are interested in a career in law enforcement. The Charlevoix school was the first to respond to the offer. More than 25 students were screened by Counselor Gail Kaczynski and narrowed down to seniors Greg Grubhaugh, Bill Bellows, John Murray and Bill Sweet and junior Bruce Avery.

REACT to Hold CB Registration To Prevent Theft

A registration for Citizen Band radios is being offered without charge by Northwest REACT No. 3433 Rick Baker, a member of the group, has announced.

"With an average of one CB radio being stolen per week, we feel that it is about time we did something to protect the owners of the radios," Baker said in explaining the registration service.

Owners of CB radios may bring their vehicles to the garage at the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department where they will be marked without charge with the owner's drivers' license number. It will then be registered at the sheriff's department with its own serial number, the name of the owner and his driver's license number and the make of the radio. Baker said it will not be necessary to remove the radio from the vehicle.

The service will be offered from 12 noon until 5 p.m. Saturday, March 12.

Elementary Students Get Brief Dental Check Up

All of the Charlevoix Elementary School students got their teeth checked recently and they didn't even have to leave school.

Dentists Dave Strawbridge, Jeff Porter and Bob Tollas, performed the brief dental screening as part of a dental health awareness program being conducted at the school.

"The purpose of the dental screening was to make parents aware of the concern of the school and the professionals in the area and to let parents know of any dental problems their children might have," Dr. Strawbridge explained.

"Also the program was designed to help the children learn more about dental health and dentists."

Dr. Strawbridge said the children generally looked pretty healthy, but about 20 percent of the students checked did need to have some work done on their teeth.

The dentist said the dental health education program was started at the Charlevoix school last year with kits purchased through special federal funds. The kits contained all the tools the students needed to learn the proper brushing techniques. Accompanying the kits were special movies, film strips and booklets also aimed at teaching the children preventative dental skills.

This year the federal fund dried up, Dr. Strawbridge said, but the Lions Club funded the project.

Earlier in the year, the dentists held an inservice training program for the teachers to help them learn proper brushing techniques so that they could teach the children.

And in the last couple months, the program has moved into full gear with the students actually brushing their teeth in class as well as viewing the films and learning from their teachers.

"It's a good activity for the kids in the late morning and afternoon when they get wound up," Strawbridge said. "They learn to do something constructive for themselves."

District Court Probation Office Supervisors 196

By FRANK MARTIN

The 90th District Court Probation Department was a busy one last year, according to Jennifer L. Brindel, chief probation officer.

Mrs. Brindel recently presented an in-depth report, outlining the functions and responsibilities of the probation department, its programs and the number of people coming under its jurisdiction, to the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners.

In presenting the report, the chief probation officer said the main function of the department is to supervise misdemeanor offenders who have been placed on either probation or delayed or deferred sentence by the district court judge.

Last year the department supervised 196 people in Charlevoix County and 346 in Emmet County.

Additional duties include presentence investigation and coordinating the District Court programs that include the county's volunteer work program, the Charlevoix County Jail, education program, and special programs for alcohol and drug offenders.

Presentence investigations, as the name implies, are, as the name implies, an investigation prior to the sentencing of a defendant by the District Court Judge. The probation officer conducts an investigation into the crime, interviews the defendant, plaintiff and all parties concerned, checks the person's criminal record, interviews the arresting officer, obtains the police report and all pertinent information on the background of the defendant.

After this is completed, the probation officer turns the findings over to the judge with recommendations.

During 1976, the probation department performed 247 presentence investigations in Charlevoix and Emmet counties. Charlevoix and Emmet counties are both under the jurisdiction of the 90th Judicial District and as a result probation department figures in many instances are for the two counties.

The County Work Program is a new program established by the District Court. Defendants who have been found guilty of a non-violent crime such as larceny, alcohol-related offenses and drug offenses, are sentenced to the work program for a specified number of days where they work without pay in lieu of spending time in the county jail. The District Court feels that it is a useful and successful program since it serves as a strong deterrent for the defendant not to return to court as a repeater, keeps the defendant out of jail so he can continue to work and support his family, provides a worthwhile service to the community and saves county tax dollars by eliminating the expense of jail lodging and board.

In Charlevoix county persons assigned to the work program put in 662 man hours including 186 at the jail; 217 at the Grandview Medical Care Facility; 245 at the County building; seven at special projects and seven at Whiting Park.

In Emmet county 1,217 man hours were served. The reason for the increased number of hours was the larger number of persons involved.

The Probation Officer, among other things, makes recommendations regarding the ability to make restitution for court-appointed attorneys and to an injured party in a criminal case. In 1976, $2,283 was collected in Charlevoix County and $3,450 in Emmet County for court-appointed attorneys. A total of $3,477 was collected as restitution in Charlevoix County and $6,796 in Emmet County.

In September of 1975, a pilot adult education program for inmates at the Charlevoix County Jail was initiated through the cooperation of the court and the Charlevoix High School Adult Education program. Two classes were offered with 15 students, a math/science class to prepare students for the General Education Development Test (G.E.D.) and a language arts class dealing with reading, spelling and writing skills. Two other jail inmates were given the opportunity to enroll in Adult Education Classes at the Charlevoix High School and several probationers were accepted in the G.E.D. Diploma programs at the high schools in the county.

A DUII, Referral program is utilized by the court. The Alcohol Highway Safety classes are sponsored by the Substance Abuse Division of the District Health Department to provide offenders with a better understanding of alcohol abuse and alcoholism. Upon completion of the course, offenders are returned to the court and are sentenced according to their prior driving record and the cooperation with the referral program.

During 1976, 46 offenders in Charlevoix county and 93 in Emmet county completed the classes. Of this number, six were repeater offenders in Charlevoix county. There were no repeaters in Charlevoix county.

Probationers and defendants are often referred to Community agencies. Last year 243 persons were referred to 13 agencies. The majority of these were referred to the Substance Abuse Service, Drug Related, 31; alcohol related, 63; and Corrections Employment Service, 22. The others include, among others, the M.E.S.C., Halfway House, Petoskey Mental Health Clinic and similar agencies.

Self-awareness classes for controlled substance abusers in the two counties are sponsored by the District Health Department. Part of an offender's probation includes attending the classes for six weeks at a cost of $35. It does not deal exclusively with drug education but rather is geared toward the use of self awareness techniques and values clarification. In 1976, 34 probationers completed the program. There have been no repeaters.

Township Residents Study Proposed Sewer System

By PAULA HOLMES

Charlevoix Township residents got their first look at a proposed sewer system for the township at a public hearing Monday night.

And about 90 percent of the 30 residents attending the hearing supported the idea of sewer construction in the township.

Alvin Ronger, who along with Wayne Boss, Ben Cunningham and Greg Shadko, has been working on the engineering for the project which involves not only Charlevoix but Hayes, Marion, Eveline and Norwood townships and the City of Charlevoix, explained the project.

Ronger said there were six major areas of existing population requiring the immediate extension of sewerage collection and treatment services. These areas included: Pine Point, North Point, Lake View Court and vicinity, Homeland subdivision and vicinity, Boulder Park and along U.S. 31 north.

Township Supervisor Oscar Stroud said the township board had been petitioned by the residents of the Pine Point, Boulder Park and Lake View Court areas for the construction of sewers and that was why the board had agreed to become part of the study group.

"I want to stress that this study encompasses 20 years," Ronger said. "We have to consider what's already in place and what may take place in the township."

The engineer said based on census studies and the county planning department studies, Charlevoix Township could be expected to double its population within the next 20 years.

"We anticipate that new people moving into the area will build homes near one of the six areas, primarily because these areas are zone residential," Ronger said. "And it is these areas that will need the sewers."

He anticipated that it would cost approximately $1,000 to tap in to the sewer system plus another $12 a month for debt retirement and operation and maintenance of the sewer system.

The engineer estimated the entire project would cost about $2.5 million. If the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) picks up 80 percent of the funding of the project, which current legislation allows for, the cost to township residents will be only $501,507.

Approximately 284 homes in the township would currently qualify for sewer hook up under the proposed system.

Senior Citizens Housing

It's too bad that Charlevoix doesn't have low income housing for its senior citizens. I'm sure that such a complex could be filled if the city could only find someone who was willing to buck the red tape and work out the details for the construction. It is important that we help our senior citizens. We will all grow old one day.

WEATHER

The following weather information was furnished by the Charlevoix Coast Guard Station and the Charlevoix Sewage Disposal Plant:

Date	High	Low	Rainfall
March 8	47	30	0
March 9	54	34	0
March 10	60	30	0
March 11	49	35	0
March 12	44	34	.04
March 13	48	35	.94
March 14	50	33	0

There have been 134.4 inches of snow so far this year, with 10 inches falling during March.

Ronger said that figured into the cost of the sewer system is not only the cost of laying pipe and constructing pump stations, but also the cost of enlarging certain sewer lines in the City of Charlevoix to accommodate the increased flow from the township and to separate the city's combined sanitary and storm sewers.

"Because Charlevoix Township will benefit in the changes of the city sewer system, they should have to help pay for the changes," Ronger pointed out.

The board felt the way the assessing had been done was unfair," William Brady, chairman of the township board of review, explained.

"I'm not saying that the assessing wasn't done right," Brady stressed. "I'm just saying that in our opinion the assessments are unfair."

According to the county equalization department, assessments for the township in the residential property category were overall 34 percent below fair market price, established by sales studies in the township.

And when Robert Pott, Charlevoix Township assessor, set about correcting the deficit by reviewing the township's tax roll, that resulted in property valuation increases of as much as 60 percent for some people living in older homes.

"More than 70 people came to the board of review today because they felt they had an excessive assessment on their property," Brady said.

County Property Tax Dollar Split Many Ways

The worst of property taxes are on the tip of everyone's tongues these days. County residents seem to know how much their taxes are and how much the bill is going up next year, but no one seems to know exactly what property taxes are used for.

In Charlevoix County more than $7 million in revenue will be raised by the 1976 property tax levy which is currently being collected and split between four units—the county, the township, cities or villages, the school district and the intermediate school district.

While the amount of mills levied against property varies from township to township and city to city, approximately 72 percent of every tax bill goes to the public school district and the intermediate school district.

Another section of the property tax pie, amounting to 12.46 percent goes to the county with 14.97 percent going to the cities, villages and townships.

In return for its share of the tax pie, the four public school districts in Charlevoix County provide instruction, administration, materials, building maintenance, transportation, operation of buildings, capital outlay, health service, insurance and bonded debt retirement.

The Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District provides special education, building maintenance, administration, materials, building codes inspection, county surveyor, prosecuting attorney, drain commissioner, appeals court, probate court, district court, circuit court and friend of the court.

The county also pays for such things as: elections, building authority rent, building maintenance, administration, materials, building codes inspection, county surveyor, prosecuting attorney, drain commissioner, appeals court, probate court, district court, circuit court and friend of the court.

The county buildings' main administration, including, among other things, social security, unemployment, capital outlay and the cooperative extension service with property tax money.

The township with the highest millage rate levied against property is Hayes Township with a millage rate of 36.59. Bay taxpayers pay 4.70 allocated mills to the county or about $38,929.25; 3.5 mills to the township including, 1 allocated mill, 5 mill for fire protection and 2 mills for road improvements and construction, 27.19 mills to the Boyne City School District and 1.2 mills to the Char-Em Intermediate School District.

The city with the highest millage rate is East Jordan, which levies 51 mills. City taxpayers also pay the 4.7 allocated county mills, 19 to the city including 16 mills for operations, 5 mill for fire department and 2.5 mills for street bond, 28.1 mills for the East Jordan School District, and 1.2 mills to the intermediate district.

The township with the lowest millage rate is St. James Township on Beaver Island. Taxpayers in this township pay the 4.7 allocated mills to the county and 8.7 mills to the township including the 1 allocated mill, 2 mills for the airport, 4 mills for operations and 1.7 mills for airport bonds, 10.1 mills for the Beaver Island School District and 1.2 mills to the intermediate school district.

And when Robert Pott, Charlevoix Township assessor, set about correcting the deficit by reviewing the township's tax roll, that resulted in property valuation increases of as much as 60 percent for some people living in older homes.

"More than 70 people came to the board of review today because they felt they had an excessive assessment on their property," Brady said.

"Last year only four people came to the board of review to protest their taxes," he added.

Township Supervisor Oscar Stroud said he had been warning people that their property valuations would show huge increases this year, and that he had been urging people to come to the board of review and file protests about their taxes.

"It's important for the individual to come in and file a complaint so that we can take the complaints to the county commissioners and let them know how the people feel," Stroud said.

Chairman Brady said the board of review was not gambling that the property taxes would be lower because of its action.

"They'll be factored right back up to whatever is their share, whatever the study shows is their valuation," Mrs. Blanchard said.

"They'll have to carry their share of what the study shows," the equalization director continued. "And if that's not done by assessment, then it will be done by factor."

Chairman Brady said the board of review was not gambling that the property taxes would be lower because of its action.

THE PROPERTY TAX DOLLAR collected in Charlevoix County is split among many governmental units with the majority of the money going to support the schools. This graph was provided by the county equalization department.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

1. Are Chiropractor adjustments painful?

No. Gentle spinal adjustments are specially trained to locate and correct displacement in the vertebrae with little or no discomfort. After spinal displacements are corrected the body will feel more active, giving you that healthy, happy feeling.

Dr. Jeffrey Hicks

2. Do you have to have faith in Chiropractic to get results?

No! Chiropractic is a scientific way of removing the cause of disease. The body does the healing. A Chiropractor's job is much easier if he has the faith and confidence of the patient, but it is not absolutely necessary.

3. Why do Chiropractors X-ray?

X-ray to the Chiropractor is like the blueprint to the builder. The Chiropractor uses X-ray to help him locate the exact vertebra that is causing the patient's condition. After the analysis has been made the necessary adjustment can be given to return the displaced vertebrae to its normal position.

Only a Chiropractor is trained in determining if yours is a Chiropractor case. When all else has failed, remember not all has been tried if Chiropractor was not included. Millions have found new hope in the office of a Chiropractor. Enjoy good health all your life, try Chiropractor today.

Editorials/Opinions

Taxpayers Should Urge Alternative Funding

Nothing in life is certain except death and taxes, the old saying goes. And in the last few years the Charlevoix County taxpayers have added a third item to the list in that saying—nothing in life is certain except death, taxes and a property tax increase.

We are not blaming or criticizing the equalization department or the township assessors for this tax increase. We understand that if these people are doing a good and fair job it means that taxes will most likely go up because our property continues to increase in value.

But we are asking our government officials, particularly those men and women who represent us at the state level, to look into an alternative means of raising tax dollars in this state.

We in Northern Michigan cannot continue to have our property valuation climb as it has in recent years or our property will be taxed out from underneath us. That would indeed be a sad state of affairs.

As is pointed out in an article in today's Courier, most of the property taxes in this county go to support the four school systems. About 70 percent of our property tax dollars are used to educate our youth.

We are not saying the school systems should be deprived of these tax dollars. We feel that the schools deserve the support of the people, but we are suggesting that an alternative means of financing the school systems should lead to a cut in property taxes and a more equitable way of spreading the school tax burden.

The only alternative is to seek a means of funding the school system that combines both property taxes and an income tax of some sort. This way the rapid and yearly increase in property taxes could be checked some what because the amount of mills levied against property would be lower.

The remainder of the tax burden could be spread on a graduated income tax system, among everyone according to their ability to pay.

Bills advocating this switch in the funding of the school systems as a means of lowering property taxes have been introduced into both the house and the senate. We urge taxpayers to learn about these bills, to seek the advice of area school superintendents as to which bill would be the most beneficial for our school systems and then to urge their representatives to support the switch in the system.

We must work together to seek a solution to our high property taxes. Positive action can do it.

Chemical Surveillance Needed in State

PCB, PBB and PCP. It's amazing how these few letters in the right combination have caused so much anguish and tragedy in this state.

The letters represent various chemicals—toxic chemicals—that have one way or another crept into our food chain and into our bodies.

While State Department of Health officials are still arguing over whether or not PCB and PBB actually caused any harm to the people who have consumed the chemicals in their food, almost everyone in Michigan has consumed some amount of both chemicals—over the weekend it was announced that PCP is a very dangerous chemical which has already been linked to the death of several cows in the southern part of this state.

Who knows when the chemical will do to people? The question is, why weren't these chemicals studied before they were put on the market? How come nobody knew that the chemicals would seep through the earth where they were disposed of and into the water table and into the Great Lakes and into the trout and whitefish as PCB has.

And now PCP, which was used to treat wood grain storage bins, has contaminated the feed and poisoned several animals.

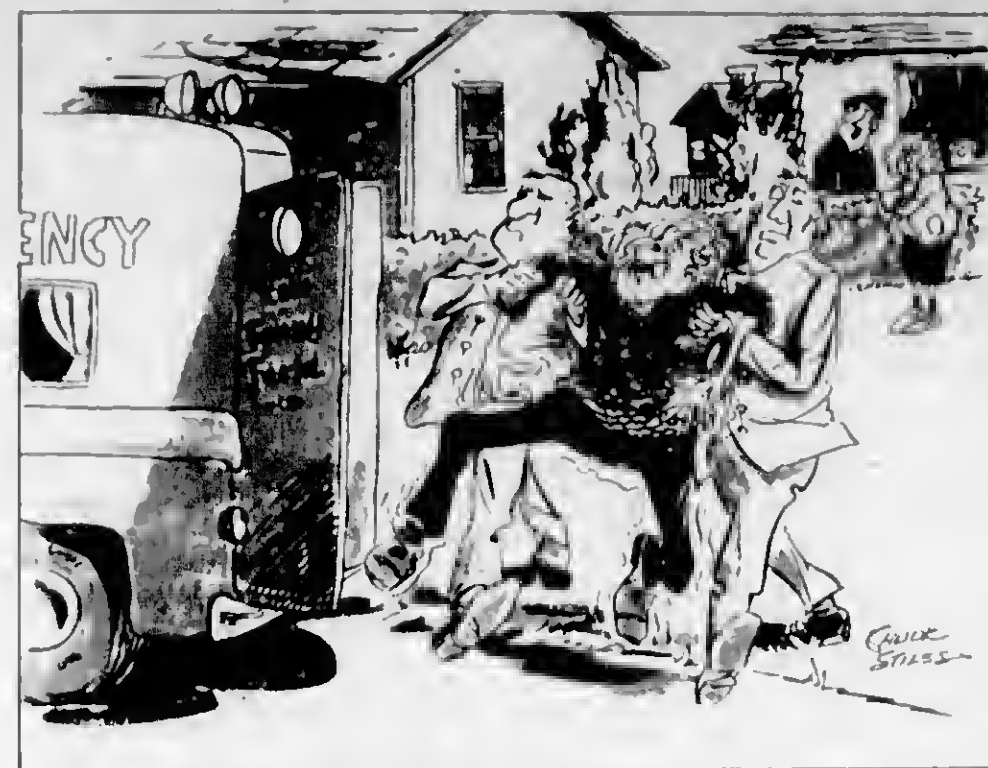

We urge concerned citizens of this state to demand that stricter controls be placed on the use of any chemical in this state. No one should have to go through the pain and uncertainty that our citizens have had to go through after finding out that they may well have been poisoned by a chemical that none of our health or agriculture or food and drug officials seem to know anything about.

As taxpayers we employ a good number of people to protect us from improper use of chemicals and other things that could be harmful to our health. But they seem to have failed in their job.

If these officials have failed because they did not have the proper tools, such as strict legislation regarding the use of chemicals, to help them protect the residents of this state, then we urge our state representatives and senators to get busy and pass such legislation.

If these officials failed because they weren't doing the job they were hired for, then we urge the legislature to replace the officials.

At any rate, the residents of this state cannot tolerate many more chemical poisonings before it will begin to seriously affect people as well as animals.

Duke Answers Story On Tennis Match

EDITOR'S NOTE: Tombs is taken pretty seriously about Charlevoix, especially the matches between Thomas Duke and Richard George. Last week the Courier reported the outcome of one of these matches. The following is Duke's reply.

The Charlevoix Courier
and Richard T. George
RE: Courier Article March 2, 1977

Gentlemen:

This will serve to put you on notice, that the malicious and vicious article of the above date, due to both errors of commission and omission, obviously deliberate, has prompted me to take advice from counsel and as a result, litigation will begin immediately.

You are advised that damages will be sought commensurate with the damage done to the pristine pure and splendid reputation of one Thomas A. Duke.

The following basic complaints will be part of the lawsuit:

1. The word "trounces" in the headline was inaccurate. It should have been "obliterated."

2. The obvious reference to my hair piece "Alas Flying Carpet" was both unnecessary and in questionable taste, considering the fact that I have been told that it is incredibly undetectable. That one reference in your newspaper article will most probably make known for the first time that it is not "hume grown hair."

3. Your laughable reference to my age of 63 when I am, in fact and in appearance, 29, is patently absurd. The loser, Mr. George (Alas Twinkle Toes), while admitting to at least 34, which fabrication he continues to use.

4. Your reference to "124 prior games" is not only inaccurate but is obviously in error because that many games would most certainly have led to cardiac arrest in an old goat like Mr. George.

5. You are to be heartily congratulated and I must say we can "point with pride" to your accurate sentence referring to "Duke played a flawless game."

6. The claimed disadvantage by Mr. George, i.e., "playing with left hand, wearing snow shoes, asthma and low back pain", are all false, misleading, scurrilous and unworthy of response with the exception of the low back pain. He may, I will admit, have suffered low back pain because in the third set he unfortunately took one of my screaming crosscourt volleys in the tush, while he was ducking for cover.

7. Your last paragraph, once again, shows how the article pendulously and ponderously staggered from maliciousness to accurate reporting, whereby "my modest and humble demeanor" is pointed out.

8. It is mind-boggling that you would omit the final scores of the match 6-1, 6-4, 6-2. It is an obvious whitewash and cover up.

Please be advised that one of the finest law firms in the world, Bombast and Bombast of Uganda, will be handling the case.

They have assured me we will triumph in court, just as on court, or they will shrink your heads! Sincerely,
Thomas (Flying Carpet) Duke

If it Fits

by Jim Fitzgerald

State Sen. Basil Brown is asking taxpayers to buy him a $2,000 ticket to China so he can study, among other things, "special problems affecting minorities."

Good thinking. Brown is from Highland Park where Chinese are a minority you can walk for days without seeing one. But China is full of Chinese people.

If you think Brown is a smart legislator, how about Rep. Dominic Jacobetti, the Neogene Democrat? At the age of 56, Jacobetti just joined a pension plan which allows him to retire at the age of 55 and collect at least $11,400 per year. He was allowed to join the plan 22 years later by virtue of a special bill passed by his fellow Legislators.

Until last December, Jacobetti was the only member of the 16-member Legislature who did not participate in the retirement system. Legislators must pay 9 percent of their salary into the system, and for 22 years Jacobetti refused to pay. After all, he could not be sure he would be a legislator long enough to collect full benefits. Voters are capricious, and a legislator can get hit by a truck.

But last year Jacobetti looked at his calendar and discovered, by God, he had made it. So he asked his good buddies to pass a bill changing the deadline for joining the legislative retirement system to Jan. 1, 1977 for any legislator now serving. The bill would benefit only 1 person in the world—Jacobetti.

The bill was passed in a swirl. All Jacobetti had to do was make a lump payment of about $6,100, including interest. He can retire tomorrow and begin collecting his $11,400 annually. Jacobetti didn't play the game until after he won it. More good thinking. If you don't agree that Jacobetti is a clever fellow, just try pulling his stunt on the pension plan where you work.

All of which reminds me of a jobless friend who phoned me from Las Vegas 2 years ago. I was surprised because a week earlier he had been living on welfare in Michigan. He explained he was pretending to be a state legislator so he could show the world how easy it is for a phony to get on the public payroll.

"Right now I am on a junket," he said. "I am attending a seminar on the Clockwise

by Bob Clock

If you find yourself up to your ears in unpaid bills at the end of every month, you apparently are in good company. Maybe not good, but at least plentiful.

The National Foundation for Consumer Credit in Washington reports that the average family with an income of $15,000 a year now has an average debt of $6,000, excluding mortgage payments.

The institute says that as many as 10 percent of American families are in serious financial difficulty today, compared to only three percent in 1973.

The folks most likely to find themselves in credit card trouble are young marrieds, who try to match the lifestyle of their parents right off the bat, and young couples with children who may suffer a drastic cut in spendable income if the young mother quits work.

Each month, consumers charge about $1.5 billion worth of goods and services, with total credit outstanding pushing $88 billion, according to the Federal Reserve Board.

In the pre-Christmas spending boom last year, Americans went credit-crazy wild, with consumer credit expanding at the fastest rate in 41 months. By the end of 1976, consumer installment debt outstanding was up more than 10 percent from a year earlier.

Although the figure doesn't include home mortgages, it does include automobiles, charges on bank credit cards and department store charge credit.

All of which makes rather dismal reading, because we haven't even begun to talk about credit interest rates which can double the cost of large purchases when spread over inordinately long periods of time.

Is there hope for the creditaholic? Yes, according to John Johnson, executive vice-president of the American Collectors Association, an organization of 2,600 collection agencies.

—First, make a list of all your creditors, the amount owed to each and the date and size of your last payment.

—Get in touch with each creditor, explain your problem and tell him how you plan to repay the bill. Be specific.

—Figure up how much it costs you to live each month — and reduce the amount by 20 percent. Non-essentials will go out the window, but you'll find life is possible on an austere budget.

—Use this 20 percent to pay your creditors. Make and keep a commitment to pay something — no matter how much — to each creditor each month. That is the key to getting back to a good credit standing.

Johnson urges above all that creditaholics keep the lines of communication open between themselves and their creditors. "They realized that emergencies can arise and they may be willing to revise or defer your payments."

VETERAN Weather-watchers in Charlevoix can't remember a single week when so much snow went so rapidly as it has in the past seven days.

The big ridge, however, is what happened to the run-off? Very few puddles have developed even during Saturday's rain, and streets for the most part are dry. I expect sidewalks will be too, when they finally emerge from the permafrost.

Of course, snow came so heavy and so early that there probably is very little frost in the ground. But it is still hard to visualize four feet of snow disappearing in seven days, without leaving a damp spot somewhere.

Although the winter's precipitation was above normal in terms of snow, inches, the snow doesn't seem to have much water in it.

Can we have dry snow, just like we manufacture "dry ice"?

With a Democrat in the White House, I suppose anything is possible.

I couldn't help overhearing a conversation in a department store the other day.

A woman was shuffling through a sale dress rack when she shouted, "If you're tired, just say so and we'll go home. It is no fun for me to shop when you stand back there and give me 'that look.' Why don't you go play in the drinking fountains or something?"

I looked down half expecting to see a pre-schooler, when a silver-haired man said mechanically, "I am not tired, Cora. Take your time."

This will undoubtedly sound sexist, but man was never meant to shop. He doesn't have the physical stamina for it. After 15 to 20 hours on your feet, men tend to tire. Not women. I learned to shop at the feet of the Master — my mother. She could make the raid on Enchante look like an impulse.

All you had to do was to put a card marked, "CLEARANCE, ALL SALES FINAL," or "10 percent OFF" under her nose to sniff. Then, hang on tight, because she was good for three days.

I have to admit, she brought a certain excitement to the exercise. She would stand outside of a department store waiting for the store to open. When she saw the manager approach the door she would take up the slack in her handbag strap, grab my hand and tuck it under her arm like a football which explains why my right arm is three inches longer today than my left one), hold her body rigid in a blocking stance, and when the door opened, charge!

(Literally. She was the only woman ever to get a credit card burns on 90 percent of her hands.)

Men are too practical to shop. Whenever they spend a day in a department store, they feel they should buy something. They do not enjoy the challenge.

Men, on the other hand, tend to be over-the-top. They will pick up a shirt and really feel an impulse to buy it. Then suddenly they will ask themselves, "Do I really need this shirt?"

I felt sorry for Cora. I really did. Here was her big day to rummage through racks of merchandise and there was her husband hanging over her shoulder like a bad conscience.

Next time you go shopping with your wife, ask yourself, would you want to read Playboy while she turned the pages? Same thing.

Meet Charlevoix

...Tom Schaperkötter

Last week was the 50th annual Save Your Vision Week. The national optometric association observes the week every year to remind people that their vision is a precious resource that needs to be properly cared for and protected.

In Charlevoix there are two optometrists, Dr. Robert Anderson and Dr. Thomas Schaperkötter. This week the Courier spoke with Dr. Schaperkötter about the things people should do to protect their vision.

COURIER: What do people neglect the most when it comes to their eyesight?

SCHAPERKÖTTER: Usually it's the regular eye exam that they neglect.

COURIER: When should people start visiting the optometrist and how often?

SCHAPERKÖTTER: We like to start seeing children when they are between five and six years old unless the parents have noticed any problem and then we would like to see them even earlier.

than that. From then on they should come in every two years until they are 20. From age 20 to 40 people should come in about every three years for check ups and over 40 they should come in every two years again.

COURIER: Are there any particular things you look for at certain ages?

SCHAPERKÖTTER: Around age 40 we look for signs of glaucoma and with people around 60 years of age we look for cataract.

COURIER: What is glaucoma and what does it do to a person's vision?

SCHAPERKÖTTER: Glaucoma is an increase in the pressure inside the eye that causes eye damage or killing of the nerves in the eye. This creates a spotty vision with a loss of peripheral vision. Usually glaucoma sneaks up on people. They don't notice the spotty vision because the other eye will cover it up.

COURIER: How can glaucoma be easily detected during a routine eye examination?

COURIER: What are common sense things people should do to protect their vision?

SCHAPERKÖTTER: People who are contact lens wearers should not overwear their lenses. In the summer time people should be sure and wear sunglasses with glass lenses to keep out the ultraviolet rays of the sun. We find many people who have sunburned the front portion of their eyes because early enough it can be controlled and blindness prevented.

COURIER: What is cataract?

SCHAPERKÖTTER: Cataract affects the lens of the eye and causes a cloudiness and dimming of vision. It is also easily detected during a routine vision examination.

COURIER: Do your eyes wear out as you get older?

SCHAPERKÖTTER: Not really. They do become a little less sensitive, but if you use common sense you shouldn't have any problem with your vision.

COURIER: What are common sense things people should do to protect their vision?

SCHAPERKÖTTER: One of the newest things in the treatment of cataract. There is a new treatment which cuts down on the time the patient has to spend in the hospital. With the new procedure patients can leave the same day or the next day.

COURIER: What are some of the other advances?

SCHAPERKÖTTER: We have new instruments for measuring the pressure for they didn't wear proper sunglasses. People should also be sure to read with adequate light and to sit about six to eight feet from the television set while watching it.

COURIER: Is there anything else people should do?

SCHAPERKÖTTER: The main thing is that parents should be aware and check their children to see if there is any vision problem. Also people should have regular check ups.

COURIER: What are some of the newer advances in eye care?

SCHAPERKÖTTER: One of the newest things in the treatment of cataract. There is a new treatment which cuts down on the time the patient has to spend in the hospital. With the new procedure patients can leave the same day or the next day.

COURIER: What are some of the other advances?

SCHAPERKÖTTER: We have new instruments for measuring the pressure for glaucoma that are not as uncomfortable for the patient. Also you could call the soft contact lenses a new development. The hard contact lenses have been around since about 1950.

COURIER: How did you get interested in this field?

SCHAPERKÖTTER: I was a graduate of Grand Valley State College and I was interested in going into the medical field. I had a friend in Grand Rapids who was an optometrist and that interested me in the field.

COURIER: How long have you been in practice?

SCHAPERKÖTTER: I opened my practice here in September 1975.

COURIER: How did you happen to pick Charlevoix?

SCHAPERKÖTTER: My wife Kris (Lieberman) is from here. She is currently working as a part time teacher at the high school.

Development Group Seeks Support for Industrial Park

The development of an industrial park in the Charlevoix area is the new goal of the Charlevoix Development Corporation.

And to reach its goal, the development corporation, a nonprofit organization that has been responsible for helping many businesses make Charlevoix their home, has started a drive to sell more shares of its stock.

The funds from the stock sales will be used to purchase the land for the establishment of the industrial park and for the installation of water and electric lines.

"We hope to establish the industrial park complete with sewer and electricity so that the community can have an area where various companies could come to," Bob Lieberman, investor and member of the board of directors of the development corporation, explained.

"It would be an area in the hole for this area when companies are investigating relocating here," Lieberman continued. "The site would be ready for them with the correct zoning and water and electric lines."

Lieberman said the development corporation would lease the property to interested companies rather than sell it so that the corporation could maintain some control over what happens in landings and takeoffs with 28 planes based at the airport. Two flying clubs—the Charlevoix Flying Club and the Charlevoix Soaring Club—operate there as well as two flying services—McPhillips and Welke—which serve as the main link between Beaver Island in the winter.

At nearby airports the count is 3,625 operations with eight planes based at the Bay City Airport, 11,250 operations with 14 planes based at the Harbor Springs Airport and 10,500 operations at the Pullman Airport.

According to the aeronautics commission, the activity at the Charlevoix Municipal Airport includes 16,800 operations a year.

State Rep. Ralph Ostling and Rep. Melvin Larson from Oakland County will be in the area next week to talk with local residents about any problems they feel the state should be studying.

Ostling and Larson will be talking with Charlevoix County residents from 3 to 4:30 p.m. Monday in the main lobby of the Charlevoix County Building.

A League Tourney Finals Slated for This Week

The A League of the Charlevoix Independent Basketball League will conclude its season this week when the finals of annual Jimmy Bogart tourney are played.

Townhouse will play the winner of the Way Oil-Swanson game at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday. The winner of that game will meet Kadens' Emporium at 6:30 p.m. Thursday. If a second game is necessary, it will be played at 6:30 p.m. March 21.

Last week Kadens defeated

Townhouse 60-54 in the winner's bracket and Swanson's edged Willett Roofing 56-52 in an overtime after the regulation game had ended 48-41 in the loser's bracket.

The Kadens-Townhouse game was a battle all the way with Kadens leading 14-12 at the quarter only to have Townhouse snap back with a 30-22 margin at half-time. This, however, was short-lived as Kadens forged to a 47-42 advantage at the third period and hung on for the six-point victory. Jim Bauman with 21, Al Looze with 13 and Kirk Kujawski and Kim Hocquard with 10 each paced the win. Chuck Wright and Steve Smith with 12 each shared scoring honors for Townhouse.

In the Swanson-Willett Roofing game, the Roofers trailed 14-10, 27-22 and 37-31 by quarters before making their big pitch in the final period to knot the score at the final horn 48-48. In the overtime Swanson's outscored the Roofers 8-4 to take the game and advance in the loser's bracket.

More and more Americans are peering down from top branches of their family trees looking for their roots.

They are getting into genealogy, fast becoming one of the nation's biggest hobbies or indoor sports. Anybody who ever had parents can play.

"It's merely trying to find out who the folks were that you came from way back when," explains one amateur genealogist. "It's a sort of social-climbing, ancestor worship," sneers a detractor.

Why the surge of interest in family ancestors? Alex Haley is one reason—Haley and "Roots," his book tracing his family history back through slavery days to a village in Africa, as well as the recent television serial about it, one of the most-watched programs of all time.

Chris Hepler Genealogy

Another reason is a renewed historical awareness of our forefathers, the founders and settlers of the nation, that was brought on by last year's Bicentennial celebrations across the land.

As people get older they seem to become fascinated with genealogy, says one researcher, "as though the grim reaper was prodding them to take measure of their ancestors' tombstones while there is still time."

Those who have been at it for a while say genealogy can become an obsession, like reading detective stories or working crossword puzzles.

Washington, D.C., is a Mecca in the Great American Ancestor Hunt, with four major sources of information.

The Daughters of the American Revolution has been collecting records for many years to help trace families back to a colonial patriot, the qualification for DAR membership.

The Library of Congress has 5,000 genealogy books and 21,000 family histories. The National Genealogical Society has some 15,000 histories and records from all the states plus many unpublished sources.

The National Archives supposedly has records of anything anyone ever had to do with the federal government. Since "Roots" the Archives has been crowded with Black Americans, poring through the nation's biggest collection of slavery records.

In Utah the Mormon Church has a genealogy vault of microfilm records tunneled deep into a granite mountain intended to survive a nuclear holocaust.

Duplicate records in Salt Lake City are one of the world's great genealogy bonanzas, especially to Mormons trying to confirm ancestors so they can then be baptized into the faith long after death and thus, according to the Mormons, assured entry into the kingdom of heaven.

Some 100 researchers roam the United States and the world microfilming records for the Mormon genealogical collection.

Cemeteries, old family bibles, deeds, wills, tax lists, and other public records are local sources combed by ancestor hunters.

Genealogists lament the forests of family trees that have gone up in smoke in courthouse fires through the years.

Theoretically, starting with four grandparents, a family tree could be traced 20 generations or to about the year 1300, turning up some one million ancestors.

Shaking skeletons from a family tree can result in surprising fallout: a great-great uncle hanged as a horse thief, an 18th century "proven" and properly burned witch, or other notables. Depending on family aspirations, their discovery may be greeted with despair or delight.

Forefather, I presume! Many embarking on genealogical expeditions hope to qualify as a member of perhaps the General Society of Mayflower Descendants.

Some 100 researchers roam the United States and the world microfilming records for the Mormon genealogical collection.

Council Opens Doors to Merger with Township

By PAULA HOLMES

Charlevoix Common Council opened the door Monday night to the possibility of a merger between the city and the township.

The six aldermen and the mayor unanimously approved a resolution petitioning the county board of commissioners with a proposal for the extension of the city boundaries to include all of Charlevoix Township.

"Nobody in particular asked me to present this resolution," Mayor Edward Hansen said explaining his action. "I just feel the time is right for such a move."

"And it had come to my attention that no township official was going to request such action and that the city would have to be the initiator in such a move," the mayor continued.

Hansen said two things—the proposed new city charter and the proposed sewer facilities expansion plan—made the time particularly right for a merger between the two governmental units.

"It's only logical that two units so interdependent on each other should be under one body of control," he explained. "We are duplicating a lot of our efforts."

"I think people have come to the conclusion that we can get along together and that now is the time to start doing it," he added.

Central Michigan To Hold Classes On Beaver Island

High school students from throughout Michigan will have an opportunity this summer to study at Central Michigan University's (CMU) Biological Station on Beaver Island. The CMU Biology Department is offering three sessions—one for college credit-qualified juniors and seniors at its 43-acre biological station on the east shore of the island. Central's campus on the island includes four laboratories, office and research space, a biology library and a dormitory. The island serves as an ideal location for biological study with its seven inland lakes, numerous beaver dams, swamps and bays, forest beaches and sand dunes. The noncredit sessions, designed to provide field experience for students, are scheduled for June 12-18 and August 14-20. Students must be recommended by their high school biology teacher and have completed one year of biology to be admitted. The third session, June 28-July 8, will allow students to earn three hours of CMU credit in Biology 197. Students must meet the entrance requirements of CMU or be entering freshmen at any accredited university. Applications and information are available from Dr. Matthew H. Hohn, Biological Station, Biology Department, CMU, Mt. Pleasant, 48859.

THE MERGER of Charlevoix Township and the City of Charlevoix is being discussed again by area residents as a means of holding down costs in the two governmental units.

Administrators Studying Serving Breakfast at Elementary School

Charlevoix Elementary School students may soon be able to enjoy breakfast at school as well as lunch. School Superintendent James McKimney said the administrative staff would be recommending to the board of education within the next few weeks that a breakfast program be started at the K-5 school and run experimentally for a period of time before this school year is over.
Last January, Governor William Milliken signed into law the Mandatory School Food Service Act which requires that lunch programs be made available to all pupils in all public schools. The act also required that school breakfast programs be instituted in all public schools in meeting certain requirements.
McKimney said the three Charlevoix schools did not fall into the categories requiring that breakfast be served in the schools. However, he felt that the program should be tried out at the elementary level.
"The administrative staff feels that this program is a good one for the children," McKimney explained. "We are taking the attitude that if the motives behind the legislation are valid, then there must be children in our schools that could benefit from a breakfast program."
McKimney said various studies have shown that nutrition patterns and dietary habits of children affect their ability to attend school and participate in learning activities. The superintendent said the studies pointed out a definite connection between eating breakfast and a child's ability to learn.
"For these reasons we will suggest that we experimentally start a breakfast program at the elementary school," he said.
The superintendent said the school was also selected

City, Township Residents Support Merger

By PAULA HOLMES
For almost a decade, the residents of Charlevoix and Charlevoix Township have been discussing the merger of the two governmental units. The township and city have been like two warring factions and an earlier attempt at annexation of the township into the city failed in 1969 when it was put to a vote of the people.
But now the residents in both communities are beginning to seriously talk merger again.
The proposed expansion of the city sewer system to serve township residents, the high cost of utilities, the ever-increasing property tax and the current rewriting of the city charter seem to be the reasons behind the renewed interest in the joining of the two units.
"The city and the township are like two countries that have been at war for a certain amount of time, that suddenly stop and ask what they've been fighting about," Dale Boss, a township resident who opposed the first annexation attempt, but who now supports a merger between the two units.
Boss added that the city is checked and stymied in its growth because most of its property is held up in a merger between the two units would allow the community to continue to grow.
He also pointed out that township residents enjoy a lot of things the city provides such as recreation, and lower electricity bills in the areas where the residents get city electricity.
Tom LaBance, another township resident, also supports a merger between the two units.
"I've been in favor of a merger ever since they started considering this," LaBance explained. "I knew the city was considering writing a new charter and I felt it was time for the township to work with the city in writing up a charter that would meet the approval of both groups."
The more the township grows and the more the city grows, the more it's "I don't need the city or I don't need

City Residents May Pick Up Felled Trees
City residents may be able to pick up some free firewood in the next few weeks.
City Administrator Allen Sandberg said that the city crews will take it out to the landfill. The stump and larger pieces of wood will also be hauled out to the landfill.
Sandberg said city residents could make arrangements to haul the wood away from the landfill.
Two years ago the city couldn't give the wood away from the trees it cut down.
Sandberg said, "Now we have people waiting for the wood before the tree is even down."

City, Township Merger Needs More Study And Supporters Now

Once again talk of merger has begun to fill the air in the City of Charlevoix and surrounding Charlevoix Township. Some city and township residents have voiced the opinion at recent meetings that both units of government could benefit from a joining of forces.

Talk of merging the city and township runs in cycles—and as sure as spring will follow winter, talk of merger comes with each new proposed service and tax increase township residents face.

We urge the residents of both municipalities to strongly consider a merger. The time will never be riper for such a discussion between the two units. Both the city and the township have much to gain from such discussions.

In the past month, hearings have been held in the city and the township about a proposed expansion of the sewer treatment system. The expansion promises to be an expensive proposal and the upkeep of such a proposal will be costly, too.

But sewers are an important part of the development of the township and the city and are needed if we are to keep our water resources pollution free.

A merger at this time may keep the cost of hooking for the township residents and it would provide the city a broader base for purchasing bonds for the construction of the system.

Another service the city could provide the township residents at a reduced cost would be the expansion of the city electric system to township residents on REA. All of us know the high cost of REA electricity and we know that city electric costs have been increasing.

However, certain cost increases might not be so large if they were spread over a combined population of city and township residents. While initial costs of expansion of the city electric system would make electric bills higher for those new customers in the township, economies of scale may work to keep overall costs down.

Also township and city residents could benefit from the merger of the separate fire department systems and from the combined tax levies. The broader tax base may bring about improvements in the street department and in the expansion and upkeep of recreation facilities in the area.

Finally, the city charter commission is in the process of completing a proposed charter. What better time for the township to merge with the city than now when the city may be undergoing a change in governmental operation anyway.

Since the charter has not been finalized or voted on by the public, a committee of township residents could work with the city charter commission in writing a document that could unite the two bodies and provide equal representation for both units on a new council.

While merger appears to have many benefits, there may be drawbacks, too. If city and township residents can not lay aside their differences there is no sense in trying to work together for the betterment of all. We would not want to find ourselves demergering after only a few years because of irreconcilable differences.

We urge interested citizens to give the idea of merger more than just a passing thought. We urge people to take action now, to form committees and to approach their elected officials with proposals for merger.

With all of us working for the common goal of better services for all of us, we should be able to reach an equitable plan for merger.

We think it's time to renegotiate salary and fringe benefits — vrl

During the past two weeks, I have spent my spare time pawing through a collection of news stories, columns and articles by one of my favorite writers, H.J. Mencken, late of the Baltimore Sun.

Back in the days when I was a freshman in the newspaper business, Mencken was the idol of all young reporters. Lord, how that man could write. The American horizon was strewn with the bodies of giant slain by the Bard of Baltimore.

Mencken was a skillful hatchet man who was capable of felling his quarry with a few well chosen words. But he never did. After the initial assault, he continued skewering his victim with words of verbal invective until there was no life whatsoever in the corpse.

Thirty years ago, I for one thought Mencken was pretty hot stuff. My reading of him last week, however, has left me a little uneasy. I don't think he'd like to be around today; and I don't think we'd want him around today.

Despite his skill with the language, Mencken suffered from a pigeon-hole mind. To him, all politicians are crooks. Period. Bishops and seismologists are little better. All religion is bad. The most disreputable people on earth are YMCA secretaries. No society worthy of the name exists west of the Atlantic seaboard.

Life, for Mencken, was all blacks and whites. There were no intermediate shades. All bishops practice mummery. All YMCA secretaries have questionable morals.

Furthermore, Mencken found very little in life that pleased him, aside from the pleasures derived from alcohol, art and classical music. Those were his three gods and he worshipped them often and enthusiastically.

Needless to say, Mencken saved some of his choicest diatribes for the propagators of Prohibition which he considered an extreme example of man's inhumanity to man. Mencken survived the era with his citizenship intact only through the efforts of bootleggers and runners.

Mencken's propensity for pigeon-holing and categorizing perhaps reached his zenith in 1923 when he accused the world's Anglo-Saxon population with cowardice and stupidity.

"That this inferiority is real must be obvious to any impartial observer. Whenever the Anglo-Saxon, whether of the English or of the American variety, comes into sharp conflict with men of other stocks, he tends to be worsted, or, at best, to be forced back into extraneous and irrelevant aids to assist him in the struggle."

Mencken never got to war alone, but always buttressed himself with ranks of allies.

Then he writes: "To call the roll of Americans eminent in almost any field of human endeavor above the most elemental is to call a list of strange and often outlandish names; even the panel of Congress presents a startling example. Of the Americans who have come into notice during the past fifty years as poets, as novelists, as critics, as painters, as sculptors and in the minor arts, less than half bear Anglo-Saxon names and in this minority there are few of pure Anglo-Saxon blood. So in the sciences. So in the higher reaches of engineering and technology. So in philosophy and its branches. So even in industry and agriculture. In those areas where the competition between the new and the old bloodstreams is most sharp and clear-cut, the defeat of the so-called Anglo-Saxon is overwhelming and unmistakable."

Which, to use one of Mencken's favorite words, is "uncombed."

Fortunately, Mencken died in 1956 at age 76. He would never have enjoyed a world where people are individuals and where group distinctions, for the most part, are meaningless.

For awhile, I had a closet that enjoyed more traffic than a discount house on Mother's Day. One day, I wandered in to see three kids picking and choosing. "May I help you?" I asked stiffly.

"No, I'm just browsing," said my son. "Where's the luggage?"

"We've moved it to the annex," I snapped. "Will you get out of here?"

"Mom!" said my daughter. "you've got to learn to share."

"Share! You saw what happened to my car when I shared."

"What did I do to your car?" asked my son.

"I'll tell you what you did to it. You left the radio up so loud that when I got in and turned on the motor, the noise struck me sterile. I still have swelling in my teeth. Not only that, the car smells like a gym before showers."

"You told me to bring my gym clothes home."

"I didn't tell you to keep the car windows rolled up when you did."

"Mom," asked my daughter. "can I borrow this sweater? You can borrow any of mine you like."

"Why don't you wear your own?" I asked.

"They're all dirty."

"Why would I borrow a dirty sweater?"

"You never go anywhere to wear a clean one."

"Hold it," I said to my son. "What did you do with the binoculars you borrowed for the game last week?"

"They're in my room."

"Why don't you put them back where you got them?"

"Why?" he shrugged. "Why would you want to hang on to a pair of broken binoculars?"

"They weren't broken when you borrowed them."

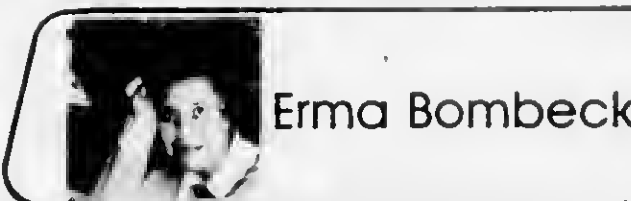

"You buy cheap, Mom, and you pay for it in the long run."

As I slumped down in the closet, I heard my daughter say, "Mom's so selfish. It's hard to believe she wasn't an only child!"

Where would the legislator's son be today if you had told him how good he could become rather than how bad he was.

Maybe he would be writing you this editorial reply.

Sincerely,
Gayle Boss

I used to be a nice person. Ask anyone. I was giving, loving and sharing.

Then the children came along and I realized a woman who was giving, loving, and sharing could end up with a drawer full of dirty pants, a broken stereo and a wet toothbrush every morning.

Also, a camera with sand in it, a blouse that died from acute perspiration, a library book with a bent back, a sleeping bag with a broken zipper, a tennis racket with a cracked frame, and a transistor that "just went dead when it hit the pavement."

For awhile, I had a closet that enjoyed more traffic than a discount house on Mother's Day. One day, I wandered in to see three kids picking and choosing. "May I help you?" I asked stiffly.

On Socks and Sauce

If it Fizz by Jim Fitzgerald

It was a coincidence that my daughter discovered the lump behind the mirror on the same day I was invited to lunch by the surgeon general of the Sons of the Whiskey Rebellion.

This daughter is named Ferd, so as to rhyme with her brother Nerd. It was her first visit to her parents' apartment in the big city, so she inspected it thoroughly. She even peeked behind the huge mirror attached to the dresser in the bedroom.

It is one of those mirrors that tilt forward or backward within the limits allowed by the dresser. When it is tilted forward, I can see my knees in it. When it is tilted backward, I can see my belt. When I tie my tie, I sit on the floor.

"What is this?" Ferd asked, pulling a clump of cloth from behind the mirror. It was a black sock, rolled into a ball-my black sock.

"This sock sure looks funny stuck behind the mirror," Ferd said.

"If you think that looks funny, you should see me walking to work wearing only one sock," I said, starting to sob.

My wife had wedged my sock between the back of the mirror and the wall to prevent the mirror from tilting so high that she would be unable to apply her makeup sitting down, and I would be able to tie my tie standing up. The coincidence, surfaced later that day when Dr. Robert Willson explained why he was willing to buy my lunch. It was because of something I'd written about my socks.

I had built a column around the response I gave my children one day when they asked where their mother was. "She is downstairs in the laundry losing socks," I said.

This domestic tragedy struck a responsive chord in Dr. Willson's psyche, causing it to bleed and drip down on his unmatched socks.

"All my married life there have been 3 socks in my sock drawer—1 black, 1 blue and 1 grey," Dr. Willson explained. "I asked you to lunch in the hope that we might be able to strike a deal from which we each would emerge with a pair of matching socks."

The sock exchange was held in conjunction with a meeting of the Sons of the Whiskey Rebellion. As members of the whiskey surgeon general, he qualified for the appointment by virtue of being a veterinarian—the retired director of the Detroit Zoo.

"Also, the Sons wanted to make certain the job didn't go to any member who is a medical doctor," he said. "They are very protective of their good health."

For similar reasons, the club has no treasurer. "We always have $9 in the treasury," explained the commodore-in-chief, "and we don't have a member who can be trusted with that much money."

The commodore-in-chief is George Pierrat, who requires no introduction. He will stand up and make a speech when someone else is introduced.

Pierrat is world famous for his educational lectures. He also is the host of a travel-adventure show that is seen on TV whenever demographics indicate that no one will be watching except 75-year-old people who don't dance the disco boogie.

My history is rusty, but I ventured the opinion that the Sons of the Whiskey Rebellion was organized to honor the memory of those brave Pennsylvania farmers who fought in 1794 to free this nation from the tyranny of a federal tax assessed upon grain juice. This was the first uprising in post-Revolutionary War America against taxation without representation. I figured the Sons probably met on the anniversary of the bloody day upon which several of those farmers were killed while fighting to preserve the sanctity of the still.

This is not quite correct. It was explained to me that the Sons of the Whiskey Rebellion are not thrilled by taxation WITH representation. They meet spasmodically, whenever the commander-in-chief orders bivouac for the purpose of honoring some new limerciks.

Those brave Pennsylvania farmers are never even mentioned, except when the Sons salute Pierrat for being the only living survivor of the battle of 1794. The whiskey bivouacs are replete with such friendly exchanges of good fellowship, no more of which will be repeated here.

In fact, the incisive vocabulary of the Sons made me so nervous I had to look up "bivouac" in the dictionary before I sent it toward the editor.

A bivouac is an improvised campsite that usually offers no shelter from enemy fire. It doesn't offer much protection from your friends, either.

I never had more fun changing socks.

The Charlevoix Federal Credit Union has come a long way since the days when it was a parish credit union. Not only has the credit union expanded its membership, but it recently expanded its facilities, too, and is now located at 307 Petoskey Ave.

This week the Courier talked with Kate Brady, treasurer-manager, of the credit union, about the organization.

COURIER: How did the Charlevoix Federal Credit Union get its start?

BRADY: We started as a parish credit union. Then in 1968 they asked us if we would extend our field to include the community so we could offer credit union services to employees of smaller plants in the area who couldn't set up their own credit unions. In 1969, following a vote of our member and our board of directors, we changed our charter and opened up to the public.

COURIER: Who can now belong to the Charlevoix Federal Credit Union?

BRADY: We are structured similar to our government. All of our members have a say in the operation of the organization. We have an annual meeting where the officers are elected. Then as a credit union we belong to a state organization which has a board of directors to represent all 1,013 credit unions and then the state organization belongs to a federal organization which also has an elected board of directors with representatives from each state.

COURIER: How does the credit union operate?

Letter to the editor

Dear Editor:

How many of you people giving in or around the big city of Charlevoix are aware that you have among you a real honest to goodness Angel? And how many of you really appreciate the person she is?

I speak of Fran Martin. I'm sure almost all of you know her and the few of you who do not, I'm sure have no idea of the aid she can give and the void she can fill.

I met Fran some years ago when as a 17-year-old Coast Guard bride, I was hastily deposited in Charlevoix with a very hurried introduction to Miss Martin. I know not a soul, with her the only exception. It didn't take long for us to become good friends. And the same is true of everyone she meets.

I guess what I'm trying to say is this: You could look for years to come and never find a person quite like Fran. She is definitely one in a million. She will fight for the things she believes in and will help you fight for the things you believe in. All her fights are not won, but you can bet on the fact that she'll take at least one battle, and she'll make her point. As in the case of the fight she went into to save your South Point.

The fight was lost, but she made her point very clear. Score one for Fran.

All the Coast Guard families know her, why she is practically in the Guard herself. Say, what you will, many families can thank Fran for finding their homes or apartments, she is able to find housing when seemingly there is none available. She has been known to point people in the right direction for jobs, and she does all this with a flair only Fran can possess.

If you don't know her, you can spot her easily, she's the shiny, sparkling and smiling lady in the wheelchair. Yes, she may be incapable of walking, but the rest of her more than makes up for that.

This magnificent lady, maintains a home, writes for the paper, one time served as Drain Commissioner, and most assuredly is the most loyal fan the Charlevoix basketball team ever had.

Orchids to Fran Martin

Fran Martin donates all her time and energies to making her town and her friends the best there is. Look around, she had to have something to do with whatever you are looking at.

I'm writing this because I think it is time that someone said Thank You Fran, for caring about people, your town, your friends and Thank You Fran, for caring about people, your town, your friends and Thank You Fran for just being the wonderful RESIDENT ANGEL you are. I feel the world would be a much, much more comfortable place if every town had a Fran Martin to care so very much what happened.

Thanks Fran,
Saundra L. Beaver

Faith Sees A New-Born World In The Spring

When the white snows of winter, so recently here, are dispelled by the warmth of the sun, and the tiny plants will begin to appear, Then the season of spring has begun. Soon the tops of the trees will be tinted with green, As the buds of the branches unfold, With the spectrum of flowers creating a scene That is truly a joy to behold. You will learn through your Church what the Lord has planned, In this lesson of nature's rebirth; When the beauty of spring will awaken the land, And new life will be born on the earth!

Diane Grubaugh Marries David Knapp

Altar arrangements of white gladioli and yellow and blue carnations and lighted tapers in candelabra decorated with white satin bows formed the setting for the wedding of Diane Elaine Grubaugh and David John Knapp at the First Congregational church Saturday afternoon. Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Jack C. Grubaugh of Charlevoix and Mr. and Mrs. John Knapp of Boyne City. The Rev. Raymond Griffin officiated at the double ring service in the presence of approximately 150 guests. Marilyn Lehman, at the organ, played a program of traditional music and accompanied Vincent Chew who sang "Come, O God, Our Heavenly Father" by Bach. The bride was escorted to the altar by her father past pews marked with white satin bows. For her wedding, she chose a gown of polyester organza, fashioned with an empire bodice accented with wide lace cuffs and an A-line skirt that extended into a chapel length train trimmed with white lace. She carried a bouquet of yellow sweetheart roses and white carnations accented with blue hydrangeas and baby's breath. Nancy McPhillips, as maid-of-honor, wore a yellow polyester gown with a matching floral cape of chiffon and a matching picture hat. Margaret Warner, Shelly Warner, and Pamela Grubaugh, sister of the bride, were bridesmaids. They wore blue polyester gowns and floral chiffon capes and matching picture hats. Each carried a single yellow rose and baby's breath tied with ribbons to match their gowns. Becky Kruska of Manistowish, as flower girl, wore a gown similar to the other attendants'. Scott Toton of Boyne City was ringbearer. Robert Beck of Wallonia Lake assisted the bridegroom as best man and groomsmen were Gregory Grubaugh, brother of the bride, Robert Cyr and Carl Almebury, both of Boyne City. Mr. Beck and Mr. Grubaugh also seated the guests and attended the candles. A reception, hosted by the bride's parents, followed at the Charlevoix Yacht Club at the Charlevoix Depot. Mrs. William Walter of Drummond Island cut the bride's cake and Mrs. Harold Barnett of Albion, N.M., and Mrs. Janet Potter of Charlevoix, served the punch. All are aunts of the bride. Becky Juilert attended the guest book and Debbie Potter assisted with the gifts.

Mrs. Grubaugh greeted guests in a floor length gown of yellow polyester chiffon, matching cape and gold accessories. Her wrist corsage was of yellow roses, white carnations and baby's breath accented with blue. Mrs. Knapp wore a pink double knit gown accented with white lace and white accessories. Her corsage was of pink roses. Following a brief wedding trip, the couple will be at home at Great Lakes, Ill., where the bridegroom is stationed with the U.S. Navy. A rehearsal dinner, hosted by the bridegroom's parents, was held at the Westhervan Inn Friday evening.

PLANTS GET MID-WINTER BLAIS!
Do your plants have the Mid-Winter Blues? That mid-winter down feeling isn't just with humans - plants are victims too. USDA horticulturists suggest you give your plants a special check at this time of year. Their problem may be real! If your plants are dropping their leaves it could be because of a sudden change in temperature. The shock of transplanting can also cause leaf drop. Other causes could be moving from strong sunlight to a dark place, watering too much, or exposure to cooking gas. Are the tips of the leaves browning? If so, they may be watering them too little. Exposure to cold drafts, attack by insects, or even too little fertilizer can cause plant leaves to brown. Another common problem is spotted foliage. To remedy this check for overwatering or burning from direct sunlight. Plants can overcome their "blais" with tender, loving care. FOOD CLIPS: Substitutes may make food more interesting...Ever try making pastry with crushed cereals? Or rice used in place of bread in making poultry stuffing?

The engagement of Judy A. Potter to Wilson R. (Bud) Boss has been announced by the bride-elect's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Potter. The prospective bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Boss. Both are graduates of the Charlevoix High School. The bride-elect is a graduate of Davenport College of Business in Grand Rapids and is presently employed as bookkeeper for the Charlevoix Public Schools. Mr. Boss attended North Central Michigan College and is self-employed. The wedding will be an event of April 23 at the Community Reformed Church of Charlevoix.

Reorganization To Make Health Board More Active

The Northern Michigan Community Mental Health Services Board, at its recent meeting held in Petoskey, was told by Pauline Menegier, a member from Emmet county, that the Michigan Association of Community Mental Health Boards is in the process of reorganizing and, as a result, may become more active in the Mental Health Service delivery system. Arcas of concern are strengthening the communication between the Mental Health Boards and the Department of Mental Health, maintaining local control of boards, obtaining 100 percent membership of all boards, emphasizing preventive services and pursuing continuing education for board members. Lillian Bergmann, chairman, and Sam Kosc, program director, Harold Kaufman, were scheduled for later this month. The next meeting of the NCMHBS Board is scheduled for 8 p.m. Thursday, April 14, at the headquarters at 205 E. Lake St. in Petoskey. The public is invited to attend all meetings.

General Life Expectancy Reaches 72.4 Years

For the average Charlevoix County resident, the likelihood of living a long time is greater than ever. A local child, just born, has the prospect of living about 13 years longer than his grand parents did when they were born. It also can look forward to four years more than his parents could at the time of their birth. According to the National Center for Health Statistics, the general life expectancy at birth is now 72.4 years. For a baby boy, the probable span is 68.5 years and, for a girl, 76.4. Since the early part of the century there has been an increase of 25 years in longevity for the average person. Most of this gain was achieved in the years prior to 1950, a period in which the infant mortality rate was sharply reduced and in which antibiotics and other drugs came into being, conquering many of the infectious diseases. Charlevoix County residents of all ages are benefiting, as a result of the progress that is continually being made by medical science. For local people who are 40 years old at the present time, there is the prospect of another 35 years of life, on average. At the 50-year level, the expectancy is nearly 27 years. One effect of the across-the-board increase in longevity is that many more people are reaching retirement age and living well beyond it than was the case a generation or two ago. Compared with the early 1900's, when there were only 3.1 million Americans over 65, equivalent to 1 out of every 24 people, there are now 23 million, or 1 out of every 9. In Charlevoix County, the population includes some 2,100 men and women who are over 65, representing 11.6 percent of the total.

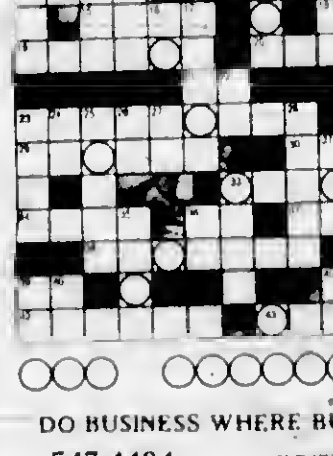

Area Students Honored 13 Charlevoix County Students Make North Central Deans List

The names of 13 Charlevoix County students appear on the Deans List at North Central Michigan College for the fall semester, according to Robert Vranstina, dean of instruction. Three students, Nancy Leigh Merrill, Wines Degree From MSU. A Charlevoix resident was among 1,604 candidates for degrees at winter term commencement exercises March 12 at Michigan State University. Leigh Merrill received a bachelor of science degree in civil engineering during the ceremonies. Others that earned a place on the deans list included: Diller of East Jordan High School, Bruce Kortbase of Boyne City High School and Patricia Wojan of Beaver Island High School, earned a perfect 4.0 grade point for the semester. John Cinnamon Makes Dean's List at Kalamazoo. A Charlevoix resident was among 176 students at Kalamazoo College who were named to the Dean's List for the fall quarter. John Cinnamon, freshman, was among the students who achieved a 3.5 grade average or better. Miss Potter, a German major, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Potter. She is a 1974 graduate of Charlevoix High School.

Cribbage Making a Comeback

Cribbage, a card game that has been around for ages, is making a comeback—at least in Charlevoix.

The annual Mason-Oddfellows Tournament, completed last week after 10 weeks of play, attracted more people than ever this year, according to Sims Baker, tournament secretary.

Competitors this year even included 12-year-old Alan Bergmann. This is his second year of tournament play. Alan, a sixth grade student at Charlevoix Middle School, said he has been playing cribbage with his family since he was eight or nine. His father has been a participant in the annual tournament for many years and it was only natural that Alan should play in the tournament, too.

"I just brought him in one day and everyone liked him so we let him stay and play," Alan's father explained.

Alan said the first few games were hard for him because he was playing with older people in competition. "But if I missed something they would show me and help me out," he explained.

"And he's a good little cribbage player," Baker added.

Baker attributed the interest in cribbage to the entertainment people get from playing cards and the fun of competition.

"You'd think in all the years that we've been holding this tournament that there would be some argument over the scoring or the pegging," Baker said. "But in the 47 years of this tournament there hasn't been any. We have a good group playing here."

Baker said the success of each cribbage team is all in the way the cards run. Over the last half century, the cards have seemed to run slightly more in favor of the Oddfellows than the Masons. The Oddfellows have taken 26 tournament championships with the Masons winning 21 championships.

Baker also said that in all the years of the tournament, he held the old trophy that used to be awarded to the winning team.

SIMS BAKER, the player with the longest record of attendance at the Mason-Odd Fellow Tournament and Alan Bergmann, the youngest player in the tournament, hold the old trophy that used to be awarded to the winning team.

Coffee Drinkers Turning To Herbs, Dandelions for Mocha Substitute

It could be a big year for dandelion roots if America's coffee crisis continues.

Not only are more and more drained coffee cups now found to be good to the last tea leaf, but many a One-Time coffee lover is learning to savor the aroma and taste of herb or roots, or barks, or acorns.

For a 100-percent caffeine-free coffee substitute, advise fans of natural drinks, try a mixture of one-third ground, roasted dandelion root, two-thirds chicory, and a touch of cinnamon, all steeped in a tea ball dunked into a cup of boiling water.

Or invent your own blend from the 300 or 20 natural offerings found in many health food stores.

The good word at the herb bins of many health food stores is that if coffee prices continue to go up, then most "natural infusions" will be competitive or even cheaper.

Some already are, at least in the East, such as chicory at $2 a pound, Saint Johnswort at $3.10, primrose at $3.75, wild lettuce at $2.75, and myrtle twigs at $2.

All manner of goodness awaits at the $4 level, according to natural food advocates, including goldenrod, smartweed, sweet fern, pokeweed, rose hips, chamomile, lemongrass, ne sassafras.

Black and green teas, hot chocolate, bouillon, consommé, and several commercial hot breakfast drinks, mostly made of grain roots, are, economically popular compared to coffee. But big spenders, too, have an ultimate option: ginseng tea, a favorite of well-heeled Asians, selling up to $150 a pound.

Americans started to change into a nation of coffee drinkers when tea rose as a result of George III's notorious tax that helped spark the American Revolution. Tea prices later were compounded by shortages during the War of 1812, coffee cost 10 cents a pound.

Since then, many Americans have felt that a hot cup of coffee from time to time during the day is what keeps the world on track.

Today's coffee drinkers, appalled at high prices, may take some comfort in learning that when William Penn wanted coffee in 1683, he had to pay $4.68 a pound.

Other possibilities as coffee substitutes include fruit juices mixed with hot water and Once the herbs, roots, bark,

Charlevoix County Jail Food Service Found Economical, Efficient in Study

The Food Service at the Charlevoix County Jail proposed in December 1975 and initiated Jan. 1, 1976, has paid off according to a report presented to the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners Wednesday.

According to the report, clients at the jail are being fed for a cost of $2.08 per client per day. This figure represents the entire cost for the daily meal, the raw food, its preparation, energy used and the salary of the cook. This is in sharp contrast to the catering service which was utilized the previous year. The cost of that service was $4.50 per client per day.

When the cost of the catering service continued to rise and the eater indicated he would no longer be interested in supplying the service, the Public Safety Committee enlisted the aid of the Office of Jail Services. This division of the Department of Corrections sent Robert J. Weyand, food service analyst, to survey the problem. He suggested the present method and worked with the cook, Joella Williams, prior to initiating the service which has proven very satisfactory.

In 1976 a total of 11,670 meals were prepared including 11,232 for inmates and 438 for staff. The decrease in cost over the previous year represents a saving of $2,300 the report revealed. Sheriff George T. Lasater, who presented the report, said the savings would increase this year because it will not be necessary to include the costs of special equipment in the 1977 expenditures.

This Could be the Year California Falls into the Sea

Will this be the year of that "overdue" California earthquake? Will a big quake hit the East again? Or the Midwest? Will experts see one coming in time to warn anyone?

These haunting questions greet 1977 after "the worst year for killer earthquakes in half a century." That's the way 1976 looked to Dr. Robert M. Hamilton, chief of earthquake studies for the United States Geological Survey.

"No one would be surprised if we had a great earthquake in Southern California soon," Hamilton said, "but we have no basis for predicting when."

The last great quake there was in 1857, and the famous Shaker that leveled much of San Francisco struck in 1906.

"It could be another 120 years before it goes," Hamilton said, "but then it could happen right away." He said scientists think that the two huge plates of the earth trying to slide past each other along the San Andreas fault may build up stresses over 100 to 300 years before there is a sudden slip—an earthquake.

Scientists are carefully monitoring a 70-mile stretch northeast of Los Angeles where the ground has lifted up as much as a foot during the last 15 years. Uplifts sometimes are forerunners of quakes.

The Geological Survey is spending $11 million this fiscal year, nearly half for earthquake-prediction studies.

A had quake could be hard on Eastern and Midwestern cities, Hamilton said, because they have no earthquake-resistant construction and because seismic waves spread even more devastatingly through these regions than through the West.

Severe quakes hit Boston in 1811 and 1812, and Charleston, South Carolina, in 1886.

The National Science Foundation has $10 million this year earmarked for learning how to build better earthquake-resistant buildings.

Altogether, earthquakes around the world killed some 140,000 people last year, "but the toll could be a lot worse," Hamilton said.

Some 100,000 supposedly died in the two quakes at Tangshan, China, on July 28 and 29, probably a conservative estimate, Hamilton said. The Chinese have said very little about casualties.

But the Chinese quakes, registering 8.2-strongest in 12 years—and 7.9 on the Richter scale, "scored almost directly on the nose," Hamilton said.

The project has received the blessing of police agencies in the county. One officer said his agency had recovered a CB radio after the snow melted and it remains at the office because there is no way of tracing the owner. If it had the owner's driver's license number on it, the radio's owner could be found and the radio could be returned to him, no matter where he lived.

BED WETTING

Have you and your child been going through the frustrating years of bed wetting. The bed wetting can be a physiological and emotional experience for both the parent and child. Perhaps you have tried all the conventional methods to no avail. Some parents even resort to medication and surgery to no avail. If we look at the spine and nervous system perhaps we will find the true cause. Nerves enter at 10th and 11th dorsal and 3rd lumbar controlling the kidneys and bladder respectively. If a vertebra is slightly out of place (Misaligned), at any of these places it can cause a weakness in the ability to control these organs, especially during sleep.

That slight accident or fall you paid no attention to could have caused a misalignment in your child's spine. Simple, painless Chiropractic adjustments may be the answer to your child's problem. A wise parent would save his child from harmful drugs and surgery and get a Chiropractic checkup first instead of a last resort. Stay healthy all your life. Get a Chiropractic checkup today.

Winter at Tahquamenon Falls

Local Camera Club Visits the Falls

There's something about winter and what it does to the woods, waterfalls and streams that makes it a special season for taking pictures—at least that's what the members of the Charlevoix Camera Club will tell you.

The camera club recently spent a Saturday at Tahquamenon Falls State Park trying to capture the beauty of winter in that special place on film.

Armed with cross country skis, snow shoes and their camera equipment, club members and their families, totaling 19 people in all, got together and we have a common interest in photography," he said. "We have a good time regardless of the pictures."

City Council Candidates List Goals for Terms

By PAULA HOLMES

Four uncontested races for common council are on the ballot for the spring election slated Monday in the City of Charlevoix.

Running unopposed for two year terms are: George Plumm, first ward alderman; Ivan Whitley, second ward alderman; and Ray Wood, third ward alderman.

Edward Hansen is unopposed for a one-year term as mayor.

And while none of the men face any competition and campaign promises aren't needed this year, all of the candidates said they had specific goals and projects they would like to see accomplished during their next terms in office.

"My primary concern is with the street program," Plumm explained. "I would like to see the city continue with the street program as they have in the past two years."

The alderman said it was important to keep up with street maintenance and to set a specific program each year with the appropriate funding for the streets.

"If you get behind on the maintenance and the construction you have a terrible mess," Plumm explained.

The alderman, who has served four years on the council, said he would also like to see a senior citizen housing complex started in the City within the next two years.

Alderman Ivan Whitley, who is just completing his first term in office, said he would like to see the area sewage treatment facilities plan completed and turned into a reality in the next two years.

"I'd like to see this project get underway so that we can get sewers to the people in the second ward that need them and also so that we can get some of the streets paved," Whitley explained.

"There are some streets in the ward that have never been paved and we've been waiting for the sewer to go in before we put any pavement down," the alderman said.

Whitley said he would also like to see the Shide Tree Commission continue with its work.

"So many of our trees are coming down, I would like to see them replaced," he said.

Third Ward Alderman Ray Wood picked the merger of Charlevoix Township with the City of Charlevoix as the one project he would like to see completed during his next two years in office.

"Of all the things that are going on in the city, this merger is the one that is most important to me and has been for a long time," Wood said. "To me that merger is the ultimate."

Wood, who is also chairman of the Airport Committee, said he would like to see some improvements at the airport, but he felt the improvements should begin with the little things that would make the airport nicer for the local residents to use.

The alderman is completing his third year in office. He completed Richard Fitchman's term and then was re-elected to a full term.

Mayor Hansen picked the merger, the sanitary sewage system expansion, airport expansion and the construction of senior citizen housing as projects he would like to see get underway during his next term in office.

Hansen said he would like to see the sewage treatment system expanded into the critical areas of the American Mid-Waters Edge area, Boulder Park and Pine Point and North Point areas.

At the airport, the mayor said he would like to see the extension and widening of the 26 runway.

Hansen has spent five years as mayor of Charlevoix. Also running for office during the election are Judy Przybylski, city clerk, and Annabelle Cunningham.

The polls for the spring election will be open from 1 a.m. to 8 p.m. in the city hall. Qualified city voters can obtain absentee ballots for the city election until 2 p.m. Saturday at the city clerk's office in the city hall.

Superintendent McKimmy Resigns

By FRANK MARTIN

The Charlevoix Board of Education, at a special meeting Monday, accepted the resignation of James A. McKimmy as Superintendent of the Charlevoix Public Schools, effective June 30, 1977.

In accepting the resignation, the board released him from his present contract which would have terminated in June 1978.

After resigning, McKimmy advised the board that he was accepting a similar position in the Cadillac School System.

He added that the position afforded an opportunity to work in a larger school system.

In an interview following the resignation, McKimmy said he felt the Charlevoix schools had shown marked progress during his four year tenure here. He went on to say that he had enjoyed support in the community and a good relationship with the entire staff of the school system.

"I hope the community will continue to work toward meeting the building needs at the high school. A library, cafeteria, gymnasium and auditorium are as important as classrooms. I hope that the community will support the kind of a facility a vibrant, growing community needs," the superintendent said.

During his four years here, the enrollment in the Charlevoix Schools has grown to 1,758 students.

Max Novak, president of the board of education, said following the announcement that "I think the schools have progressed during Mr. McKimmy's four years as superintendent. The job at Cadillac represents a step up the ladder. He's a young man and now is the time to move ahead."

While in Charlevoix McKimmy has been a member of Charlevoix Lions International, president of Charlevoix Big Brothers, Inc., chairman of the finance committee at the United Methodist church, secretary of the Charlevoix Flying Club and a member of the board of directors of the Charles A. Ransom Counseling Center.

Professionally, he served on the State Board of Education Blue Ribbon Committee on Intermediate School Districts; represented the Michigan Association on the task force on middle school teacher preparation and on Region 11 Michigan Association of School Administrators legislative committee.

He has been senior lecturer at Michigan State University on the subject of "The Theory of Administration 1977."

He and his wife, Lou Ann, reside at 1025 State St. They have three children, Karen, 15, Kathy, 14, and Paul, 9.

McKimmy came to Charlevoix in 1973 from Alma where he had been assistant superintendent for three years in the Alma Public Schools. He received his Ph.D. in Administration at Michigan State University in 1971.

Petitions Due April 11 for School Board

Prospective candidates for the two vacancies on the Charlevoix Board of Education are reminded that nominating petitions must be filed no later than 4 p.m. April 11.

Under a new ruling effective this year, petitions for this office must be filed nine weeks prior to the June 13 election.

The terms of C. Mux Novak and Robert J. Cook, who was elected to fill an unexpired term, expire at this time. Both have said they would be candidates for re-election.

Nominating petitions are available at the business office on Garfield ave. or at the office of the county clerk in the county building.

This Saturday township residents will have a chance to participate in grass roots government at its best—the annual township meeting.

Throughout the state, township residents will be flocking to township halls between 1 and 8 p.m. to let their supervisors and board members know what they think should be accomplished in the township during the coming year.

Each township resident will be able to address the township board and each resident will be able to vote on various issues along with their elected representatives as they hammer out a plan for the township. While township residents can address the board during any regular session, the annual meeting is the only time residents can vote on issues.

During the annual meeting, the various township boards will hold public hearings on the proposed budgets for the coming year. Township officials' salaries may also be established at the annual meeting, providing a salary commission has not been appointed.

Other business that may be discussed during the meeting includes the purchase or sale of any real or personal property and the discussion of any petitions that might be presented to the board by township residents.

Charlevoix Township will hold its annual meeting at 2 p.m. Saturday in the township hall. Marion Township will meet at 7:30 p.m. and Hayes Township will meet at 7:45 p.m. at their respective township halls.

PENSION PLAN FOR FULL-TIME HOMEOWNERS

For the first time since Eve picked up a broom and swept out the Garden of Eden, housewives can qualify to receive a pension by staying at home and doing their job-housework.

This new retirement plan, part of the Tax Reform Act of 1976, is designed to relieve some of the financial burdens many women face when they get older.

Until this provision was passed, millions of non-employed wives had to rely upon Social Security benefits and payments, if any, from their husbands' retirement plans for income during their later years. According to a Senate Tax Force report on Women and Social Security issued last year, one out of three women "out on their own" exists on income below the poverty level—that's around $2,900 a year. In 1975, the average monthly Social Security payment to women was $181 per month.

The new pension program, effective January 1, 1977, is set up through an Individual Retirement Account. This is a government-authorized program in which individuals may invest for their retirement. The recently signed law permits a husband who is not covered by a company retirement plan to make contributions to an IRA on behalf of his non-employed spouse and himself.

For such an account, the maximum yearly contribution is $1,750 or 15 percent of an individual's earned income, whichever is less. An IRA plan of this type may also be opened with subaccounts where the contributions are formally earmarked for each spouse. The maximum annual contribution is $875 per person. Working wives not covered by a company retirement plan may make the IRA contributions on behalf of househusbands.

All contributions to an Individual Retirement Account are deducted on the couple's Federal income tax return, giving them immediate savings. And these days, who doesn't want to save on taxes? Of course, when these contributions are eventually taken out at retirement time, regular income taxes will be paid on them. But most people in their later years have lower earnings and will therefore pay less taxes on their income. The dividends and other earnings on these IRA contributions won't be taxed until they are withdrawn, again normally after retirement. So less taxes will be paid on them too. These contributions can really accumulate over the years into a comfortable nest egg—especially helpful in face of inflation.

IRA's can be set up in a variety of investment, like savings accounts, government retirement bonds and annuities. They can also be invested in any one of a wide range of mutual funds whose objectives vary. From achieving a high rate of interest to maximizing growth of capital, a mutual fund pools the money of many investors who have similar financial goals and invests this money in different securities to spread the risk.

While the number of married women who work is increasing, the majority are still not employed outside the home. Close to 27 million—57 percent of their total—are not currently in the paid labor force. A large percentage of their husbands belong to firms that don't have retirement programs and are therefore eligible to establish individual retirement accounts for themselves and their spouses.

Friendship Main Goal For Big Brothers, Sisters

Friendship is a big deal to all of us and it just takes a little time for a concerned person to be a friend to someone in need.

Friendship is what Big Brothers-Big Sisters of Charlevoix is all about.

"If a person has a little bit of time on his hands, there are a lot of kids on the waiting list who would like a Big Brother or Big Sister," Steven Neal, an active participant in the program, said.

"It takes so little time to be a Big Sister or Big Brother," Neal's wife, Mary who is also active in the program, added. "They just ask that you spend one hour a week with your little sister or brother. They just ask for your friendship."

Neal, a Coast Guardsman, got involved with the program three years ago.

"I can't believe it was that long ago," he said as he recalled how he got involved. "The time has really gone fast."

A friend of the Neals', Marie Packard, was the secretary of the Big Brothers organization, and she convinced Neal to try it.

"After she mentioned it, I thought it might be interesting and wanted to get involved," Neal recalled.

"And I've enjoyed the program," he continued. "It's nice to do things with people, especially with someone who has the same interests you do."

The Neals said Big Brothers-Big Sisters officers interview volunteers and try to match them up with youth between the ages of 7 and 17 who have similar personalities and interests.

Neal said he has enjoyed taking his Little Brother Thad to the Sunday for visits and on other excursions. Thad apparently enjoys the relationship, too. He listed the night he spent on the Sunday and the day he learned to shift gears on a motorcycle as his favorite experiences.

"It's been fun," Mrs. Neal said of her two years experience with her Little Sister Holly. "We enjoy getting together and it's good to have friends of all ages."

Mrs. Neal said she and Holly enjoy bowling together and no wonder-Holly has bowled as high as 150.

They have also spent time shopping together or at the beach or shopping for clothes for the Neal's eight-month daughter, Sarah.

The four also enjoy attending the various outings arranged by the Big Brother-Big Sister organization. There are 18 "matches" in Charlevoix County that participants in the various programs.

The Neals stressed that more volunteers are needed to work with the youth, but they added that there are other jobs in the organization, too.

"To be in the organization you don't have to be a Big Brother or Big Sister," Neal said. "They have a board and committees that need members, too."

"But they really need volunteers to work with the kids," he continued.

Neal said anyone can volunteer. It doesn't matter what job the person has or if they are married or single, all are welcome to join the organization.

Irish Holidays Great Fun For Big Brother, Big Sisters

Group singing with music by Alice Tryhan, a little sister

Al Anderson on the accordion concluded the outing.

A kite flying contest with the Pleasant County Big Brother-Big Sister group is planned for April 23. The event will include a hotdog roast at the Bruce Green property on Twinline road at Bay Shore.

10 Scouts Roll Their Way to Victory

THESE FOUR Cub Scouts watch as their Pinewood Derby entries race down the course to victory.

Ten top Pinewood Derby winners were named from among 72 entries in the local derby held Saturday to represent Charlevoix's Cub and Webelos Scouts at the Northern District Pinewood Derby in Cheboygan Saturday, according to Cubmaster Terry Salmonson.

Selected from among the 11 Webelos entered in the local derby was Mike Donnelly who won recognition as the top racer in Pack 11.

Following him were: Mike Pischner, in second place, Craig Glass in third place, and Lee Allart in fourth. Rick Gallant was named as an alternate.

Tim Plagge placed first in the Cub Scout division followed by Jim Smith in second, Matt Lignell, third, Scott Detraz, fourth. Tim Salmonson is the alternate in this division.

Assisting were: Dan Dean and Dick Gallant at the starting gate and Charles Bentley, Edwin Crook and Vane Smith, judges. Racers were timed by an electronic judging device made by Cubmaster Salmonson.

District winners at Cheboygan Saturday will advance to the Semi-Finals Council finals late in April.

Ground Broken at Whiting Park

Ground was broken Friday for the new park manager's house at Whiting Park Ralph Richardson, chairman of the Parks and Recreation committee of the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners has announced.

Jack Siebe of Charlevoix is the general contractor for the one-story frame structure that will have 10,000 sq. feet of floor space. In addition to the usual number of rooms, the two-bedroom structure will have an office.

The new building will replace a structure that was known to be more than 60 years old and which was moved to the park many years ago from Boyne City.

Siebe's bid was for $26,000. Completion date is scheduled for late May.

Taxes in the Spotlight Again

Taxes are in the spotlight once again in Charlevoix County, what with the day of reckoning, April 15th, just around the bend.

The big question among local residents, as they prepare their reports, is how big a bite Uncle Sam will be taking this year.

Last April he collected approximately $18,323,000 in personal and employment taxes in the area, based upon the prior year's earnings.

That the amount of money turned in locally, as estimated from a breakdown of the taxes received from the State of Michigan as a whole. The statewide total was $12,215,000,000, according to figures released by the Treasury Department.

Thus, payments by local residents constituted close to 0.15 percent of the personal taxes collected throughout the state.

The Government expects that its haul this year will be substantially bigger than it was last April, notwithstanding the fact that unemployment was at a high level in 1976 in most parts of the country.

Despite that, there were more people who were at work earning more than in 1975. And bigger incomes produce bigger taxes.

Nationally, according to a projection by the U.S. Office of Management and Budget, personal income tax collections, including employment taxes, will be about $37 billion greater than they were last year.

The Government's budget, now before Congress, counts on $284.9 billion coming in from this source, as against $218.1 billion in 1976.

Taxpayers in the local area will be bearing their proportionate share of the total. Their payment next month will be approximately $21,401,000, it is estimated.

Just how long the rates will remain at their present level depends upon the President and Congress. Both favor a cut of sizeable proportions.

As it stands, however, personal taxes of $26 billion are called for in the budget for the next fiscal year, $41 billion more than at present.

If Charlevoix County residents are to carry their share of this increase, overall income in the area will have to rise considerably.

Street Repair to Begin in City

Work on city streets to repair the damage caused by severe winter weather probably won't begin for another four to six weeks, according to City Administrator Allen Sandberg.

Sandberg said only temporary emergency repairs would be made until it warms up and spring is definitely here.

"There's too much ground water right now that could create frost and damage any work we might do," Sandberg said. "It will probably be somewhere between April 15

Sandberg said considering the severe winter weather that hit the area, city streets are in pretty good condition.

Middle School Matmen Place Third in Meet

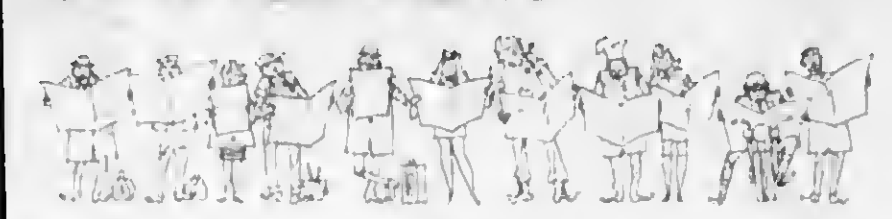

By FRANK MARTIN
The Charlevoix Middle School wrestlers, coached by Norm Probert, placed third in the Rudyard Invitational tournament Saturday with a total of 100 points. Grayling with 166 points took the tournament with Rudyard with 103 points winning second place. In fourth behind Charlevoix was Muskegon with 90 points; the Soo with 37 and Munising with 31 points. Scott Golovich won the championship in his weight class. Runners-up in their respective classes were Gerald Winner, Steve Bellows, Tim Bruce, Fred Sonnenberg, Ray Wiesler, Bruce Honeyette, Ken Wojan, Joe Sladek and Paul White. Greg Whitley, Greg Unlor and Mike DeMicheil placed third; Chuck Wiesler, Rich Geurgel, Mike Bartz, Mickey Betty, Kevin Whitley and Tom Hand, fifth place and Richard Starr, sixth place in middle school competition. Rusty Williams, with a 4-0 record, captured a championship in the elementary division. "Our boys showed a big improvement over the week before," Coach Probert said. "That extra week of practice really paid off," he continued. One reason for the success in practice time is the lack of a second mat. With 60 Varsity wrestlers and more than 40 in the middle school program, there is room to give the middle school students attention during the regular season Probert said. Probert had only praise for two high school students, Tim Mierke and Darla Bartz, a mat mauler, who volunteered to accompany the middle school wrestlers to Rudyard on Saturday. He said without them it would have been difficult to manage the 27 young wrestlers on the all-day trip. On Wednesday the Middle School team will travel to Petoskey for a scrimmage at 4 p.m. The fifth annual Middle School Intramural tournament at 2:15 p.m. Friday will conclude the wrestling season. Awards and plaques supplied by the Charlevoix Wrestling Club will be presented at the conclusion of the meet. Defending their titles will be Scott Golovich who will be going for his third title and Sladek, Bartz, Wojan, Sonnenberg, Chuck Wiesler and Whitley who will be trying for their second titles. The event at the middle school gymnasium is open to the public.

Board Fails to Approve Contracts

By FRAN MARTIN

The Charlevoix Board of Education failed to take action on two issues relative to administrative salaries and extension of contracts.

Recommendations that the contracts of employment for Ralph Raymer, K-5 principal, Vincent A. Chew, middle school principal, Roy Fortin, assistant high school principal, Vane H. Smith, high school principal, and Vincent Olach, business manager, be extended one year and that the board adopt the ratio concept of administrative compensation failed to receive support after a motion in each case had been made. The action would have extended their respective contracts one year to June 30, 1979. Present contracts run until June 30, 1978.

An experimental breakfast program will be offered at the K-5 school beginning Monday following action by the board. The meal will be offered on an experimental basis at a cost of 25 cents per participant with the exception of those eligible for free and reduced price nutritional breakfasts. The program will be subsidized by state and federal funds. An evaluation of the experimental program will be presented by the administration at the first meeting in June. The program is being undertaken because so many children come to school without breakfast.

Seventy-four tenure teachers in the school system will be offered contract following action by the board. Three other teachers, having completed satisfactory probationary periods, were given tenure status. They are Rebecca Berg, an elementary teacher, Pamela Smith, special education teacher, and Dennis VanGulder, high school teacher and assistant coach. Four others were offered probationary contracts for next year after satisfactorily completing a first year probation. They are Ronald Cox, Vera Rimbold, Kristin Schaperkottter and Charles Wright.

Abiding by its mandatory retirement policy adopted in 1972, that requires the retirement of employees when they reach the age of 65 years unless individually excepted, the board has asked that Mrs. Dorothy McTear retire at the end of the present school year. Mrs. McTear has not at this time made written application for an extension of this policy. Supt. James A. McKinney was directed to notify Mrs. McTear of the board's action in writing by April 10. Mrs. McTear has taught Kindergarten in the Charlevoix Elementary School for 37 years.

The board voted to take a school census this year. This was done to comply with the School Code of 1976 requirement to obtain census data on all persons ages 0 through 25 years. This is being done to obtain information relating to future enrollment and to locate any mentally and or physically handicapped persons in the school district.

A selling price of $44,500 was established for the Building Trades House located in Hampton Village. The price does not include the remainder of the lein for sewer construction and carpeting allowance. It shall include all other legal expenditures required of the selling party.

Approval was given an election resolution for the June 13 annual school election at which time two trustees will be elected to the Board of Education. There are no financial issues on the ballot. Prospective candidates for the vacancies are reminded that the deadline for filing nominating petitions is 4 p.m. Monday, April 11.

A proposed baseball program for high school youths was voted by the board. In proposing that it be voted, Don Brown said that it is a matter of finances and that if such a program was initiated a second would have to be established for the girls. It was also pointed out that the program would take the sport away from the school; that the school insurance program would not cover the participants; that it was not acceptable to the Michigan Huron-Shores Conference or the State High School Athletic Association and that of the 57 names submitted, all but 14 participate in at least one other high school sport.

A resolution expressing the board's appreciation to Dr. David Strawbridge, Dr. Robert Tallas and Dr. Jeff Porter for their services and interest in the young people in the community was adopted. The trio has established a dental health program in the K-5 school.

PATTY MUMA, Cancer Crusade chairman, hands out packets for the annual fundraising drive to Barbara Fortin and Jackie Hayes, volunteer captains for the door-to-door drive in the City of Charlevoix. The drive will start with a kickoff at 1 p.m. Tuesday, April 19 at the Grey Gables and will continue until May 7.

Down With Breakfast
So now we are going to serve the school children breakfast. I have a better idea. Why not build some bedrooms for the children and then hire some more teachers to serve the children breakfast in bed. That way, we could waste more money.

P.S.

All Candidates Win Offices as Only 128 Vote

It may come as a surprise to no one, but all the candidates listed on the ballot for Monday's spring election were elected to office.

Of course, none of the candidates were opposed in their bid for election. Annabelle Cunningham, the candidate for city treasurer, was the top vote getter of the six candidates running for office. She received 128 votes in the smallest voter turnout in recent history.

Following Mrs. Cunningham, was Judy Przybylski, candidate for city clerk, with 124 votes. Mrs. Przybylski will begin her first elected term in office following her victory at the polls. She was appointed to the position of city clerk in the fall following the resignation of Lyle King.

Edward Hansen received 120 votes for the position of mayor while Raymond Wood, first ward alderman, received 29 votes, Ivan Whitley, second ward alderman, received 44 votes and George Plumm, third ward alderman, received 44 votes.

Site Plan Approved For Shopping Center

The proposed shopping center on the corner of M-66 and Glover Road moved a step closer to reality Monday night. Charlevoix Common Council approved the site plan for the $1 million project Monday night.

Rick Walker, of Weatherford-Walker, Southfield developers for the commercial complex called Captain's Corners, met with the council to work out the final details of the extension of city sewer line to the property and to seek approval of the plan.

Walker told the council that Ben Franklin department store had become the second organization to sign a lease for space in the new shopping center. The store will lease 10,000 square feet as a full service junior department store, Walker said.

the deadline for filing nominating petitions is 4 p.m. Monday, April 11.

Council Discusses Land Swap With Beaver Island Boat Co.

By PAULA HOLMES

A proposed deed and land swap agreement between the City of Charlevoix and the Beaver Island Boat Company was discussed by common council Monday night.

No action was taken on the proposal, however, following a lengthy discussion of the issue.

The Beaver Island Boat Company has been here a long time and I don't think we can determine a better use for that property than we have now," Alderman Joe Morris said.

"I don't see any better use for the land than what we have right now with the boat company," Alderman Jeannine Wallace said. "Everyone in the city benefits from having the boat company here. And I don't just mean the downtown merchants, I mean everybody."

"I just can't see a better use for that land and I can see a better use for the property they are willing to trade us than we have right now," she added.

Alderman George Plumm pointed out that with the deed restrictions on the property the city is considering swapping, the city will have the first right of refusal to buy the property back. Also if the boat company shuts down, the property would revert to the city. Also no new structures would be allowed on the land and the current building could not be expanded more than 50 percent.

"Everything would be just like it is now," Plumm said, "except we won't own the land any more and we won't be getting the $2,700 a year rent we are getting from the boat company now."

Alderman Ray Wood argued that the same thing could be accomplished if the city would extend the lease to the property for the boat company guaranteeing that it could dock there. Then the city could agree to purchase the boat company garage with yearly payments the same as the rent the city would be receiving from the boat company for the dock space.

Alderman Ivan Whitley said he would like to have more input from city residents about the proposed swap before any action is taken.

"I can't really describe the difference in taste, but they sure do taste a lot better,"

Heise said. "Maybe it's just that you haven't had any fresh morels in so long, that the first ones seem to taste a lot better."

Heise said Emmet County was the best place around for mushroom hunters.

"I go everywhere when it comes to mushroom hunting," the young man said. "But when it comes to finding the pussy willows are out," he said, pointing to the pussywillow bushes along the roadside.

Heise predicts this will be one of the best years ever for mushroom hunters.

"I think we will have a record set in Boyne City during the mushroom festival," he said.

"It helps to get rid of the snow early, like we did this year," Heise went on explaining what it takes for a record-breaking mushroom season. "Right now with all the moisture we have in the ground, all it will take is a few warm days and the mushrooms will pop right out."

The mushroom hunter said part of the reason for last year's poor morel crop was due to the cold spring. The cold temperatures prevented the mushrooms from growing, particularly the black morels.

The white morels, which come out later in the season, were more abundant.

Heise said Emmet County was the best place around for mushroom hunters.

"It helps to get rid of the snow early, like we did this year," Heise went on explaining what it takes for a record-breaking mushroom season. "Right now with all the moisture we have in the ground, all it will take is a few warm days and the mushrooms will pop right out."

The mushroom hunter said part of the reason for last year's poor morel crop was due to the cold spring. The cold temperatures prevented the mushrooms from growing, particularly the black morels.

The white morels, which come out later in the season, were more abundant.

Heise said Emmet County was the best place around for mushroom hunters.

Juvenile crime, a combination of words that paint a picture—an ugly picture that is growing in proportion now slowly creeping from the cities in the suburbs to the rural areas.
An ugly picture that somehow attracts youth from all age groups, all economic backgrounds.
In Charlevoix County, 70 percent of all breaking and enterings in the townships are committed by youth age 19 and under. And 50 percent of that 70 percent of the breaking and enterings are committed by youth 17 and under with the core crime group centering around the 16 and 17-year-olds, according to Sheriff George Lassater.
In the City of Charlevoix, Police Chief Jack Nol estimates juvenile delinquents commit about 25 percent of all the crime in the city during a year. However, in the first three months of this year, juveniles have been responsible for almost all the crime in the city.

Juvenile offenses mainly center around breaking and enterings, theft, malicious destruction and vandalism, according to Roy Hayes, prosecuting attorney.
And the youth involved in the crimes range from age 13 on up, Betty Litzner, juvenile court officer, said.
"I'm fully convinced that we have gone too far," he said. "But how in the world you go back to the old standards, I don't know."
While the other officials involved with juvenile delinquents say that television may put some ideas in the youth's heads, most agree with Murphy that the real basis of the juvenile crime problem is in the home.
"The problem is in the grass roots—it's with the family," Police Chief Nol said. "That may be unkind to some families, but I think we have got to get back to teaching right and wrong and giving youth the supervision they require in the home."
Mrs. Litzner agreed.
"Parents are too interested in what they are doing themselves," she said. "And kids see more violence in their homes, too, between their parents," he said. "And uncertainty with the future, inflation, Watergate have all added to the problems leading to juvenile crime."
Several officials also said unsupervised time coupled with access to alcohol also lead to juvenile crime.
"Alcohol is a problem with teens in our area—a severe problem," Vane Smith, Charlevoix High School principal, said.
But it is not the sole cause of juvenile crime, although alcohol does act as liquid courage for some youth, Police Chief Nol said.
Officials said the solutions to juvenile crime were many, but they all center around stiffer penalties for offenses and swifter, more certain punishment.
Prosecutor Hayes said he personally handles all of the juvenile cases in the county because he feels it is important to get the juvenile's attention while he or she is still young and in juvenile court.
"You have to get the attention of the juvenile to prevent subsequent criminality," Hayes said, explaining his philosophy. "If you don't win with the juvenile, then you see them going into serious crime and into schools for crime."

attention to the individual youth and his or her problems.
"The key to stopping juvenile crime is getting the first offender," Nol said. "And if that means putting him in jail for a little while, that's what it means."
"I have interviewed 18 and 19-year-olds who have admitted to a felony, who have told me that if someone had caught them earlier, they wouldn't be talking with me now," he added.
Charlevoix Middle School Principal Vince Chow also advocated stiffer penalties for juvenile offenders. Chow said he had experienced success in his school with a work program. Under the work program, the students work out the cost of the damage they had caused in the school.
Chow said a lot of the success of the program could be attributed to the fact that it was also followed up at home with a restriction of freedom.
"I'm not a great advocate of jail even though I run one," Sheriff Lassater said. "But I think it has a tendency to get the juvenile's attention."
"Let them hear the bang of the door and give them some time to think about it," Lassater said.

No One Supports Merger During Township Annual Meet

By PAULA HOLMES
Who's for the merger? Who's for the merger? The question was asked at the Charlevoix Township Annual Meeting Saturday.
Not one hand was raised among the 28 people attending the Charlevoix Township Annual Meeting Saturday.
"I wondered what the sentiment of the township was on the merger," one citizen said from the back of the township hall. "I'm against it."
"That's it," Township Trustee Don Smith said. "About 80 percent are against it."
Supervisor Oscar Stroud said he and other township board members had attended several meetings with city officials and talked about various aspects of the merger.
"Like I said before, I worked on the merger the last time, but it didn't happen," Stroud said. "So I have worked to build up the township according to the vote of the people. Now if the fire department, $88,000 for water line extensions and $25,000 for road work.

Also included in the budget were fixed expenditures amounting to $12,620 which includes $1,000 for recreation, $4,500 for insurance and workmen's compensation for the fireman, and $1,100 for a yearly audit among other items.
Anticipated revenues for the coming year include a balance on hand of $27,374.41 in the checking, savings and revenue sharing accounts, $17,561 from federal revenue sharing, $15,000 from state shared tax, $20,000 from single business tax, $20,000 from allocated mill and $40,000 from two voted mills and $1,000 from zoning permits.
The township residents also have been discussing the proposed expansion during the annual meeting. Stroud said he also went to Lansing to talk with her representatives and to learn about what else she could do. She said she had information about how to protect to the Michigan Tax Tribunal and urged all people who had protested their taxes at the board of review to get in touch with her if they wanted to carry their protests to the tribunal.

Property taxes were also brought up. Stroud said it looked like the township residents would have a factor of 1.16 placed on their taxes.
The board of review had voted to hold the assessments at the 1976 level, Stroud said, but the township would probably receive the factor Mrs. Edward Lewand said she had protested her taxes at the board of review and had also gone to Lansing to talk with her representatives and to learn about what else she could do. Budgets, Road Programs Discussed By Area Township Residents

By FRANK MARTIN
Townships in the Charlevoix area, like those elsewhere in Charlevoix County held their annual meetings Saturday to air proposed budgets, review anticipated revenue and adopt or reject the proposed financial reports presented by township boards.
Evline Township approved a proposed budget of $60,526 which is approximately $1,000 less than the '76-77 budget. Anticipated revenue will be $63,011. Included in this is a $5,000 balance on hand from last year.
According to Eric Bieshling, the lion's share of the budget or $24,000 will be spent on roads in the township. The township has already entered into a contract for construction of 1 1/4 miles of highway on Ridge Road on the east side of the South Arm of Lake Charlevoix.
Revenue to meet the budget which includes operational costs as well as monies earmarked for road construction will come from 1.0 mill levy on the township's State Equalized valuation, sales tax, $15,500; federal revenue sharing, $6,300; tax collection fees, $5,450; Single Business Tax, $1,678 and from various other sources.
Marion Township, a proposed budget of $40,113 was accepted, an increase of slightly less than $5,000 over the year before. Anticipated income to offset the budget is approximately $40,195 which includes $6,500 on hand from last year.

Largest expenditure according to Doris Johnston, treasurer, is $16,900 to be spent on Pop Road. Other expenditures include $2,300 set aside for work on the township park on Nowland Lake where plans call for a boat launching ramp and sand for the beach area. Other expenditures include operational expenses of $8,500; $3,500 for fire protection and ambulance service to the township; $3,000 for elections which may include purchase of a voting machine and $1,000 for an audit of the township books.
Major sources of income will be State Revenue Sharing, $16,000 (this includes funds from several state sources), Federal Revenue Sharing, $2,861; tax collections, $6,000; 1.0 mill allocated will underwrite the expenditures which will include the township's share for fire protection, sanitary landfill and the Medical Center, the latter shared with St. James township. The township will also pay $7,500 toward the operation of the airport. Funds for this come from voted millage in both townships.
Hayes Township adopted a budget of $127,610 which will be balanced with $72,911 in funds on hand and anticipated revenue from other sources including 1.0 mill allocated which will realize $23,000, Federal Revenue Sharing, $8,000, state revenue sharing, $16,000 and tax collection fees, $7,000 plus funds from other sources.

In the budget, according to Sandra Somerville, is $30,000 for roads including the seal coating of Murray Road from Upper Bay Shore Road to Sloat Road ($14,000) and a half-mile of Burgess Road. Another planned expenditure is $48,000 for a new township hall. Also in the budget is $10,000 for fire protection and $2,500 for ambulance service.
Norwood Township approved a deficit budget of $28,663 including $20,000 for road construction. The proposed construction will include the completion of work started earlier on Beattie Road and planned construction on Warner Road.
At the conclusion of the meeting, the township residents by a vote of 10-8, approved a resolution not to collect 50 percent of the taxes during the summer unless Marion, Charlevoix and Hayes townships agreed to. Earlier the township board had agreed to collect portion of the taxes during the summer.

Thanks to McKimmy For His Efforts As Superintendent

When Charlevoix Public Schools close for summer vacation this June, residents will be saying goodbye to the present superintendent.

Last week, the Charlevoix Board of Education accepted the resignation of James A. McKimmy. McKimmy advised the board he was accepting a similar position in the Cadillac School System.

It is always difficult to know exactly what to say when someone, such as the superintendent of a local school system, leaves Charlevoix.

Public officeholders never have an easy task. And they often draw mixed reactions of sentiment when they leave office.

However in the case of the Charlevoix School superintendent, we are sorry to see him leave our area.

While we are glad to see him leave for a better professional position, we feel his absence in the Charlevoix School system will be noticed.

In the last four years, McKimmy has made many inroads in our local education program.

We think one of his strongest areas has been the development of a better community attitude towards local school and needs. One of his underlying themes during the last four years has been bringing the community into the schools.

Rather than attempting to foster a separation between the school and the community, we have eagerly watched him develop programs that involve the community. Perhaps this has been best exemplified by both his and his family's involvement in Charlevoix.

While in Charlevoix, he has been involved in less than a dozen activities and organizations including the Charlevoix Lions Club, Big Brothers, the United Methodist Church, the Charlevoix Flying Club and the Charles A. Ransom Counseling Center.

Professionally, he served on the State Board of Education Blue Ribbon Committee on Intermediate School Districts; represented the Michigan Association of Superintendents on the task force on middle school teacher preparation and on the Region II Michigan Association of School Administrators legislative committee.

He has also been a senior lecturer in Michigan State University's off-campus education program.

In a recent Courier interview, McKimmy said he felt the Charlevoix Schools had shown marked progress during his four year tenure here. He went on to say that he had enjoyed support in the community and a good relationship with the entire staff of the school system.

Community support for local schools was demonstrated earlier this year when Charlevoix residents approved both a three-year operation millage, as well as monies to improve the middle school facility.

McKimmy said that he hopes this support will continue with the eventual approval of building needs for the high school.

We think the Charlevoix superintendent has done a great deal to raise the professional image of local educators.

Charlevoix School board members will have a difficult task in attempting to find a replacement for the superintendent's position.

Charlevoix will certainly miss both the superintendent and his wife, Lou Ann, along with their three children.

We wish them best of luck in their new community.

Clockwise by Bob Clock

I spent the weekend down at the corner of Grand River-ave. and McGraw-st. in Detroit.

Now you know that's not true because I'm not one of those will-o-the-wisps who dashes off to Detroit every three or four years to see the sights. "do" the town and take in a half dozen sporting events.

But I did make a number of mental excursions back to those famed four corners in the Motor City all weekend.

On Saturday, I pondered Bruce Norris' decision to put the Detroit Red Wings out of Olympia Stadium and send them to the new sports colossus at Pontiac. The Olympia is the most imposing structure on the four corners created by the intersection of Grand River and McGraw.

Then on Sunday I sat in Charlevoix's Christ Episcopal Church and listened to Fred Edwards of East Jordan sing "The Palmers," accompanied by Mrs. Marge Coleman on the organ. Suddenly I was back at the second most imposing structure at the corner of Grand River and McGraw—Sevel Memorial Presbyterian Church, a brooding red brick structure so large it could swallow all of the churches in Charlevoix, without using the foyer or the gymnasium.

When I was a boy, "The Palmers" was regular Palm Sunday fare at Sevel Church, smack in the center of a neighborhood where the Scotch brogue was as thick as barley soup. It was sung by a tenor named Prescott who put a burr on every syllable. He sang the song at least once for every Sunday School class. If the class were large he'd sing it twice.

Although the Olympia and Sevel Church stand kitty-corner from each other separated by two busy thoroughfares, the church and the stadium have become mutually dependent on each other over the years, mainly because the church owns a parking lot and the Olympia is badly in need of parking.

This interdependence is a fairly recent phenomena. When I was a kid, most of the spectators arrived at the Olympia either by street car or bus and didn't need a place to park. Furthermore, the Olympia drew a great many of its spectators from the immediate neighborhood, regardless of the event.

Holler Derby tickets only cost a dime and I could never think of a better way to spend a dime. Sometimes I'd attend every game in a series.

Hockey, ice shows, boxing, circuses, rodeos! I was fun to live in the shadow of the Olympia as a boy.

But now the glamor is wearing thin. If Norris' Red Wings leave, the Olympia will lose its last drawing card. The remaining events could hardly support such a gigantic structure.

And the same may be true for Sevel Church.

Time was when hundreds of families living in the immediate area supported the church. It had a seating capacity in the main sanctuary of from 500 to 600 and on some Sundays not a seat was vacant. It also had a rather large auditorium that would seat another 200, a huge gymnasium, parlors, a large kitchen and dining room and banks of assorted Sunday School classrooms.

Today, however, the old families have moved to the suburbs and no one has stepped in to fill the void. The church is supported chiefly by loyal oldtimers, many of whom travel 15 or 20 miles each way from the suburbs every Sunday. Of course, the church would not have been able to survive in recent years without proceeds from its parking lot, which serves patrons of Olympia stadium.

So the church and the stadium are more or less leaning on each other. If the Red Wings really pull out, then the future of the Olympia is iffy. If the Olympia closes, the church will no longer realize a profit from its parking lot and will be forced to take drastic measures to survive.

These two imposing old ladies down at the corner of Grand River and McGraw have seen a lot of history together. But their days may be numbered.

Consumers Should Question Nuclear Power Costs

To the Editor:

Recently the editor of a mid-Michigan newspaper asked his readers the following question about the two billion dollar Consumers Power Company's proposed nuclear power plant in Midland, Michigan: "If the nuclear project here goes down the tube, what will be the impact on Consumers and on its ratepayers of a potentially devastating financial loss?"

The ramifications of this question apply to all of Michigan.

I think that our federal bankruptcy laws would protect the ratepayers by having a federal receiver run the company. The rates would eventually come down as the operational costs were sold off to better-run utilities such as American Electric Power Company. The valueless nuclear plants would be owned by Consumers' first mortgage bond holders. The common stockholders would get whatever is left.

Consumers' valuable coal-fired electrical plants and high voltage distribution lines could be bought by Michigan's newly allowable joint ventures between municipal power and private power. Thus, ratepayers would continue to get electricity at better rates because the very costly nuclear plants would not be part of the rate base.

If you don't want to read and stories today, then skip this one. Mine is the story of a million women who once were happy in their lemon-scented houses, raising their kids, smelling their laundry, and hitting the Sears Lee every couple of hours.

Then one day I was out on the playground reading the American Journal on Tooth Decay when a sleazy-looking woman sat down beside me and said, "Hey kid, wanta try a Diet-Rite cola?"

"What is it?" I asked, my eyes wide with innocence.

"It'll make you thin," she said. "Just take one sip. Go ahead. It won't hurt you."

"How much does it cost?"

"Hey, no problem," she smiled. "It's on me. If you like it, I'll be back here tomorrow with another six-pack."

It's an old story. Within a week, I had developed a real Diet-Rite habit. I had it with my lunch. In the evening with popcorn...on the airlines...on picnics. It made me feel good. (Especially, the cans of cola out with lemon.)

One day my husband said, "I'm worried about you. You look good. Are you taking too good care of yourself?"

"Don't worry about me," I said. "I've just lost a few pounds. I'll pig out at Christmas. You'll see."

But Christmas came and went and the flab continued to drop off.

Then, last week, I went to the store and a fear gripped me that nearly charitable enough to excuse the doctor and blame his receptionist. This isn't fair, according to a Kalamazoo woman. She wrote:

"I was a receptionist for a doctor who was never on time—anywhere from 1 to 2 hours late. I have known him to still be in bed as his first patient sat waiting for him. And the patient seems to think the particular reason for his tardiness was the convenience of their patients. One-stop shopping. Who can resist it?"

When the doctor gives you a prescription, you do not have to get it filled at the drugstore in his lobby. It is perfectly legal for you to run past the pharmacist who stands between you and the only door. Or you can sneak out a back window.

But the doctors have installed these drugstores and eyeglass shops for the convenience of their patients. One-stop shopping. Who can resist it?

Sure, the doctors usually have stock in the corporations which own their lobby shops. The more prescriptions they write, the more money they make. You might think this sounds like a conflict of interest. Shame on you

No doctor would ever prescribe unneeded pills simply so he could send his daughter to a better university. If you know Dr. Welby, you know such a accusation is outrageous.

But it is something to think about while waiting to see the doctor, isn't it?

Taking care of Charlevoix's two cemeteries, Brookside and St. Mary's Catholic Cemetery, is an involved job that requires dedication and shrimbery. Library Receives Book On Telephone History

By FRANK MARTIN

The Charlevoix Public Library has been presented with a copy of "The Telephone Book", a beautifully illustrated book that depicts the history of the telephone and its impact on American life.

The book, written by H.M. Boettlinger with special photography by Richard A. Steinberg, traces the 100 year history of Alexander Graham Bell and Thomas A. Watson, the inventors, Thomas N. Vail who created a system to make it work and other greats before and after the telephone became a universally used instrument.

Recipients of copies of "The Telephone Book" were libraries at Boyne City, Charlevoix, Cheboygan, East Jordan, Harbor Springs, Petoskey and Waukegan Lake. Special presentations were made to the Middle School Library at Petoskey in recognition of the assistance offered by Mrs. Kirchhoff's sixth grade in helping the Pioneers with a community project and to the Petoskey high school in recognition of student project and to improve the library.

Fred Pettis of Petoskey is president of Wolverine Chapter 10, Telephone Pioneers of America; Petoskey Club, Rod King of Cheboygan, vice president and Mary Wilmer of Petoskey, secretary.

"Talking books," recorded books for the blind, reclamation of used eye glasses for sight conservation and "Talking Animals" used in speech correction problems in children are some of the best known service projects of The Pioneers.

Even where cranking does help in passing a test, the knowledge acquired is unlikely to last. Dr. Chester Pearlman, a Boston psychiatrist, explains: "You produce more facts than you can remember and you certainly will not be able to use them in the future—they are not part of you."

Nat since the ancients consulted oracles to learn the meanings of dreams have dreams been subjected to as much scrutiny as in recent years. Modern-day studies, however, are as concerned with the process of dreaming as with the dreams' contents.

Shakespeare dubbed sleep the "chief nourisher in life's feast" because it "knits up the ravel'd sleeve of care." But scientists now think sleep itself is less important than the brain waves of sleeping accompanied it.

But dreams are essential, according to recent findings that suggest dreaming may be the chief reason for sleeping. Everyone dreams, scientists say, and people who claim they don't are deep sleepers who do not remember their dreams when awake.

Using electroencephalographs, researchers in several countries have recorded the brain waves of sleeping volunteers. The scientists found that dreaming takes place during one stage of sleep termed REM for the rapid eye movements that occur behind the closed eyelids.

During these periods, which last about 20 minutes, the brain is hyperactive. A person may experience REM sleep three or five times a night. Subjects who were awakened during REM sleep invariably reported they had been in the middle of a dream.

The brain apparently functions like a super-computer. A computer must spend some time "off line" so corrections, updating, and new programs can be fed into it.

A computer that is off line is not shut down, but it is not connected to any of the external equipment it controls. In this context, dreaming is seen as the brain's time off line, when it sorts out and absorbs data received during the day.

This could explain why infants, to whom nearly everything is new information, require much greater amounts of sleep than elderly persons.

The theory also could explain why someone kept awake for several days starts hallucinating. Deprived of an opportunity to dream, the brain becomes disoriented and provides wrong information—as would a computer if it were not taken off line and updated.

Dr. Ernest Hartman, who has studied sleep habits since 1909 at Boston State Hospital, is convinced the amount of sleep people need is determined by how much dreaming they require.

He found that both long and short sleepers spend the same time in deep sleep, marked by slower brain waves, probably for physical rest. But long sleepers spend up to three times as long in REM sleep, when they are dreaming.

Dr. Hartman believes short sleepers tend to be "effective, practical persons" who push problems aside and do the job, such as Thomas Edison or Winston Churchill.

Long sleepers may need the extra dreaming to resolve mental needs. Albert Einstein, a deep thinker, slept as much as 12 hours a night, he points out. For such people, dreams may be a way of working out troublesome problems.

Friedrich A. Kekulé, the German chemist, deciphered the structure of the benzene molecule in a dream in which snake like atoms whirled in shapes that suggested hexagons.

And golfer Jack Nicklaus says that several years ago when his game was in a slump, he dreamed of a new grip, tried it in his club, and his game improved.

Further indications that dreaming is the time when the brain reprograms itself, including new information and modifying old, came from a Canadian research project. Students who were learning well in an intensive language course showed an increase in REM sleep, while those not learning well showed no increase in the time they spent dreaming.

Further indications that

Sleeping On It May be the Key to Success

Staying up all night cramming for an exam doesn't always work, as bleary-eyed students find out.

The time-honored advice to "sleep on it" may be more effective. Research indicates that a person needs to sleep and dream before facts can be catalogued and imprinted on the brain for recall.

Even where cranking does help in passing a test, the knowledge acquired is unlikely to last. Dr. Chester Pearlman, a Boston psychiatrist, explains: "You produce more facts than you can remember and you certainly will not be able to use

Neglected Children Victims of Emotional War

By PAULA HOLMES

They are victims of a war—a war of emotions.

Their wounds are bruises, broken bones and scarred personalities. The lucky ones live to grow up. The unlucky ones die in their early years of life.

They come from all types of ethnic and economic backgrounds and many of them grow up to become soldiers in the same war.

"They" are the almost 1 million abused or neglected children living in this country, helpless victims of an emotional war raging in their parents' or other adults' connected with them.

But the children and their parents are not in the war alone. Another group of people, the Department of Social Services protective services workers, is attempting to help.

In Charlevoix County, the protective services worker is Irene Richardson. Mrs. Richardson works with two people to cover the four-county area of Charlevoix, Emmet, Otsego and Cheboygan.

"We are not a police agency," Mrs. Richardson said explaining her role in the battle. "Our basic focus is to help keep the family together and to help them work out their problems."

"We're a crisis intervention service," Marsha Elliott, Emmet County protective services worker, said. "We can take immediate steps to protect the child when there is a case of neglect or abuse."

Job Starts With Complaint The protective services worker's job begins when a concerned relative or neighbor, or one of the people mandated by law to report abuse or neglect, such as doctors, teachers and police officers, calls with a complaint. The three workers provide 24-hour coverage and response in any such calls made to 347-1700, Mrs. Richardson said.

"By law we must make a contact at the home to check out the complaint within 24 hours of the call," Mrs. Richardson said. "If the complaint sounds like the child is really in danger we may call the judge right away and get court permission to remove the child immediately and then ask the police to accompany us to the home."

Mrs. Richardson said she sees less abuse in Northern Michigan as compared with the Detroit area, where she served as a protective services worker for one year.

"I think abuse is less here, or else we just don't see it, as compared with Detroit, which probably has 80 percent of the abuse cases in the state," she said.

The protective services worker did say she saw more sexual abuse and neglect in Charlevoix County and surrounding areas than in Detroit.

"There is a lot of incest up here, which is accepted in many families," Mrs. Elliott continued. "I have some cases where fathers have had sexual relations with daughters as young as one and one-half years old."

Works With Family Once a case of abuse or neglect is brought to the protective services worker's attention, he or she begins working with the family while the child is still in the home. "We try to help them recognize they have a problem," Mrs. Richardson said, "and that they can't be allowed to continue this behavior."

"Many of the people we see that abuse or neglect their children lack parenting skills," she continued. "They were never effectively parented themselves and have no model to follow. Many of them were abused children, too."

"Also they are lonely, isolated people who don't have someone to turn to when they need help," she explained. "And they tend to be married to the same type of person and don't get any support from them either."

Mrs. Richardson said the parents tend to have unrealistic expectations for their children, which change daily. The child learns that he or she can't trust anyone because the parents are so inconsistent.

Vicious Cycle

"The child's self-concept is very low and they grow up to be parents just like their own parents," she said. "It's a vicious cycle."

To stop the cycle, the protective services worker attempts to get the parents to visit the mental health clinic or other counseling services. Also the workers are trying to develop resources such as parent aides and volunteer housekeepers who could teach the parents how to take care of their children and homes.

As far as the abused or neglected children in the cycle are concerned, the protective services workers are attempting to make more people aware that they can report abuse and neglect, 24 hours a day.

"The danger area is children under age five," Mrs. Richardson said. "These children aren't visible. We're talking about little children who can't defend themselves."

Developing Resources

The workers are also developing resources for the children, too, such as day care programs, co-op nursery schools and other programs that would get the children out of the home for part of the day.

The workers are also looking for more good temporary foster homes to place children in, if they have to be removed from their homes.

Our focus is not to remove the children from the home but to refer the parents and the children to various agencies," Mrs. Richardson explained.

"We have become very conscious of the damage done when the children are removed from the homes, and the whole system they get involved with when that happens," she continued.

"They're liable to be in worse shape when you pull them out of their homes than if you left them in," Mrs. Elliott added.

Often probate court has a backlog of cases and children get lost in the system while waiting for hearings on their cases, the two workers said.

Solutions to the problems of child abuse and neglect are not plentiful or easy, the two protective services workers said. But one thing is for sure, it is going to take the concern and cooperation of everyone to end the problem.

Mary Clark Named BPW Young Careerist

Mary Clark of Reed City, a former Charlevoix resident, has been named careerist of the Oscoda County, Oscoda-Reed, City, Petoskey and Traverse City Women's (BPW) Club at its district meeting held recently at Ewart.

Mrs. Clark is the former Mary Plum, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Plum and the wife of Merrill Clark, also a former resident. She is a pharmacist at an Ewart drug store.

As the Young Career Woman she will now attend the state BPW convention at Boyne Mountain in May to vie with other district winners for the state title.

Ten of the 12 district clubs were represented at the meeting at which she was selected as Young Careerist by members from Bellaire, Big Rapids, Cadillac, Ewart, Grayling, Manistee, Mason County, Oscoda-Reed, City, Petoskey and Traverse City. Judy Cole, home economist of Cadillac, was runner-up.

Mrs. Clark, 26, is a 1969 graduate of the Charlevoix High School and was graduated from the Ferris State College School of Pharmacy with a B.S. degree in Pharmacy in 1974.

She is a member of the American Pharmaceutical Association, Michigan Pharmacists Association, the Quad-County Pharmacists Association, Charlevoix Chapter No. 72, Order of the Eastern Star, Women of the Moose Chapter 949, Lambda Kappa Sigma sorority and the Oscoda BPW.

Charlevoix Families Larger Than Average

How do Charlevoix County families compare in size with families in other sections of the country? Have they been getting bigger or smaller in the last decade or so?

The questions arise because of concern over population control and distribution, aroused by environmentalists and ecologists. They have become increasingly alarmed at the way the atmosphere is being polluted, the rivers and lakes contaminated and the natural resources being used up.

To some degree, the trend in that direction has been slowed by recent changes in family composition and the rate of population growth.

The Census Bureau reports that the average size of families in the United States is steadily decreasing. It has reached the point, in the last few years, that will result in zero population growth, if maintained.

What it means is that the number of children being born has dropped to just under 2.1 per family from the 3.7 that prevailed 20 years ago. That is sufficient, if sustained for a number of years, to keep the population at a fixed level.

In Charlevoix County, according to the latest figures, families are somewhat bigger than in most communities. There are now some 306 persons per 100 households locally.

Elsewhere in the United States, the average is 296 per 100 households. In the North Central States, it is 298. A comparison with 1950 figures shows that families in the local area have changed in size since then. The average at that time was 355 per 100 households, as against the current ratio of 306.

Most population experts believe that families will continue to run smaller than in former years because of more effective means of contraception, liberal abortion laws and the changing attitude of women.

Although the fertility rate in the United States has continued to drop for the fifth year in a row, it doesn't mean that it will stay at that level, they point out. It may be offset soon by the large number of baby boom children, born in the 10 years after World War II, who are entering adulthood and starting to raise families of their own.

High School to Host Industrial Arts Fair

The Charlevoix High School will host the annual Region 14-15 Industrial Arts Fair April 15 Jim Jinski, local chairman of the annual event, has announced.

Industrial arts vocational educational students from schools throughout a 17-county area will be entering their projects in 12 divisions in an elimination fair leading to state-wide competition at Saginaw April 21-23 Jinski said.

The fair will be open to the public from 4 until 9 p.m. at the high school gymnasium where hundreds of projects will be on exhibit. Project entries will be accepted from 7 a.m. until 12 noon. Judging will begin at noon and continue until 3:30 p.m.

Entries will be divided into four basic levels of competition: Group A, all students in grades 7 and 8; Group B, all students in grades 9 and 10; Group C, students in grades 11 and 12 receiving instruction up to eight hours per week and Group D, all students in vocational, trade, industry and technical classes spending eight or more hours per week in these classes.

Regional awards include ribbons for the top three places and honorable mention in the various classifications. Students receiving regional first and second place awards will then become eligible for state competition at Saginaw. Awards at the state fair will be in the form of ribbons, plaques, certificates, and eight savings bonds of $100 each for the most outstanding exhibits.

The divisions that projects may be entered in include architectural drawing, electrical, graphic arts, group project, machine shop, mechanical drawing, models, open division, patternmaking and molding, plastics, wood and wrought metals.

The Michigan Industrial Education Awards Program Craftsman's Fair at Saginaw is sponsored by the Michigan Industrial Arts Society and the Detroit News.

Local People Serving in Armed Forces

Charles Nessel Joins Air Force Through Delayed Enlistment

Charles B. Nessel, 17, son of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Nessel, 801 Mill St., East Jordan, has entered the U.S. Air Force's Delayed Enlistment Program (DEP).

According to Technical Sergeant Larry Whit, the Air Force recruiter here, Nessel's entry into the DEP serves two purposes. First, it allows the Air Force to schedule an opening for him to attend basic training and be assigned to a job or skill area. Second, the DEP enables Nessel, a senior at East Jordan High School, to wrap up his personal affairs before leaving home.

Nessel will enter the Regular Air Force on Aug. 2. Following graduation from the six-week basic training course at Lackland Air Force Base, Tex., he will receive technical training in the mechanical aptitude area and be assigned to an Air Force duty station.

Smoke Detector Can Save Money As Well As Lives

Recently public service ads and commercials have urged you to protect your life and you family with smoke detectors. Besides these obvious incentives, smoke detectors can also save you money. Many insurance companies are now giving discounts on homeowner's policies when you install smoke detectors. So check with your insurance company.

To learn about the two types of smoke detectors being sold, and where they should be installed, get a copy of the new booklet developed by the National Bureau of Standards. For your free copy of "Smoke Detectors," send a postcard to the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 645E, Pueblo, Colorado 81009.

Smoke detectors work by sensing smoke from a distant fire and sounding an alarm so you will have time to escape. They are particularly valuable at night when you are sleeping.

The two types of detectors on the market use different sensors to detect smoke. Photoelectric types use a light bulb and a photoelectric cell.

The smoke cuts the amount of light reaching the cell and the alarm sounds. This type is particularly good at sensing smoldering fires.

The ionization chamber type uses a small radiation source that produces electrically charged air molecules called ions which allow an electric flow in the chamber. Smoke particles attach themselves to the ions cutting the electric flow. The alarm sounds. This type is particularly good at warning of flaming fires.

Because smoke rises, the detectors are placed either on the ceiling or high up on the wall. You should have one in the bedroom area (if that area is spread out, add others so the warning will be heard). And one should be located on the basement ceiling at the bottom of the stairway. For adding safety, get the detectors interconnected so that if one alarm goes off, all will sound.

Detectors use either batteries or house current. Batteries have to be changed about once a year. Most battery units have a warning when the batteries are getting weak. The household current units can either be plug-in types or wired-in. If you have an outlet close at hand, there is no problem. But wiring will take an electrician.

One of your smoke detector is up, check it every month and keep it clean.

And practice what to do when the signal sounds. Every person in your family should know at least two ways to get out of the house. And there should be a special place to meet outside so everyone will be accounted for. When the detector goes off, you have a short time to get out. So use it wisely.

"Smoke Detectors" (free) is one of over 200 selected Federal consumer publications listed in the Spring edition of the catalog, "Consumer Information." The catalog is published quarterly by the Consumer Information Center of the General Services Administration. You can get a free copy by sending a postcard to the Consumer Information Center, Pueblo Colorado 81009.

Wrestling Season Ends For Middle School Students

By FRANK MARTIN
The Charlevoix Middle School concluded its wrestling season Friday with the fifth annual intramural tournament, according to Coach Norm Probert.

The tournament was divided into Divisions by grades with each division winner representing a championship. The results of the tournament follow:

Sixth grade: Division I: Chuck Klooster; II, Rick Bartz; III, Rusty Williams; IV, Ed Sarasin; V, Alan Bergmann.

Seventh grade: Division I, Gerard Wimmer; II, Muckle Belfy; III, Chuck Weisler; IV, Greg Whitley; V, Greg Umlor.

Eighth grade: Division I, Tim Bruce; II, Mike DeMitchell; III, Scott Golovich; IV, Bruce Honeysett; V, Ken Wojan.

Coach Probert said he was impressed with the progress of the wrestlers during their month-long season. He went on to say the future of the sport looks good with 16 wrestlers moving into high school in the fall where they will likely be participating in the annual Freshman-Sophomore Invitational tournament on Dec. 3, the largest of the kind in the state.

Probert added that with right area schools initiating middle school wrestling program, the future of the sport looks good. Charlevoix's big problem, he said, is the need of a second wrestling mat. This is important with double dual meets being allowed.

Probert added that the middle school program would not be possible without assistance of such people as Gary Probert as referee; Jerry Paul as scorer and announcer; John Oza and Terry Drew, former wrestlers in the program, high school wrestlers Tom Mielke, Dan Sayer, Curt Dixon, Jerry Sladek, Lee DeMitchell, Curt Dixon, Dave Golovich, and Dennis Whitley and mat mauls, Daria Bartz and Laurie Burnett, who assist in staging the intramural event.

INDOOR BEAUTY WITH FLAME VIOLETS

Spring signs turn our thoughts to sunshine and flowers and outdoor gardening. If the weather is still a little cool for you to get right into your outdoor flower bed practice a little on your indoor plants.

If you're an African Violet lover try your luck with Episcia or more commonly referred to as flame violet. The flame violet is a relative of the African Violet and requires much the same care. Flame violets prefer humid air and moderate to warm temperatures. They are happiest at 80 - 85 degrees during the day and a minimum of 62 - 65 degrees at night. Use a humus potting soil made of equal parts commercial houseplant soil and peat. Water should be offered whenever the soil surface begins to dry. Avoid spotting by keeping the water off the foliage. A standard houseplant fertilizer should be used 4 to 6 weeks.

The small flowers of the Episcia are red or red-orange. The plants usually flower in the summer. During the rest of the year, their wrinkly, often brightly colored leaves add interest to shelves, windowsills, hanging baskets or dish gardens. Because they prefer a high humidity environment they're a natural for terrariums.

Mealybugs and cyclamen mites are also fond of Episcia. Leaf drop due to low humidity or temperatures below 60 degrees can be an environmental problem. Temperatures below 50 degrees can be fatal to the plant.

Episcia can be propagated from stem tips or leaf petiole cuttings, by seed or by division.

Crews Readyng Beaver Islander for Spring Opening

By FRANK MARTIN

The motorship, Beaver Islander, which operates between the mainland and Beaver Island, is being readied for the 1977 season, according to Lawrence McDonough, business manager for the Beaver Island Boat Co.

He was quick to add, however, that the navigation season is not likely to open as early as last year when the ferry, which transports mail, passengers and freight to the island, opened on April 12.

"We're shooting for the 14th or 15th but with all the ice on this side and in St. James harbor I'm a little skeptical," McDonough said.

The severe winter has resulted in heavy ice in northern Lake Michigan. There is open water out several miles but it will take heavy winds to break it up so the Beaver Islander can operate.

McDonough said that if the winds didn't break up the ice in the harbor at St. James the company may have to ask the Coast Guard Cutter Sundew to do it.

McDonough also said that island stores were running low on some commodities but that the shortages were not serious at this time. A telephone call to Mrs. Rud McDonough at McDonough's Market, one of two general stores on the island, revealed that the shortages were annoying rather than serious.

"In most instances people can find a product to supplement the one they are asking for. It's the brand of the product rather than the shortage of it," she said.

She mentioned mushroom soup as one product not requested that is missing from the shelves in their store. She said LaFreniere's general store was also short on some name brands.

"Every year you try to second guess what the needs will be but there's something you always miss," she added.

From late December, usually about the 25th or until navigation opens in the spring the island is cut off from lake traffic and supplies are transported via air. As a result, store owners on the island located 33 miles northwest of here build up their inventories of staples to last until spring.

"We don't always guess right," Mrs. McDonough said. She also said that the supply of bottled gas was running low and customers were being allotted one tank at a time but that she thought there was enough to last until the Beaver Islander could bring more in.

As far as she knew there were no shortages of fuel oil, gasoline and related supplies.

The Beaver Islander and her sister ship, the South Shore, are presently at their winter berths in Charlevoix. McDonough said the heat had been turned on in the Beaver Islander, the larger of the two ferries and scrubbing and painting of the interiors of the vessel had started. Work on the exterior will have to wait 'til warmer weather, he said.

McDonough added that 1977

is the year the vessel must go to the yards for its five-year Coast Guard inspection. Arrangements have already been made to enter the yards at Soo Weiding at Sauli Ste. Marie where the boat will be removed from the water for its hull inspection by Coast Guard marine inspectors. At the same time, its twin propellers will be checked and any necessary repairs made.

All vessels carrying passengers commercially must undergo a similar inspection.

The crew for the ferry will be the same as last season. Russell Green is the captain. Jerry LaFreniere and Kevin McDonough are the other members of the crew. Later in the season when the South Shore goes into service, Green will take over as skipper of the smaller vessel and Kevin McDonough will skipper the Beaver Islander. In an emergency, Lawrence McDonough takes a hand at the wheel.

Until May 1, the Beaver Islander will make three trips weekly. Effective May 1, the vessel will operate daily except Sunday until the regular season starts in mid-June when daily trips are made. At that time, the two vessels will operate out of Charlevoix, leaving the municipal dock each morning and returning late each day.

For the present, until the summer season begins, and after Labor Day in the fall, the Beaver Islander operates out of St. James, arriving in Charlevoix at mid-morning and returning at 1 p.m.

Cars, trucks and other vehicles are transported on both the Beaver Islander and the South Shore.

Since late December the only contact with the island has been via air. Two airlines serve the island, McPhillips Flying Services out of Charlevoix which has the mail contract and the Weike Flying Service with headquarters on Beaver Island.

YOU CAN TELL spring is just around the corner when you see what's begun on the Beaver Islander at its dock in Round Lake. The boat company officials are planning to make their first run of the season within the next week and they don't think they will make it by last year's date.

Six Residents File Petitions For School Board Positions

Six residents of the Charlevoix School District, seeking election to the two vacancies on the Charlevoix Board of Education, had filed nominating petitions as of Tuesday, April 4 p.m. Monday.

The vacancies are for the posts presently held by C. Max Novak, who is a candidate for re-election, and Robert J. Cook, who is not a candidate.

Besides Novak, the candidates are Wayne E. Boss, principal and teacher.

Cook, in a letter to the board, said he had plans to travel and had purchased a home in Englewood, Fla., and, as a result, would not seek re-election.

The election at which two candidates will be elected is scheduled for June 13. There will be no other issues on the ballot in the annual school election.

Sundew Breaks Ice At St. James Harbor

The U.S.C.G. Cutter Sundew entered the harbor at St. James Monday to break up the ice. The ship spent the night at the island and plans to do some work in the area before returning here.

If the present weather holds, the Beaver Islander is scheduled to make its first trip Friday, according to Lawrence McDonough, business manager for the boat company.

Winners Named In Jelly Bean Jumble

Carol Ormsby and Ron DeMichele were the grand prize winners in the Jelly Bean Jumble Contest held by the Charlevoix Courier in conjunction with local merchants.

Their names were drawn Saturday for the two Easter hams given away by the Courier.

People who correctly guessed the number of jelly beans in the jars displayed at the following local businesses were: Sarah Nartker, Dahlquist; Tom Bach, Frank's Flowers; Jean Genet, DeKoside Pharmacy; Cindy Russell, Reusch Jewelry; Carol Wolf, Leisure Time; Joan Coyne, Lieberman's; Marsha Trimmer, Kit Carson Lumber; Judy Mabee, Wharfside Market; Joan Hanchard, First State Bank; Kim Novotny, Clothing Company; Reid McVay, Oleson's Variety; David Russell, Kentucky Fried Chicken; Brenda Currier, County Seat General Store; and Pam Stangis, Kadens Emporium.

I can't believe that the City Fathers are really serious about wanting to trade a very valuable piece of lakefront property for an old garage. They must be out of their collective minds. If they complete this stinking deal, it will be the biggest rip-off since Watergate. At the very least, the taxpayers should have a chance to vote on this giveaway.

Golf Course Closed Despite Warm Weather

The unseasonably warm weather has sprouted a crop of golfers on the Charlevoix Municipal Golf Course, according to city officials. Golfers are asked to stay off the links until the land has a chance to dry up. Premature use of the course may ruin the greens and the summer golfing season.

Stiff Competition Predicted For Summer Jobs for Youth

By PAULA HOLMES

Jobs for youth in Northern Michigan are going to be few and far between this summer, according to officials working with various employment agencies.

"Competition for jobs this summer is going to be pretty stiff," Duane Cox, manager of the local branch of the Michigan Employment Security Commission, said, "especially with the high unemployment in the area."

"And there's a big push on right now to get older workers in positions, too," he added.

But there is hope for the teenager looking for work, according to Alton Shipstead of the Northwest Michigan Manpower Consortium located in Traverse City.

The 10-county consortium has received $500,000 to put youth to work for cities, counties and schools during the summer.

"This program will start in June and will put about 500 kids to work in the 10-county area," Shipstead said. "The program will be run by the Traverse Bay Area Intermediate School District for disadvantaged youth."

A disadvantaged youth is described as a person whose family's income falls below the poverty level, Shipstead said.

Shipstead suggested youth looking for jobs apply to the Department of Natural Resources and the U.S. Forest Service for positions with the Youth Conservation Corps.

Cox added that the Michigan Department of State Highways and Transportation might have summer openings for teenagers, too. The MESC branch manager - also suggested youth scour the want ad sections of newspapers where businesses need service stations and fast food establishments were likely to advertise summer positions.

Shipstead said that many programs were in the works to help provide additional funding for summer employment for youth. The manpower consortium director said he expected to receive additional funds through the youth bill part of the economic stimulus package recently approved by the U.S. Congress for the creation of summer jobs for teenagers, but he was not sure how much money would be appropriated.

The consortium director said the CETA (Community Development Block Grant) funds were also expected to be increased under the economic stimulus package.

Gov. William Milliken has also recommended in his budget for Fiscal Year 1977-78, that a $10 million appropriation for a youth employment program be established. The program, which is not geared to summer employment, would provide occupational skills and training for a career in the private sector.

Presently, most federal funds provide youth training for positions in the public sector.

Shipstead said he welcomes all the programs aimed at youth.

"The problem with youth unemployment is that the longer you have it, the less likely the student is to get work experience, so that by the time he or she is 20 or 25 you've lost them as far as a job is concerned," he pointed out.

"In individual cases, I think it is much harder for a kid to get a job," he continued. "Employers would rather hire an established adult who is going to be around for a while."

Shipstead said the high minimum wage was also a factor in youth unemployment.

"With the minimum wage so high, employers don't want to hire youth," he said. "At that rate they can automate and then they don't have to hire anyone."

The manpower consortium director added that youth unemployment wasn't as bad in this part of the state as it was in some places.

"The rate is about 50 percent in the Detroit area," he said.

Char-Em Board Learns

Teacher Training Program Successful

By PAULA HOLMES

Teachers helping teachers is the purpose of the one-year-old Teacher Development Program at the Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District. Char-Em Board of Education members learned Monday night.

Janel Mercer, director of the program, explained its operation during the board members' regular meeting.

"Higher education never completely prepares a teacher for what they will meet in the classroom," Mrs. Mercer explained. "Some teachers will have problems with curriculum or with student behavior."

"Also teachers are always searching for new things to try in their classrooms," the teacher trainer continued. "We try to help them find these things."

Mrs. Mercer and Sherry Skelton, a teacher trainer from Boyne City, have set up a series of three-day inservice workshops for teachers with current goals in education in mind at St. Francis School in Petoskey.

The workshop touches on individualized and personalized instruction and also discusses materials.

"We have the teachers experience the different methods of teaching the same as a child would," Mrs. Mercer told the board members.

The teachers move through five or six distinctly different classroom settings that show different ways of managing teacher-student interaction and student-student interaction.

"We plan to do for teachers what we ask teachers to do for pupils," she added.

James Shepard, intermediate superintendent, said the program had been very well received.

Can't Believe Land Swap

It's really hard to believe that the City would sell Round Lake frontage and lose control of such limited land to gain an old building on a side street. A lease to the boat company would give them the same security that ownership would give. We individual citizens would not be used as it appears we are being led. I do hope the council and mayor has foresight enough to see what the future will be to our community with such rash action as they are considering. Surely, Charlevoix the Beautiful should mean more to them than the plan they are contemplating. Thank you.

More On Land Swap

I can't believe that the City Fathers are really serious about wanting to trade a very valuable piece of lakefront property for an old garage. They must be out of their collective minds. Tired, Run-Down Condition

The pace of today's world, with its constant stresses and demands, is producing a generation of "tired people."

Whether individuals are able to maintain the pace, depends on the condition of the nervous system.

Vital nerve energy, flowing from the brain through the spinal column, maintains the peak efficiency of the human machine.

That tired, run-down feeling can develop when anything happens to interfere with the flow of vital nerve energy to the organs, glands and muscles, anything which interferes with the alignment of the spine or creates pressure on the nerves can interrupt or retard the flow of vital nerve energy.

The result fatigue.

The chiropractor, using scientific instruments, locates the areas of nerve pressure. With gentle, skillful hands he makes skillful adjustments which realigns the spine, relieves tensions and pressures, and allows nature to restore the body to health.

With the nervous system properly tuned, the tired run-down feeling disappears and pep, energy and ambition return.

Playing Games Thriving Business for Arcade Owner

By PAULA HOLMES

He lives in a world of noise and flashing lights. Bells are always ringing, lights are always flashing, and wooden balls are always cracking together for Ray Menzel.

Menzel makes his living playing games and operating them. He is the owner of Underground Amusements in Boyne City, one of the first arcades to be established in this area.

He says his friends sometimes call him the "Pinball Wizard" and he admits his love for the game, which is like playing soccer by manipulating miniature men on wooden sticks, was one of the underlying reasons for "starting his business."

"I like football and pool," the 24-year-old said smiling. "And I like people, too."

"With this business I can see a lot of people and play some football and pool, too," he added.

Menzel said he got the idea for starting an arcade when he was looking for something different to do.

"I was tired of working in a factory," he explained. "I had thought about going into appliances and then I got this idea."

So he set to work convincing people that an arcade was a good, solid business and in November finally got his start.

"Arcades have always been around, but in a smaller degree like in bars and restaurants where you will have one or two machines," he pointed out.

Menzel's business consists of 22 machines including pinball, air hockey, football, pool tables and picture screen games. He also operates a small snack bar for thirsty and hungry customers.

In spite of the popularity of the song "Pinball Wizard" by The Who, Menzel said that the mechanical game does not attract as many people as football and pool.

"With pinball, if you've played one game, you've played them all," the arcade owner pointed out. "Pool and foosball are more competitive, more interesting."

In fact, Menzel's customers have found foosball and pool as competitive that he has set up leagues which play tournaments every Sunday.

People of all ages show up for the tournaments and during other days of the week. Some stop in after school or work for a few games to unwind before they go home, Menzel said. Others come in for recreation on the weekends.

"I've had children as little as four years-old come in and play pinball," he said. "They can flip the flippers and play pretty well."

"One of the oldest people that comes in is a 68-year-old man who brings his wife and comes in to play pool," Menzel said. But the average age of his customers falls in the 18 to 20-year-old group.

"As far as the business is concerned, I call it an amusement center, but it does keep the kids out of trouble," the arcade owner pointed out. "It gives them something to do and keeps them off the street."

And Menzel tries to make the arcade a good place for kids to come. The walls are painted half way up and then papered with an attractive striped design. Placed strategically around the arcade are posters of such teenage idols as Elton John, the original Pinball Wizard, Farrah Fawcett-Majors and the Fonz. The lighting is not too dark and not too bright.

Also decorating the walls are such sayings as: "Great people talk about ideas. Average people talk about things. Little people talk about people," and "Try nothing. Do nothing. Be nothing."

"The sayings are just ones that I remembered that I liked," Menzel said smiling sheepishly. "I thought they would be good for the kids." Also posted on the walls are the rules of the arcade: "No alcohol, drugs, abusive language or horseplay on the premises," the sign admonishes.

But in spite of his efforts to make the arcade a reputable place, Menzel said it is still the first place the police come whenever something happens in town.

"Any time anything happens in town, they zero in on here," Menzel said. "They think this is a dope den or something and it's not like that at all."

RAY MENZEL, owner of Underground Amusements, takes aim before making this shot during a game of pool. Menzel operates the arcade in Boyne City, but still finds time for a few games of pool and foosball.

Council Approved Rate Increases At Brookside, St. Mary's Cemeteries

Rate increases were recently approved for the Brookside and St. Mary's cemeteries by the Charlevoix Common Council.

Sexton Charles Clifford and the Cemetery Committee recommended increasing the rates so that the cemetery could pay for its own perpetual care charge because of an agreement with the family that donated the land for the cemeteries.

Last year the cemetery had about $9,000 in revenues and ran on a budget of about $30,000.

The resolution governing the cemetery rates will become effective May 1. The new rates increased the cost of a riverbank plot, single burial, to $140, and a riverbank lot, five burials, to $600. All other plots will cost $90 and lots will cost $350. Prices for nonresidents for lots and plots are double.

The prices for grave openings and monuments foundations were also increased. A list of prices and regulations can be obtained from the sexton.

To Match Union Increase Nonunion City Employees Get Pay Raise

The wages of nonunion city employees were recently given a boost by the Charlevoix Common Council.

The common council settled earlier with the Communications Workers of America in a one-year contract granting a 39-cent an hour increase for the union employees and a 6-cent per hour increase in payment to a retirement program.

The city clerk's salary was set at $11,122 a year and the city treasurer's salary was set at $10,143 a year.

A Change in the System May Spark More Interest in Elections

It was too bad that only 128 people participated in last week's city election.

The voters can't really be blamed for the poor turnout, it is hard to get up the enthusiasm to go to the polls when there aren't any contested races on the ballot.

But laws are laws and the election had to be held to insure our freedom of expression and our right to select the people who are running our city government.

And it is OUR city government, if we choose to participate in it. Unfortunately, the city could not muster enough people that were interested in participating in government to have a choice on the ballot.

We are not criticizing the candidates that did run. We think it is admirable that they would agree to hold second and third terms in very trying positions. But we are criticizing an attitude that seems to be prevalent everywhere — an attitude of let the other guy do it.

Operating the City of Charlevoix and making decisions about sewers, roads and zoning—decisions that often are found intolerable by neighbors, friends and others — can be trying and difficult. It is easy to see why we are so willing to let the other guy do it.

But the point is, our system of governing is one of the people, by the people and for the people. The key word is people — we all of us are responsible for city government.

Support Cancer Society During its Drive

April is Cancer Month and soon members of the Charlevoix County Unit of the American Cancer Society will be busy participating in many fundraising activities throughout the county.

Cancer is a disease that has touched or will touch almost everyone in this nation. It is estimated the disease will strike in approximately two of three families. During the 1970s, there will be an estimated 3.5 million cancer deaths, 6.5 million new cancer cases and more than 10 million people under medical care for cancer.

According to researchers of every six people who get cancer, two will be saved and four will die. But of the four who will die, one might have been saved with earlier diagnosis and prompt treatment.

The other three of the four will die in this nation. It is estimated the disease will strike in approximately two of three families. During the 1970s, there will be an estimated 3.5 million cancer deaths, 6.5 million new cancer cases and more than 10 million people under medical care for cancer.

Help the cancer society help us. Give, so that research can continue and so that the educational efforts may continue.

Help wipe out cancer in your lifetime.

Last week the Consumer Product Safety Commission (CPSC) ordered boutiques and department stores across the country to remove from their shelves all children's sleepwear treated with the fire retardant Tris.

Government sleuths fear that the chemical may cause cancer in youngsters who wear such garments.

Which is all well and good. If Tris might cause health problems, it should be bootied out, along with the PCP's, the PBB's, the IRS's and all of the other noxious agents that have made life a nightmare for Americans for too long. To compare its action against Tris, the CPSC cited the results of laboratory tests using animals, which is one of the reasons why there is such an awful credibility gap between the federal government and the people.

You and I can readily understand how the government might use little creatures to test the effects of such chemicals that are easily ingested. You simply add a dash of whatever it is you are testing to their daily ration of rat-pellets, or whatever it is they are eating.

If the animal comes down with warts and a bad cough, you had better stop the experiment, or you are going to have a lot of angry animals on your hands.

But how in the world do you get a white rat or a guinea pig to dress up in a nightgown or a pair of Doctor Dentons before going to bed? This is what bothers me.

And we're not just talking about one white rat or one guinea pig, mind you. These tests sometimes involve hundreds of animals with widely assorted preferences in sleepwear.

In order to conduct experiments of this sort, the CPSC would have had to hire a battalion of dressmakers to cut and sew little nightgowns and P.J.'s for their animal friends. Of course, they could have purchased old clothes and treated them with Tris but I imagine they wanted at least a modicum of

After 6 P.M.

The average driver doesn't care what type of engine is in his car. That's not important. The only important question to consider when buying a new car is: Who sings to it?

Recently I described the anguish I suffered trying to dim the lights on my new Oldsmobile. I kept stomping my foot on the car floor where the dimmer button is supposed to be, but nothing happened. I finally had to stop at a bar and learn from a tankhouse player that the dimmer is hidden just below the steering wheel, disguised as a turn-signal switch.

Several readers responded emphatically. Bill Small, for instance, admitted he'd owned a new Olds for almost two months and didn't know how to dim the lights until he read my column on the subject.

"I have read your column for many years and this is the first time I ever got anything out of it," he said.

Small is an itinerant printer currently snuggling ink in the shoe of Mich. I have known him for many years and I'm not surprised he could drive a car for 2 months without locating the dimmer control. He is usually not allowed out after dark.

similarity between the garments to lend an aura of scientific respectability to the tests.

Furthermore, an equal number of angry gorillas or useless research assistants would have had to be on hand every night to get the little creatures ready for bed. If you have ever tried to dress a dog or cat in your grand-mother's best camisole you have some idea of what I am talking about.

Something in the savage breast abhors the finery that we take for granted, and little arms and legs flail mercilessly until the last button is buttoned, the last hook is hooked, the last snap is snapped and the last zipper is zipped. And then the creature isn't exactly happy until he struggles free from his bonds and knocks over a lamp.

The whole undertaking has an Alice-in-Wonderland quality to it that makes one wonder at the validity of the tests, if in fact they were conducted at all.

However, I do not believe that parents should worry unduly if their children have been supplied with sleepwear treated with Tris.

In the first place, very little Tris actually survives the first washing, largely mitigating the severity of the problem. In the second place, I have come to the conclusion that very few children actually put on bonafide sleepwear to go to bed.

Any parent will tell you it is next to impossible to get a kid to remove yesterday's underwear, much less retire in any garment designed specifically for sleeping. One of daddy's old T-shirts? Fine. Mama's slip? Super! Grandma's camisole with all the hules in it? Right-on! In the buff? Ho-ho-ho!

But honesty-to-goodness sleepwear? Forget it.

So I think the parents of America have little to be concerned about. The chances are good that their offspring never came in contact with Tris. I'm only sorry I cannot offer the same encouragement to the parents of white rats and guinea pigs.

Need Stricter Controls

On People with Power

Resident Urges

Dear Editor:

Weapons do not start wars. National populations do not start wars. National political and military leaders do start wars and they draft their populations to fight those wars.

National political and military leaders seek the most destructive weapons that science can provide for them, and they now have thousands of nuclear bombs, some bombs are more than one thousand times more powerful than the two nuclear bombs that destroyed two medium sized Japanese cities, and they possess various alternative means for delivering them.

Negotiating on whether a nation should have a nuclear weapon overkill of two times or four times is ridiculous. Any demand to possess any of these weapons automatically makes those national leaders suspect.

The past record of national political and military leaders in achieving the professed objectives of their wars is poor. The record of responsibility of national political and military leaders for the consequences of their wars is worse.

The national political and military leaders of the world are far more expendable than their populations are.

The President Carter position that human rights transcend the authority of national governments is encouraging only if it is translated into a functioning practical principle. How about, any national political or military leader that would subject any people to the consequences of modern warfare automatically forfeits his right to power before he can exercise it. More specifically, no subordinate shall obey any verbal command in use nuclear weapons and any written order that is not obeyed but will be used as evidence to prosecute the responsible leader for attempted warcrimes.

Some Expressions

Really Get Me

There are three four-word expressions that give me stomach cramps.

One is, "One Size Fits All," and the other is, "Have a good day," and the other is, "You can't miss it."

The latter usually accompanies a 15 minute set of directions, a fold-out map, and a series of list of emergency numbers on how to get to someone's house.

I have been my experience that most people know exactly where they live. They just don't know how to get there. Most of them overtrain you for the trip.

Who among you has not received directions from Mister Rogers, who talks to you like you are the poster child for Mental Health Week.

He begins by asking, "Do you know where you are now?"

When assured you are at home he says, "Fine, go to the end of your driveway and turn right. That is the hand you want with, and then go to the traffic light at the end of your street. When it turns green, signal for a left turn. That is the hand nearest the window and get into the middle lane so other cars can pass as you will be going slow," etc.

There's a Charles Kuralt breed who not only give you directions on how to get to their house but throw in just enough history to confuse you. "You'll be turning left at the little church on the corner, which incidentally had half of its structure burnt to the ground in 1936. Don't confuse this with the structure on the previous corner that also burnt. That was rebuilt in '43, but the architecture on that one is strictly Doric, so watch it!"

The directions I love are the ones given by a Rowan and Martin team where a man is on one phone and his wife is on the extension and together they tell you how to get there.

"I'd take the freeway and exit at ramp 34," says the husband. "Are you crazy? They'll be driving half the night," his wife interrupts. "Take Northern all the way to the Gooney Golf Course, then make a right."

"That road is torn up," says the husband, "and they'll have to back-track. Come to think of it, they could use Miller Road and that way when they miss the turn-off, there's an all-night station open with a phone to call us for directions."

Our house is a doozie in find. The street changes names three times on you, comes to three forks and doesn't go all the way through, but if you turn where the road narrows, bear right, and go two doors past the barking dog, you can't miss it.

Who Sings to Your Car?

That's what the auto experts say, and I wouldn't argue the point. There is as much difference between a $5,000 Ford and a $5,000 Chevrolet as there is between a 54-cent gallon of Texaco gasoline and a 54-cent gallon of Shell.

That is why no one got very upset about buying an Olds containing a Chevy engine. My old dealer claims he hasn't received one complaint. Not even about truth-in-labeling, which obviously doesn't apply to the auto industry where the operative label is "car."

A Chicago newsman started the fuss about Chevy engines in Oldsmobiles. He was reaching for Watergate, claiming neither GM dealers nor customers knew exactly what was under their hoods. Everyone shrugged. There were no front-page headlines.

For automotive news to interest the public, it must titillate. As when John DeLoach marries a movie actress, or Henry Ford fires Bunkie Knudsen.

You probably remember the marvelous job done by the media when Knudsen got the heave-ho as Ford president. The most poignant moment came when Knudsen had to admit he

Meet Charlevoix

...Clarence King

As warm weather draws near (we hope), it becomes time to think about plowing the fields or planting that backyard garden.

One place many people go for supplies and equipment is the Charlevoix Coop Company on Stover Road. This week the Courier talked with Clarence King about the coop and spring planting.

COURIER: Who does the coop serve?

KING: Anyone can buy supplies and equipment here. I'm sure there has been an increase in the number of backyard gardeners coming in to purchase supplies at the coop?

COURIER: I'm sure there has been an increase. I don't have any statistics, but I know we are getting a lot more in the area selling them salt and other chloride mixtures for snow removal and to keep their lawns from freezing.

COURIER: When did you first notice the increase in gardeners coming in?

KING: I think they first started coming in in 1974 and 1975. Gardening started out at first as a way to make ends meet, but I think it has turned into a hobby now for many people.

COURIER: What types of things does the coop handle for gardeners?

KING: We sell a lot of garden supplies—fertilizers, and starter sets for cabbages and tomatoes. Those will come in about May. We also sell rosebushes, flower seeds and flower bulbs.

COURIER: Are the residents of this area interested in flowers?

KING: Oh, yes. As soon as we had the rack up with the flower seeds in it, the ladies were here looking at them. I think everyone has rubin fever after such a long winter and they are anxious to see a little green.

COURIER: What should gardeners be doing right now in preparation for spring?

KING: Those who want to save money by making their own starter sets should plant tomatoes, cabbage, melons and cucumbers. We have pots and starting soils for those who want to try it. These plants can't safely be put out until the middle of May so there will be enough time to get them started.

COURIER: What else should people be doing?

KING: It is a good time to put fertilizer and grass seed on the lawn. Up until we had this last snow we had sold a lot of seed and fertilizer. You can put the fertilizer on as soon as the snow melts and then it will be ready to work when it warms up.

COURIER: What are area farmers doing to get ready for spring planting?

KING: The farmers are mostly getting their supplies and getting ready to get in the fields. If it hadn't snowed, I think they would have been in the fields this week. Fortunately the frost did not go too deep this winter because of the early heavy snow and then it melted away so nicely that many of them could have been in the fields.

COURIER: What is one of the first crops area farmers will put in?

KING: Most of them will put oats in first.

COURIER: What are some of the other crops grown in this area?

KING: The biggest agricultural industry in this county is the dairy operations. They have the largest operations and have put the most money into their business. There are also still many farmers who have livestock unlike the farmers in the southern part of the state who have mostly gone to cash crops. Then I would say that corn is the largest crop up here with oats, some wheat, one or two navy bean growers and some truck gardens.

COURIER: Has agriculture changed much up here?

KING: I've lived a lot of places in the state and I'm amazed at the changes that have been made in agriculture up here. They used to raise a lot of navy beans, sugar beets, cucumbers for pickles and potatoes for seed. Also the farmers raised a lot of crops for seed supply such as radishes.

COURIER: How does the coop operate?

KING: The organization, which was incorporated in 1919, is owned by the farmer members. Each member is a common stockholder. The membership elects a board of directors that is responsible for the operation of the coop. As manager of the coop, I answer to the board. Robert Stuve is the president of the board this year.

COURIER: When did you come to Charlevoix?

KING: I came here in November, 1974, after managing a petroleum coop in the Coldwater area. I have worked for the Farm Bureau for about 17 years.

COURIER: Do you farm?

KING: My background is farming, but I've been out of it since 1955. My wife, Leola, and I have a backyard garden at our home on Mason Street. My wife gardens all year around.

Study Shows Population Increasing in Charlevoix

The number of cars in operation in Charlevoix County continues to increase, year by year, with no saturation point in sight.

As a result, the car density in the local area, as well as the number of two-car and three-car families is now greater than ever.

The latest published figures show that, as of the beginning of this year, there were more passenger cars locally, per 100 families, than in most communities.

On January 1st there were some 8,750 cars registered in the area. This was equivalent to 151 for every 100 local families.

It was a bigger ratio than was found generally throughout the United States, where the average was 146 per 100 families. In the East North Central States, it was 149.

Despite the slowdown in auto production and sales during the recent recession, the number of cars on the nation's streets and highways is considerably greater than five years ago.

The records show that auto registrations in the United States are now over 105,625,000, which is 15,844,000 more than in 1971. It represents an increase of 8,700 cars per day over the five-year period.

The additional millions of cars, combined with more trucks, buses and other vehicles, is causing traffic jams and bumper-to-bumper driving, especially in urban areas. No relief is in view in the struggle for traveling and parking space.

Much of the increase in car ownership is attributed to the progressive movement of families from heavily populated urban communities to the suburbs, where the automobile is the basic means of transportation.

The growing proportion of late model cars in and around Charlevoix County is a reflection of the rising purchasing power in the area. As family income rises, so does the number of cars in operation.

The net result is that auto registrations locally have increased from 7,220 to 8,750 in the last five years.

With more cars in use, more money is being spent annually for maintenance. The expenditures in the past year in local service stations for gas, oil, repairs and incidentals came to more than $879,000, as compared with the total that was spent five years earlier, 2,374,000.

Complaints Steady to Sheriff

Complaints continue to come in at a steady rate the weekly report issued by the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department reveals.

Twelve of the 32 complaints received during the week of March 31-April 7 remain open while 20 have been closed.

A breakdown of the 32 show seven felony, four misdemeanor, two domestic, 16 other and three unfounded.

One felony arrest was made during the week and three inmates booked.

There were nine accidents including seven property damage and two personal injury accidents. Five traffic arrests were made, four warnings issued and five general assists.

Sixteen dog complaints were received; four warnings issued and four dogs destroyed.

Twenty civil cases were processed; 135 meals served; 469 telephone calls received and two doors on business places found open.

Some Help With Rents May be Available to Seniors

There's some good news and some bad news for senior citizens looking for help with their rents.

In a letter to Shirley Roloff, spokesman for senior citizens facing a 25 percent rent hike at the Charlevoix Apartments on May Street, Congressman Philip Ruppe, R-Houghton, said the local housing commission could apply for the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) or to the Michigan State Housing Development Authority for Section 8 existing housing rent subsidies.

"This type of funding is extremely limited at the present time, and there is no way of predicting that the chance for approval might be," Ruppe said in the letter. "If approved, however, these federal monies could be used to make up the difference between the reduced rents paid by low income tenants and the fair market rents established for your area by HUD."

Mrs. Roloff wrote to Rep. Ruppe for help following the announcement by Frank Vaydick, co-owner of the Charlevoix Apartments, that rents in the 40-unit complex would have to be increased. At that time many of the tenants in the building believed it was a low income housing unit and that their rents would not be increased unless their income was increased.

Mrs. Roloff said that about one-half of the tenants in the building were living on social security payments amounting to less than $4,000 a year. She said the rent increase would force the tenants to give up buying food and clothing if they continued to live in the apartment complex.

Since the announcement of the rent hike, six tenants have found new housing and others are still looking, Mrs. Roloff said.

Rep. Ruppe pointed out in his letter that the Charlevoix Apartments were constructed with funds from the Farmers Home Administration rural rental housing loan program, which allows developers to make a limited profit of 8 1/2 percent on the initial investment. Ruppe said some FHA officials question whether even the new increased rents are high enough to maintain an acceptable level of profit.

"I was disappointed (with Ruppe's letter)," Mrs. Roloff said. "I thought there was something we could do."

Mrs. Roloff said she is still going to try and help the senior citizens by establishing discounts at various stores for local senior citizens.

CHARLEVOIX APARTMENTS on May Street has been the home of many senior citizens. But due to a recent rent increase several of the residents have been forced to find new homes in a rent level they can afford on their social security income.

Meeting Slated April 26 On HUD, FHA Housing Funds

Representatives from Farmers Home Administration (FHA), the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD), and the Michigan State Housing Development Authority will attend a workshop in Traverse City to explain their programs on single family, multiple family and low income and elderly housing assistance.

The Northwest Michigan Authority will attend a workshop in Traverse City to explain their programs on single family, multiple family and low income and elderly housing assistance.

Regional Commission developed the program in response to requests from local housing interest groups, planning commissions, and county councils on the aging. The meeting will begin at 9:30 a.m. April 26 at All Faiths Chapel in Traverse City.

Anyone with questions about the workshop may call the Northwest Commission office at 946-5922.

Planning Commission's New Format Successful During First Meeting

The Charlevoix County Planning Commission held the first in a series of meetings it has planned at locations throughout the county last week and met with success.

More than 30 people attended the meeting held at the East Jordan City Hall to discuss the proposed master plan for the city with the county planning commissioners, city planning commissioners, city council members and other interested people.

"We had a good exchange of ideas," William Mercer, county planner and zoning administrator said. "People were enthusiastic about the meeting and the plan."

In an attempt to educate county residents about planning and zoning procedures and to become more involved in coordinating planning and zoning throughout the county, the planning commissioners decided to embark on a work program.

The outreach project is a part of the work program and it involves meeting in various township and city halls to discuss specific zoning and planning problems with the residents of that area.

In addition to meeting with the various planning commissions, the county body has also undertaken a revision of its bylaws. Under the bylaws, which have been approved for publication and vote, the commission will expand its size from nine to eleven members.

The next planning commission meeting will be held May 5 in Hudson Township to discuss zoning and planning problems in that and Boyne Valley Township.

Keep the soil moist, especially if temperatures are high. Dry soil and high temperatures shorten the blooming period.

After bloom, continue to feed and water the plant. The leaves make food for the bulb to use to make next year's flowers. After the foliage turns yellow, stop watering and store the pot in a cool, dark place.

After the danger of frost is past, knock the soil ball loose from its pot and plant it in a well-drained, shady area in the garden. The bulb should be covered with 6-8 inches of soil. It will rest until midsummer, when it will send up new growing shoots. If fall frost is late, the plant may bloom again.

To rebloom this year's lily for Easter next year, dig the bulb in the fall and place it in a plastic bag filled with peat moss. Refrigerate it for at least six weeks before potting.

Potting bulbs for forcing in a porous, well-drained soil mix. When you pot depends on when you want the plants to flower. Potting around Thanksgiving gives blooms around mid-February. For flowers in mid-March, pot around New Year's. If you want blossoms in mid-April, wait until Feb. 1 to pot the bulbs. When shoots begin to appear, place the pot in a brightly lit spot and fertilize with a liquid nitrogen fertilizer according to label directions. Fertilize again in 10 days. Continue to fertilize every 10 days with a complete houseplant fertilizer.

PLANT OF THE WEEK:
Easter Lily
Easter lilies (Lilium longiflorum) are usually thrown away after they have finished blooming. With proper care and a little luck, however, you can enjoy your Easter lily for years.

Horticulturists at Michigan State University say you can prolong the bloom of your potted Easter lily by keeping it in a cool, draft-free spot that gets lots of bright light. Night temperatures of around 60 degrees F are best.

Applications Available For Flouride Clinic

"Look ma, no cavities!" is a familiar phrase these days. And one way to make sure children's teeth are protected is to have them participate in the summer fluoride program. Applications are still being accepted for the Charlevoix area program. Preschool children, ages 3 and 4, second, fifth and eighth graders who live outside the city or children who have recently moved to Charlevoix from an area without fluoride water are urged to enroll in the program. Fluoride treatments are a painless, inexpensive method of protecting children's teeth, according to the organizers of the program. After completing the treatment, studies have shown tooth decay is reduced as much as 40 percent.

The clinic, held by the Michigan Department of Public Health, is slated for June. It will consist of four visits where the children's teeth are cleaned and a fluoride solution is applied to the teeth at a cost of $5.

Applications for the clinic can be obtained at the local school offices, or by contacting Sandy White, 347-5669, or Cheryl Hoffman, 347-4578. The applications should be returned as soon as possible due to the limited number of openings. Scheduling of the clinic dates will begin shortly.

The Common Council of the City of Charlevoix met on the above date and time with Mayor Hansen presiding. Aldermen present: Whitley, Wallace, Morris, and Plumm, Absent: Aldermen Wood and Erber.

The Minutes of the March 21, 1977 regular meeting were approved as presented in writing and as recorded in the Council Minutes Book.

Enter Alderman Wood. Mrs. Sharon Oestreik appeared before Council in regard to a small building being erected on the Gordon Neff property adjacent to the Oestreik property. Mrs. Oestreik contends the proposed storage shed will be used as the workshop and objects to the building being used for this purpose on the grounds that it will be a highly flammable operation. Council informed Mrs. Oestreik the building is in violation of the Zoning Ordinance and that Mr. Neff would be advised to stop work on the building until he has the proper variance.

The following Resolution was ordered and moved for its adoption by Alderman Plumm, supported by Alderman Wood.

Puts Bite on Fast Food

Day of Deli Dawns

Across the land, the day of the deli has dawned. "No longer is the delicatessen an overrated oasis found only in the big cities of America, specifically in neighborhoods with a Jewish heritage."

Today the delicatessen is crowding in on the territory of the fast-food franchise, where the cheeseburger with everything, pancakes and ketchup syrup, and the fried chicken finger feast have tried to stave off the nation's taste buds.

Nobody knows how many delis there are in the United States, except that there are never enough for the wandering deli hot pastriani, garlic bagels, chopped chicken livers, Polish salami, kosher dills, cheesecake, pickled herring, potato salad, lox, cream cheese, and Russian dressing.

Nostalgic Heartburn
The heartburn of nostalgia for good delicatessens may be increasingly harder to work up as these unique eateries multiply around the country, sometimes with such regional accents as the ethnic fare as George grits, Texas chili, and California egg rolls.

One man's downtown delicatessen may be another's mere cold cuts counter in the suburban supermarket. But whatever, the essential eye-appealing edibles are usually abounding from low calorie counts and low cholesterol levels. So are the customers.

According to New York newspaper Israel Shinker: "A persistent legend has it that Columbus was a Jew-and a persistent joke is that he never settled in the New World simply because he could not find a Jewish delicatessen here." Times have changed, Jews were among America's earliest settlers, but the great waves of immigrants from Russia, Romania, Poland, and Austria-Hungary in the 35 to 40 years before the first World War brought the food tastes that soon were flowering in the tiny ethnic groceries of Eastern U.S. cities.

These delicatessens soon developed their own flavor, markedly different from the various sausage shops of the Old World.

Big Bite of Heaven
The American delicatessen became renowned not only for its savory delicacies to take home, but as a place to feast the eye and delight the nose-and to stretch the mouth, perhaps around a three-necked hot pastriani on pumpernickel stuffed with sauerkraut and dripping with

Cancer Society Seeks Help in Reaching Goal

In 1977, more than 600,000 people will discover they have cancer.

The knowledge that they have this dreaded disease will be a frightening and unsettling experience for them and many will not know where to turn for help in obtaining special hospital equipment or financial assistance for purchasing expensive drugs. Help is available to cancer victims in this country through the Charlevoix County Unit of the American Cancer Society. Last year more than 22 people received help in paying for drugs to treat their diseases and numerous others took advantage of the hospital beds and wheelchairs available from the loan closet run jointly by the cancer society and the Easter Seal Society, according to Patty Muma, chairman of the Cancer Crusade. "Each year after our Crusade, we try to buy something new for the loan closet," Mrs. Muma explained. "Last year we bought another wheelchair and a hospital bed."

The cancer society helps residents of Charlevoix County who are healthy, too. Four nursing students are awarded a three-year renewable scholarship each year.

Also through the public education committee, the cancer society makes films and pamphlets available to any organization or school that is interested in learning more about the topic. Mrs. Muma said residents interested in help or information should contact her.

She also added that now the cancer society needs the help of county residents. The kickoff for the Cancer Crusade, a door-to-door drive for funds, will be at 1 p.m. Tuesday, April 19, at the Grey Gables. "Our goal is $13,000," Mrs. Muma said. "For the last five years we have collected about $9,000 from our door-to-door campaign. This year we are going to try some new events to raise the rest of the money."

A bake sale will be held April 29 and 30 at Oleson's. Also at Oleson's will be a drawing for $100 worth of groceries. Tickets for the drawing will be sold May 6 and 7 at the grocery store. On May 13, a drawing will be held for a 13 inch color television set at the First State Bank. Tickets for this drawing will be sold for the next four weeks and may be obtained from Mrs. Muma, at the First State Bank, Muma's Sunoco and Helene's Beauty Shop.

The students have not been forgotten by the cancer society, either. Each student will receive an Iron-on T-shirt decal from the "Send a Mouse to College" program. The cost of research mice has been hit by inflation and students are being asked to donate money toward purchasing more research mice for college studies.

More than 375 residents in the county have volunteered their time to support the cancer society drive," Mrs. Muma said. "We all have to work together to reach our goal," she added. "We need everyone's help."

AREA STUDENTS will receive T-shirt iron-on decals from the Charlevoix County Unit of the American Cancer Society during the Cancer Crusade. Students are being asked to help send mice to college for research purposes. Here Phillip Muma poses with one of the decals on his T-shirt.

Don't Spill the Beans, But...

Charlevoix Namesake Being Phased Out

By PAULA HOLMES
It may sound like a hill of beans to you, but Charlevoix County is losing one of its namesakes.

The Charlevoix red kidney bean is in peril of being phased out of production in favor of a harder bean called Montcalm, according to Frank Sneathen, the only producer of Charlevoix bean seeds in the county.

"The Charlevoix bean is being replaced by the Montcalm bean among growers because it is more blight resistant," Sneathen explained. "If the canneries like the Montcalm bean better, too, then they'll eventually do away with the Charlevoix bean completely."

Sneathen, who grows foundation and certified Charlevoix bean seeds, is not only the last farmer to be growing the bean in the county, but he was also one of the first. About 12 years ago, Sneathen was approached by County Extension Agent Ed Hehrman to experiment with a new variety of kidney bean produced by Michigan State University agricultural scientists.

"MSU had this new variety of dark red kidney bean and they needed a place to try it out," Hehrman recalled. "They got it in the bean. Since the bean seed grew so well in this area it came to be called the Charlevoix kidney bean. And that's how Charlevoix is going to lose its namesake bean."

"Plant breeders are continually working to improve their products and to make them more resistant to disease," Hehrman explained. "It's just natural that one would be phased out as another harder bean is discovered."

Sneathen said that when the Charlevoix bean was first introduced it was one of the most blight-resistant kidney beans around. He said as a seed grower he had very good luck with the bean.

His seeds were then sent to farmers in the Alpena-Rogers City area where the Charlevoix kidney beans were grown to sell for commercial use by canneries.

"I can remember years when we had up to 50 semi-trailers of Charlevoix red kidney beans going out from the Northern Michigan Bean Growers Association offices in that area," Sneathen said. But in recent years with the blight and the drought, bean growing has faded as well in the county. Hehrman said that mutations of the blight virus are now attacking the once resistant Charlevoix bean and plant breeders have come up with the more blight-resistant Montcalm bean.

FRANK SNEATHEN holds a handful of the Charlevoix kidney beans he raised last year. The Charlevoix bean is being phased out in favor of the harder Montcalm kidney bean.

Board Approves Pay Hikes

The Charlevoix Board of Education had a change of heart Monday regarding administrators' contracts and salaries.

By a four to two vote the Board approved a one-year extension on present contracts and a salary increase for the 1977-78 school year. After earlier turning increases down, the board approved the extension of the contracts of the three principals, one assistant principal and the business manager for one year with salary increases of 5 percent.

Max Novak, chairman of the board who had objected to the extension of the contract because the school district will be hiring a new superintendent, again voiced his objection and, with Claire Martin, voted nay on the issues. Charles Elzinga, Ardet Wieland, Kenneth Boss and Robert Cook cast yes votes. Don Brown had left the meeting earlier because of illness.

In other action, the board approved bids for a school bus chassis and body. The bid of Zamboni Equipment Inc., of Elmira, being the lowest bid, was accepted. The bid was in the amount of $9,149 for an International with a 392 engine, 2-speed axle and fiberglass hood. Other bids were submitted by Fochtmann Chevrolet-Buick, $9,428; Erber Auto, $11,135 and Bryce Barnes, Inc., $10,414.

At the same time, a bid of $8,600 for a bluebird body submitted by the Great Lakes Coach Sales Co. was accepted. This bid, while being the highest, was accepted because it is the only body that will fit the existing hoist garage area at the bus garage. The school district presently has three other buses with Blue Bird bodies. The Carpenter, Superior and Thomas bus bodies are too long for existing facilities and Ward and Wayne bodies were rejected for other reasons. The bids ranged from $7,626 to $8,600.

The board voted to request a renewal of the operating millage for the Charlevoix Public Library in the amount of 5 1/4 mills for five years. The present millage for this purpose which expires this year is 5 mill; however, only

Senate Committee Considering Bill To Lower PBB Level

By PEG OHLIE
The four-year-old drama concerning the contamination of Michigan farm animals with polybrominated biphenyl (PBB) is now being played in the courts and in the State Legislature.

The House has passed a bill requiring the Director of the Department of Agriculture to take reasonable steps to identify and locate livestock or poultry which is contaminated with more than .02 parts per million of PBB as determined by chemical analysis of fat tissue samples.

A similar bill is now in the Senate Committee on Agriculture and Consumer Affairs. The Senate has held one public hearing on the bill and another one is scheduled for 10 a.m. this Thursday in the Law Building Auditorium in Lansing.

The Federal Department of Agriculture presently allows up to 3 parts of PBB per million in food products, but proponents of the bill say this is an arbitrary guide based on what is known to date of a similar chemical and very harmful substance called PCB (polychlorinated biphenyl).

They believe that chances should not be taken with the public health when it is possible that small amounts of PBB could prove to be harmful in the long run.

P.S.

I am just reading that they are raising the Ferry rates again to .75 cents a crossing. I wonder if it's possible to have the ferry records made a public record in the paper. Have them publish them. It sounds like there is a lot of mismanagement somehow. If they're coming off with a deficit the size they state, I just cannot understand that an attraction like this would lose money. It attracts a lot of people in the area on vacation to make the crossing, since it's rather unique. So how can it be operating so in the red?

Residents with anything to say about the proposed trade of the municipal dock on Round Lake for the former Erber garage on Clinton, should circle Monday, May 9, on their calendars.

That's the day Mayor Edward P. Hansen has called for a public hearing on the swap at 8 p.m. in council chambers.

Hansen said the trade suggested by the Heaver Island Boat Co. which has leased space at the city dock as long as anyone can remember. However, he said the company anticipates buying a third vessel and would like to nail down a Charlevoix landing site for all time to come before it does.

The mayor said ownership of the property would make the boat company less vulnerable to a competitive "skinning operation", and would put the property on the tax rolls.

Furthermore, Hansen said the city could make good use of the Erber garage for storage and as public safety building.

Area Population Stops Getting Younger

The Charlevoix County population has been undergoing a change in the last few years. It has stopped getting younger.

Back in 1960, for every person in the area who was older than 30.2 years, there was one who was younger.

This was the median age locally, as determined by the 1960 Census.

Also, it was found, the median age was moving downward, year by year, which meant that the population as a whole was getting younger. It continued in that direction until 1971, when it reached its lowest point, 27.8 years.

From then on, the age level has been on the rise. According to the latest figures from the Department of Commerce, the median age in Charlevoix County is now approximately 28.6 years.

217 children in her lifetime, down from 2.4 in 1970.

The Population Reference Bureau attributes this, in part, "to a realization by younger married couples that rearing children in this complicated and expensive world present big problems."

The general effect of the lower birth rate shows up in the Census Bureau's so-called "fertility ratio," which refers to the number of children under age five per 1,000 women of child-bearing age.

In Charlevoix County, in 1960, this ratio was 561. It is now estimated at 385.

Compared with many sections of the country, some of which have a ratio of no more than 100, the local figure continues to be relatively high. Elsewhere in the United States, the average is 337. It is 350 in the State of Michigan.

Insurance

You may want chiropractic care for that "on-the-job" injury or for the after-effects of that accident, but you are afraid that your insurance doesn't cover it.

Better check with the authorities who handle your insurance or the officials of the company for which you work. You may be overlooking some vital aspects of the accident and injury coverage to which you are entitled.

Many states now include chiropractic care as a part of the workmen's compensation program. Chiropractic care is available if you desire it. In a great many cases.

Some insurance companies (better check on your own) recognize chiropractic under basic plans and under major medical and comprehensive medical insurance plans.

Acceptance of the science of chiropractic of official government agencies and by major insurance companies is on the increase, proving to an even greater degree that the science is gaining wider recognition by producing results. Another Health and Life Article from the Office of:

Commissioners Get Report on Grandvue Activities

Richard Tilden, director of the Charlevoix County Department of Social Services, presented the operating statement of the Grandvue Medical Care Facility and the financial report for 1976 for the Department of Social Services at the Tuesday meeting of the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners.

The revenues received during 1976 for the operation of the Grandvue Medical Care Facility totaled $724,696 from such sources as Medicare, Medicaid and from private patients.

Expenditures came to $744,038 which includes the expenses of the entire operation, from administration, patient care, food, housekeeping and other related expenses. This leaves a net operating cost of $19,432 which is paid by the county.

The cost per diem is $28.27 and the net cost to the county is 75 cents per day.

The financial report for the Department of Social Services showed a balance on hand of $23,201 on Dec. 31, 1976. Total funds available for the year totaled $862,566 and expenditures $839,305, included in these figures are the operation of the Grandvue Medical Care Facility.

The lifestyle of Charlevoix County residents is at a relatively high level, judging from their mounting acquisition of major household appliances and other expensive equipment.

With the exception of the last few years, a period marked by recession, high inflation and unemployment, which caused consumers to reduce their spending for non-essentials, local families have been adding to their possessions with each passing year.

Their purchases of stereos, air conditioners, dishwashers, color TV sets, food freezers, cars and other high-cost articles have been on a steady increase since 1969.

What made such expenditures possible was the income gains chalked up by most families in the area.

The rate at which they have been adding to their ownership of automobiles and appliances is calculated from data compiled by the Department of Commerce and others.

With regard to home freights, for example, the figures indicate that approximately 47 percent of the households in Charlevoix County now have them. In 1960 they were to be found in only 30 percent of the homes.

Air conditioners, also, are in much more general use locally. About 24 percent of the housing units in the area are equipped with them, as compared with 2 percent previously.

Similarly, many more local homes have color TV sets. Over 35 percent of them now do, as against 88 percent formerly.

Ownership of cars has also gone up considerably. Some 92 percent of the families in the area have one or more. In 1960, 89 percent had cars.

The extent to which these four kinds of equipment are to be found in an area is taken as an indicator of its standard of living generally.

If 100 percent of the families in a community had every one of them, its index rating would be the maximum possible, 400.

Charlevoix County has an index of 258, well above its 1960 figure of 209.

It compares with a United States rating of 240 and with 255 in the North Central States.

Not surprisingly, ownership of expensive equipment is directly related to earnings. The index for families with incomes over $25,000 is nearly twice that for families in the $10,000 to $15,000 bracket.

Not surprisingly, ownership of expensive equipment is directly related to earnings. The index for families with incomes over $25,000 is nearly twice that for families in the $10,000 to $15,000 bracket.

Ownership of cars has also gone up considerably. Some 92 percent of the families in the area have one or more. In 1960, 89 percent had cars.

The extent to which these four kinds of equipment are to be found in an area is taken as an indicator of its standard of living generally.

If 100 percent of the families in a community had every one of them, its index rating would be the maximum possible, 400.

City Council Should Look At Land Deal

Beaver Island Boat Company's proposal to swap land in downtown Charlevoix for permanent ownership of the docks it now uses deserves serious consideration.

At a recent city council meeting, the local boat firm proposed that it trade its garage on Mason Street for a deed from the city to the land where it currently docks its boats in Round Lake.

Mayor Edward Hansen said the company is planning to expand its business by adding a third boat and that it wanted something more than a 20-year lease to the docking facilities.

Council members have apparently fallen into two camps over the issue. Most of the members feel the swap would benefit both the city and the boat company. Some of the other members indicate it is not a good idea for the city to give up any property it owns on the waterfront.

Strongest in their support of the move have been Aldermen Joe Morris and Jeannine Wallace.

Both have indicated they couldn't see any better use for the property than what the city has right now with the boat company. Both have been quick to point out that everyone in the city benefits from having the boat company in Charlevoix.

Supporting both Morris and Wallace's feelings is the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce, who at a recent meeting endorsed the proposed swap pending approval of the entire board of directors.

Chamber directors indicated concern over the boat company's attempt to add boat service from Petoskey to the island. They said the additional service could possibly affect the business now in Charlevoix.

Other retailers have said the traffic brought into Charlevoix by the Beaver Island Boat Company has been a boon to their businesses.

City Administrator Allen Sandberg said the boat company is planning to expand its services and wants something a little more definite than the current lease it has for the waterfront property.

"The swap matches up with the city's need for additional parking space and room for its public safety vehicles," Sandberg explained in a recent interview.

Although many are supporting the move there is some justification for moving cautiously in making such a transaction.

Alderman Ray Wood argued that the same thing could be accomplished if the city would extend the lease to the property for the boat company guaranteeing that it could dock there. Then he said the city could agree to purchase the boat company garage with yearly payments the same as the rent the city would be receiving from the boat company for the dock space.

After watching the Alice Street controversy evolve last year, we can anticipate that this type of swap will probably become an emotional issue.

During the many heated debates, many residents indicated the city had too little access to Round Lake to be giving away or selling any of the property it now has.

While this is a valid concern, we suggest the city council also look at the long range benefits of having the Beaver Island port in Charlevoix as well as the additional downtown parking it could receive from the swap.

The proposed land swap is an issue that we feel deserves serious consideration by the Charlevoix City Council for the future of the city.

Suddenly last Tuesday night there was no more to do.

After two years of trudging down to the city hall once a week to argue the merits of the ward system and sort out the differences between licenses and franchises, the work of the Charlevoix Charter Commission appears about over.

And if you had told me two years ago that our task would continue into the spring of 1977, I wouldn't have believed you. Why there's nothing to be done here, the city charter! All the groundwork has been done by other cities over the years. There are even model city charters to choose from. All you have to do is collect a lot of charters and take the best from each.

The problem, of course, is that Charlevoix isn't just any city. It is located on one of the most attractive pieces of real estate in North America. And down like a yoyo, depending on the season, although it is located hundreds of miles from the closest metropolitan areas, the population by and large is more sophisticated, more urbanized, than the population of industrial cities to the south.

And all of this posed a heavy burden for the Charter Commission.

Take, for example, the ward system. When the nine of us—Richard Feichtman, Charles Duerr, Lawrence Feichtman, Ralph Shuler, Jay Oliver, Jeff Porter, John Schroeder, Don Landke and myself—were elected two years ago, I for one was convinced that the ward system had gotten a bad press through the years, thanks to the high-handed ward bosses of the big cities. Furthermore, as far as I could see, the ward had done more to divide the people of Charlevoix than it was worth as a tool in the election process. The division continues around the council table, where too often members are expected to think in terms of their own wards rather than the city as a whole in deciding questions that affect us all.

I wanted members of the city council elected at large and let the chips fall where they may. And I believe this feeling had wide support around the commission table.

Then slowly things began to change. One of our first visitors was Mayor Edward P. Hansen, a long-time student of city government. We asked him for his views on the ward system. Hansen didn't exactly come out and say it was wrong to abolish the ward system, but he had nice things to say about wards as the basic units of city government. I think he used the words "grass roots." This is where it all begins. The ward is, in fact, where a fellow can feel at home.

So we took another look at wards and made it a point to attend ward conventions in Petoskey, one of the few cities in the Midwest that has really put the ward to work. Each convention, regardless of size, had the air of a town meeting about it. Councilmen were called upon to account for their actions during the past year; the city budget was discussed on an informal, neighborhood level; plans for the coming year were discussed. It was beautiful.

The Charter Commissioners returned to Charlevoix convinced that Ed Hansen was right. The ward had to be preserved, but it also had to be put to work.

So when you get your copy of Charlevoix's proposed city charter, turn to Section IV and learn about the ward conventions. They'll be held the second Monday of September every year. You'll get together with your friends and neighbors to sound out your councilmen on the job they have been doing. You'll be able to ask questions and pick fights, if you like.

Then you'll be asked to select two candidates to represent your ward in the November election. Only one will be elected for a two-year term—but we want to make sure there is a choice on every ballot.

The only major difference under the proposed ward system will be that candidates nominated by each ward will be elected by the city as a whole. I'll have a voice in who gets elected from the second and third wards, as well as from my own first ward. Charlevoix will have all of the advantages of the ward system, plus the advantages of at-large elections. Think about it. I don't think you'll find it anywhere else in America. Each ward will still have two voices on the council, but members will be elected by the city as a whole.

The system should induce each ward to put its best into the fray—not just the rubber-stampers or the "yes" men.

Letter to the editor

Garden Club Opposes City Land Swap

Dear Editor,

We, the interested members of the Charlevoix Garden Club, feel it is our duty to voice our opinions about the forthcoming issue of the "Land Swap" the Charlevoix City Council is now considering passing.

Many of your readers are interested people of the Charlevoix area and we feel this issue should be more prominently brought to their attention before it is too late.

How can the Mayor and some of the City Council members even consider selling water frontage on Round Lake of which we have so little? A city as beautiful as ours should not be lost to the future for a mercenary trade that doesn't please the majority of the citizens of Charlevoix.

The loss of quaintness and beauty over the past six or seven years has been washed on us by people who have come into this area to make dollars at our expense, leaving the ruins for us to live with forever. This should be a lesson to the officials who represent us.

This is not to downgrade the Council, who are concerned citizens contributing their time to help us, but there are times when more concentrated forward thinking should be done by all of us and concerted effort made toward greater beautification and improvement of our city and not make gifts at the expense of the townspeople.

The Beaver Island Boat Company is and has been a part of us, as are the people of Beaver Island. Most of them are our neighbors, our friends and possibly relatives, not people uninterested in Charlevoix and here for a brief time.

Let's all put our thinking caps on, make forward strides to keep Charlevoix the Beautiful-AUTIFUL, so that our children can enjoy it as we have in the past and present.

Sincerely yours,
Charlevoix Garden Club

My kids said the other day, "Mom, good news! We just signed you up for the intramural tennis team at the recreational center."

"I don't like to play tennis," I grumbled.

"Of course you do. Every red-blooded American mother likes to play tennis. Besides, it's good for you. You sit around and watch too much television and you don't get enough exercise."

"How often do I have to practice?"

"My goodness, that's no attitude," said my son. "Tennis is fun. You're going to love it. And you're going to win. And we're going to sit in the stands and root for you and who knows, you might even get your name in the paper. Would you like that?"

I shrugged and flipped channels. Practices were a drag. I went every afternoon to the center and played my heart out... running to strengthen my legs... hitting 50 million balls and dropping into bed each night exhausted.

One night as I was doing off, my son came in and put a rubber ball in my hand and said, "Keep squeezing. It's good for the old serving arm."

The first match was last week. My kids took me aside for last-minute instructions. "Okay now, Mom, just relax. This woman serves like she's swatting flies. Just watch her at the net. Don't let her draw you in. Hang back and keep it steady. Play your Evert game. Just keep slugging 'em in. Got that? Now, we don't want you to get uplight or anything but if you win, there's that water message shower you've had your eye on. Go get 'em."

The stands were full of vicious kids, all with their eyes on their own mothers, shouting instructions, calling the line judges names, and screaming, "That turkey foot-faulted. Didn't anyone see her?"

On the way home they tried to comfort me. "Hey, it's just a championship game where you either bring honor to your team or humiliate them. Don't sweat it. You almost gave your best. Of course in that second set, you stood there like you were waiting for a city bus..."

"And you could have gotten that corner shot if you'd had your racket back in time, but what the heck... Hey, your opponent had 30 pounds on you. We're just going to have to get you into better shape. We'll get it all together before next week's match. Besides, you had a wonderful time, didn't you?"

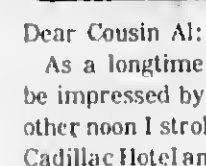

I woke up in a cold sweat. What a lousy dream. It was a dream, wasn't it? What am I saying? Of course it was. I mean, how many people push their mothers into organized sports?

Or children for that matter. (Copyright 1977 Field Enterprises, Inc.)

Rotary, City-style

If it Fitz

Dear Cousin Al:

As a longtime Rotarian, you should be impressed by your city cousin. The other noon I strolled over to the Detroit Cadillac Hotel and made a speech to the Detroit Rotary Club.

How about that? I worked at the newspaper in Lapeer for 25 years and your Rotary Club never once asked me to talk. You had me as a guest listener a few times through the years, and every time I sat on a wet napkin.

Al, I'll bet you won't believe that Detroit Rotarians never play the wet-napkin trick. Several of them gave me a strange look when they saw me feeling the seat behind me before I sat down. How Lapeer Rotarians did paper napkins into their water glasses and then slip the soggy napkins under unsuspecting fannies, thus sending hundreds of businessmen back to work with wet pants.

The Detroit Rotarians got a big laugh out of that. They said they'd never heard of wet napkins and I said I was surprised to hear it. I said the next thing they'd probably try to tell me they didn't have a cow tied to a parking meter in front of the hotel. This got me another strange look.

I explained that Lapeer Rotary always raises funds by raffling a cow. I told them how you guys bring the cow downtown every day and make people buy tickets on if they don't want to be stampeded. I told them how the people who win the cow never know what to do with it. I said I'd give it back to Rotary and you guys have been raffling off the same cow every year for 20 years.

The big-city Rotarians laughed as hard about the cow as they did about the napkin. Al, they claimed they had never raffled off a cow, but I saw a couple of those slickers taking notes with their silver pencils. I would like to see a Rotary cow tied up at the entrance to our new Plaza Hotel which has dozens of saloons in it but not one spittoon.

You probably think I'm getting stuck up because I talked to Detroit Rotary but I said no when you asked me to talk at your Farm Bureau meeting. But I wasn't lying when I said it makes my stomach hurt to make speeches. Al, the thing is, my boss asked me to speak to the Rotarians and there are some things worse than a stomach ache. Such as unemployment.

But that's enough Rotary stuff. I want to tell you about somewhere else I went.

I took Pat to the Allie Theatre in Greektown. That was really something. You know me and actors. Al, I'd watch a show in a sewer. So I wasn't bothered when I discovered they don't call the theatre an attic just to lend some ersatz rustic charm, the way an Indian and call a chrome motel a dude ranch. The place really is an attic, two lights up.

There is no stage, just an open space on one side of the attic with around 99 funeral parlor chairs set in front of it. The room was decorated by a barn burner. I wasn't the only guy there wearing a tie, and the man next to me wasn't the only guy wearing pitails. I told Pat it would take some real magic to turn that attic into a theatre. And real magic is just what we got, Al. When the lights went out to talk at your Farm Bureau meeting. But I wasn't lying when I said it makes my stomach hurt to make speeches. Al, the thing is, my boss asked me to speak to the Rotarians and there are some things worse than a stomach ache. Such as unemployment.

The play is a proven winner — "The Effect of Gamma Rays on Man-in-the-Moon Marigolds." Joanne Woodward was in the movie, remember? You wouldn't recognize the names of the Greektown stars, but you have got to see them, Al.

I know you didn't enjoy it a few weeks ago when I took you to the Fisher. You thought it was too ritzy, especially when the woman in front of us draped her fur coat over the back of her seat and you saw that the coat label was on upside down to make it easier for you to read how rich she was.

You won't be rich to death at the Allie, Al. In fact, when we entered the theatre, Stella was coming out. Remember, I wrote about her last December. Stella is the little Greek lady who wears corollas' stripes, sleeps in hallways at the police station, and screams a lot.

Stella was locked up a few days after I wrote about her, and several readers blamed me. So I was glad to see her back on the street again. She will never wear her stripes upside down so you can tell she is a corporal even when she's standing on her head.

That's all for now, Al. Just remember I walked to Greektown and I walked to Rotary. I've been in downtown Detroit for a year now and I haven't been mugged yet. I haven't even been mugged at by a Rotary cow.

Meet Charlevoix

Ken Swan is an artist employed by the Char-Em Intermediate School District under the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA). Here he tells about some of his projects and what they mean to the community.

COURIER: How does it happen that a school district has a full-time artist?

SWAN: About two years ago, CETA, in cooperation with the State, started a "Community Artists Program" to help schools save money. They hired artists to work with school districts to produce their own graphics, with the artists being paid by CETA funds.

COURIER: Besides costs, what are the advantages of school districts producing their own graphics?

SWAN: We can design programs that are specific to our students. For instance, as the result of a speech survey made by Char-Em, we have designed a Speech Improvement Program which is used in all kindergartens in the district. It is a 15-page booklet featuring a sound-object correlation. Students often come out of kindergarten reading at the grade 2 level. It might have cost $1,500 to purchase such a program. We produced it for under $500. Another advantage is that we can design programs for specifically handicapped children under our jurisdiction.

COURIER: What other kind of graphic work do you do for the school district?

SWAN: We design all communications for in-services; we design all graphics for class room use; we do portraits for all kinds of programs; we design materials for vocational and career education. One program is on "Shaping Hot Metals". We made several trips to the East Jordan Iron Works and sketched the process in their shops. The program is now being used in high school shop classes. Another thing we do is design such things as logos and insignia for public service organizations, for which the organization is billed by the Intermediate School District.

This gives handicapped children vocational training and provides physical therapy.

COURIER: We understand you are doing some television work. What's that all about?

SWAN: Yes. We are producing some commercials for Columbia Broadcasting affiliates. It is a national project called "Project Childfind". Statistics show that one of 10 children has some kind of special need. "Project Childfind" is an effort to locate preschool children with symptoms.

There is a Watts number to call and a specialist will contact the parents. Locally, the commercials will be shown on TV 9, 10, 7, 4 and 6, 14.

COURIER: What kinds of special needs should people look for?

SWAN: Needs that have to do with physical impairments, mental retardation, problems with vision or hearing, delayed speech and language development, emotional impairment, and unusual social behavior.

COURIER: Why should these needs be detected early?

SWAN: Because special help now, before school, can mean the difference between treating an established handicap or preventing one.

COURIER: Do all the Intermediate School Districts in the state have similar programs?

SWAN: No, when the project started there were 46 participating districts. There are only three left. Our graphics department has been mentioned in Michigan Manpower Magazine, recognizing us for our work in graphic design, for which we received an award.

COURIER: Do you consider yourself a graphic artist?

SWAN: I consider myself a children's artist. My top priority is helping children I believe that "one picture is worth a 1,000 words."

COURIER: Do you have an education in art?

SWAN: I studied at Central Michigan University for a short period of time but I am really self-taught.

COURIER: What did you do before you took this job?

SWAN: I made and sold my own works to several companies.

COURIER: Do you live in Charlevoix?

SWAN: Yes, my family — wife Carol, daughter Kimberly who is right and son three who is trouble — live at Windmill Farm. Carol is employed by Radio Station WVOY.

KEN SWAN, artist for the Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District, works on some of his projects.

DAVID WILKERSON, author of 'The Cross and the Switchblade'.

THIS CLOSER VIEW shows some of the things Artist Swan has in his works for the intermediate school district.

Age Affects Type of Job Youth Can Get

If you're a teenager getting ready to look for a job, did you know your age can affect what kinds of jobs you can get?

A free factbook from the Department of Labor spells out job limitations for 14 through 17-year-olds. For your free copy of "The Young Worker," just send a postcard to the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 5345, Pueblo, Colorado 81009.

If you're 14 or 15, you can do service jobs like pumping gas, bagging groceries, or bussing dishes — with these restrictions: You can't work more than 3 hours on a school day, or 18 hours in a school week. If it's a non-school day, you can only work 8 hours, and no more than 40 hours in a non-school week. And, you aren't allowed to work before 7 a.m. or after 7 p.m. except from June 1 to Labor Day — then the evening hours are extended till 9 p.m.

You might wonder what that means for paper boys or girls. That's a different story. You can deliver newspapers, net or perform in television, movies, radio, and theatrical productions, or work for your parents in a nonfarm family business at any age.

When you're 16, you are eligible for any job except those the Secretary of Labor declares hazardous.

And when you're 18, you can be hired for any job at any time, for unlimited hours, whether or not the work is hazardous.

Most workers whose employment is covered under the Fair Labor Standards Act must be paid at least minimum wage and in most cases — extra pay for overtime. Exceptions are full-time students and apprentices who may be paid less than the minimum under special certificates issued by the Department of Labor.

Farm jobs are different. A 14-year-old can be employed in any non-hazardous farm job outside of school hours. And a 16-year-old can be employed at any time in any farm job, whether the work is hazardous or not.

"The Young Worker" (free) is one of over 200 selected Federal consumer publications listed in the Spring edition of the catalog, "Consumer Information." The catalog is published quarterly by the Consumer Information Center of the General Services Administration. You can get a free copy by sending a postcard to the Consumer Information Center, Pueblo, Colorado 81009.

Safeguarding Computers Is A-Battle of Wits for Companies

If you see a man kissing a computer, it means nothing of the following: (a) he's a banker (b) you're bonded (c) he's happy, or (d) it's his job.

The last is correct.

In the escalating war of wits between crooks, spies, and security men, a Japanese company has produced a computer that registers lip prints. It won't work until the operator presses his or her lips against it, and then only if the kiss suits something in the computer's memory bank.

Most computers are more easily turned on, and that can cost money.

Thief and Espionage

Since computers only follow orders, crooked programmers can lead them astray. The electronics marvels have added and obeyed theft and espionage, fraud and extortion, and military and industrial espionage.

Authorities believe computer crime ranges as high as $300 million a year. But that's just an estimate, since some computerized chicanery is undetectable. One man related to computerized a bank checking accounts programmed the computer to ignore overdrafts on his own account.

He spent regularly and deposited rarely, while the bank made good on his checks. Similarly, a man engaged to adjust a computer for one of the nation's largest credit card companies adjusted it to enter no charges against his card number. He then went on an extended travel and shopping spree.

Both thieves were nabbed, not through good detective work, but because the computers later broke down and their accounts were processed by sharp-eyed human bookkeepers.

Pennies Add Up

Another breakdown undid the programmer for a mutual funds company. He instructed the computer to take all fractions of cents that appeared when it posted interest investors' shares each month and add them to his account. It cost him a little when stocks fell, but he more than made up for it when they rose.

New York City was the site of the largest computer fraud yet uncovered. An insurance firm fed information on hundreds of phony policies into its computer. The company then used the faked assets to obtain large bank loans.

4-H Achievement Day Slated Saturday

Exhibits, a style show and the premiere appearance of the 4-H clowns will highlight the annual 4-H Spring Achievement Day Saturday.

The achievement day, which brings all county 4-H members together, will begin at the Charlevoix High School cafeteria at 8 a.m. for the set up of the exhibits.

Evaluators will talk with exhibitors about their projects from 9 a.m. to noon. At noon the ribbons will be placed on the projects. The exhibits will be open to the public from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m.

Bob Bellairs, 4-H program assistant, said the primary purpose of the 4-H project is not the project itself, but the learning and skills developed in completing the project.

"That is why we use evaluators in our morning program, instead of judges," Bellairs said. "In this way, the 4-H members are judged not in relation to what another member has accomplished, but according to the member's own progress in completing his or her task."

"We really believe in this system because everybody emerges with a winning attitude," Bellairs added. "Too often, in straight judging, one gifted child can make losers out of the other children."

Exhibits will include projects from such interest areas as: arts and crafts, indoor gardening, horses, knitting, crocheting, wood working, cooking, photography, Christmas decorations, sewing, leathercraft and canning.

The style show will begin at 7:30 p.m. in the high school gym. Modeling is a barn dance setting will be about 40 girls and five boys in the young, junior and senior categories. Comedy skits and the premier appearance of the 4-H clowns will add to the evening program.

3 High School Girls Selected for Girls State

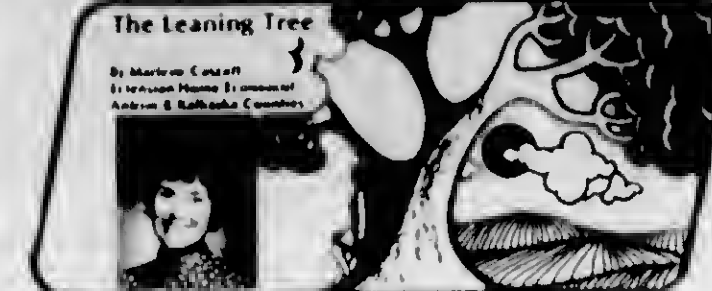

Three Charlevoix High School girls, all juniors, have been named to attend the 37th annual American Legion Auxiliary Girls State to be held on the campus of Olivet College June 11 through June 19.

The purpose of Girls State is to emphasize the importance of government in modern life, to stimulate a deep and lasting interest in government and to enlarge the understanding of government, according to Mrs. Ray Wood, Girls State chairperson. The American Legion Auxiliary and the Lions Club will sponsor the attendance of the annual Girls State, Mrs. Wood added.

The trio named to attend the event are: Kim Lehman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Lehman; Dana McKenzie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Max Hosmer; Chris Pidek, daughter of John Pidek and Lisa Wiener, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hans Wiener.

All are enrolled in history, math and English classes. Their other interests vary from girls sports to cheerleading and clubs.

SPIDER PLANT

ASTRICKING DISPLAY
As the spring sunshine filters through my windows I become acutely aware of how dirty they are. At the same time when I'm thinking about the house cleaning chores ahead I also become aware of some revival needs of my house plants. They're asking for repotting, trimming, fertilizing and other special attention. One of my favorites is a spider plant I acquired a couple years ago. It's easy to see how it got its name. It does resemble a many-legged spider.

However, the appeal of the spider plant (Chlorophytum) is not in its resemblance to its namesake but in its habit of forming plantlets on long flowering stalks that originate in the center of the rosette of leaves. A plant with cascades of plantlets suspended around it makes a striking hanging display.

The two popular theories on what triggers the parent plant to propagate itself are the short days, long nights theory and the underpotting theory. According to the first theory, the spider plant sends out shoots and makes plantlets when it is exposed to short days—8-10 hours of sunlight—and long nights. The fact that some spider plants make baby plants only when they get 16-hour days casts some doubt on the short-days theory.

According to the underpotting school of thought, spider plants send out plantlets only when they are rootbound. The best advice horticulturists at Michigan State University can give is to observe your plants and try to figure out what works for them.

Normal care for the spider plant means giving it a spot near a sunny window where it will get temperatures around 70 degrees F during the day and 50-55 degrees at night. Pot in a well drained potting mix that provides good drainage, and water whenever the soil surface starts to dry. Fertilize every two months with a standard houseplant fertilizer according to label directions.

Browning of the leaf tips is the most common problem of spider plants. This may occur because the soil or the air around the plant is too dry, because the plant has received too much fertilizer or too little light, because the soil is acid, or because the water used on it contains a lot of fluoride. To avoid the problem in the future, water more often, increase the humidity around the plant, fertilize less often, increase the light, add lime to the soil, or water with distilled or rain water.

Spider plants do not usually suffer from insect infestations, but spider mites can be a problem. Propagate by potting up the plantlets. Cut them from the parent plant after they have developed their own rooting systems.

Rochelle Hansen Marries Richard Klein Saturday

St. Mary's church was the scene Saturday afternoon of the wedding of Rochelle C. Hansen of Charlevoix and Richard A. Klein of Potosky.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Edward P. Hansen of Charlevoix and Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Klein of Saginaw.

The Rev. R. Dale Magoon officiated at the double ring service in the presence of 100 guests. Mrs. Brendan LaBlance, at the organ, played a program of traditional music and sang "Sunrise, Sunset" and "Nadia's Theme."

The bride, given in marriage by her father, chose an empire gown of polyester chiffon for her wedding. Venice lace trimmed the bodice of the gown and the tiered veil fell from a Juliet cap. Her bridal bouquet was of yellow roses.

Heidi Hansen was her sister's maid of honor and another sister, Gayle Hansen, her bridesmaid. They wore identical gowns, in yellow and light blue, respectively, fashioned with empire waists, short puffed sleeves and full length skirts. Each carried bouquets of mums to match their gowns.

Jack Stultz assisted the bridegroom as best man. Kirt Lyons, was groomsmen and James and Rick Klein, brothers of the bridegroom, seated the guests. All were from Saginaw.

Wedding guests were present from Chicago and several Michigan cities. (Photo by Mick Smith).

How can you tell if the person at your door is really a Michigan Bell Employee?

As you may have noticed, our employees do not wear uniforms. They dress in the way they think is most appropriate to get their jobs done. While this permits them to look like the individuals they really are, it really doesn't help you identify them as Bell employees. But, there is a way. Every Bell employee who comes to service your phone is required to carry a Michigan Bell identification card giving his or her name, photograph and signature. For your protection, ask to see this card before you admit them into your home. They'll be happy to show it to you.

Michigan Bell Employees—people who know what they're doing... and care about it.

Preventative Medicine Important In Animal Health Care, Too

Preventative medicine is important for the health of pets, too. And now is the time to begin thinking about protecting your dog, Dr. David Norton, Charlevoix veterinarian, said.

Heartworm season is approaching and it is time to have pets checked so that preventative medicine can be administered to the animals to prevent them from getting the disease, Dr. Norton said.

"We are seeing a significant number of cases of heartworms in this area," the veterinarian said. "It used to be that the disease was isolated in the southern states like Georgia and Florida, but now it is all over the country and it is definitely in Northern Michigan."

Norton said a blood test has been developed that can determine whether or not dogs have heartworms. "It is important to find out if the animals have heartworms before the preventive medicine is administered," Norton stressed. "If the animal does have heartworm and the medicine is given to them, it can result in the animal's death."

Norton said heartworms is a disease that is spread by mosquitoes. The insect picks up the heartworm larva from one animal and can transmit it to another one in the same manner that they transmit malaria between human beings. Heartworm season lasts from May 1 to December 1.

The reason the season lasts so long is that you have to medicate for 30 to 60 days past the last mosquito bite the animal might get," the veterinarian explained.

Norton said heartworms can be successfully treated if it can be found soon enough. By the time the animal starts showing the symptoms of the disease such as lifting easily, coughing and acting run down, it is too late.

The vet said the heartworm larva get in the bloodstream and finally settle in the heart where they grow up to 14 inches long. The worm wrap around the heart valves and causes the heart to malfunction.

Boys Track Team Looks Good, 12 Return

By FRANK MARTIN
"We had our first real workout on the track last Monday night and the kids looked real good!" Coach Presnell said of his Rayder track team which opened the 1977 season at Cheboygan Tuesday.
Presnell said he had 50 candidates out for the team including 12 lettermen from last season and a host of young enthusiastic newcomers who show great promise. "We have many slots to fill but I think we'll do alright. The boys have set high goals for themselves and they've been working hard," Presnell said of the team.
The team had been working outside until the most recent snowstorm that limited outdoor activity. The team did workout inside during the recent spring break.
Among the returnees are Ed Mann, sprinter and relay man; Wally Dreth, high jumper and sprinter; Matt Doan, hurdler and relay man; Ed Bourke, middle distance runner and relay; Tom Jones and Barry Potter, shot putters; Kip Crammon, high jumper; Nate Klooster and Steve Schuch, sprinters; Brian Williams, middle distance and mile relay and Kerry Speer, long jump and discus.
He also mentioned Gary

Freshman Brian Osterberg plays number four singles for the team. He also pairs with Bill Boe of Miami, Fla., to play number two doubles for Northwood Institute.
"Once Brian gets some tournament and match experience under his belt he should develop into a stronger player," his coach, Zane Colestock, said.

Artist Captures History in Paintings for Minnesota DNR

By FRANK MARTIN
"People who once were looking only to where they were going are now taking time to see where they are and are looking back to where they have been," Greg Wimmer, budding young artist, said.

"That's what makes my work so rewarding," Wimmer works as an artist for the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources. Two of his murals, both about 35 feet long, are located in state parks in the southwest part of the state around New Ulm. They depict the early history of the area.

"I never knew that combining history with painting could be so interesting," Wimmer said, explaining that he had always been a history buff so that researching the history of southwestern Minnesota for his art works turned out to be very enjoyable.

He explained that most people think of Minnesota as the land of lakes. However, the southern and western sections of the state are where the Great Plains begin and stretch across to the Rocky Mountains. The Great Plains are where the Indians held forth in the early days, clashing with the first white men who came to the area.

One of the scenes in the mural relates the story of the buffalo hunts prior to the days of the horse. The buffalo were stampeded over a mound or a bank along a river to their death after being hunted by an Indian brave who was fleet of foot and hopefully, could sidestep the thundering beasts. Others show the early battles with the white man as well as their way of life on the plains.

Wimmer has also traveled to the northern section of the state where he visited an abandoned iron mine and did drawings of it for a publication on the history of iron in the state.

Wimmer has done art work for many of the Minnesota DNR publications, most of which have related to environment and conservation. "These are the things I believe in so I really enjoy doing these sort of things," he commented.

Other pamphlets Wimmer has illustrated relate stories of the past. "I find this work very rewarding," he said. "If I can make people aware of the world around them, I feel I am doing something worthwhile."

THREE CHARLEVOIX students captured four fifth place ribbons in state competition in industrial arts recently. Dan Drewa, Steve Melke and Dave Sonnenberg display their projects and ribbons.

Three Win Awards at State Meet

Charlevoix High School Industrial Arts students captured four fifth place ribbons in state competition at the 49th annual Michigan Industrial Education Society fair at Saginaw last weekend their instructor James Jinsky, has announced.

One student, Dave Sonnenberg, won two of the four with his pictures, a copper tooled picture of roses and an aluminum tooled picture of birds. Dan Drewa also won a fifth in this category with his copper tooled picture of a partridge.

Steve Melke, a sophomore, won a fifth with his drawing of a sheet metal mechanical non. Only five ribbons were given for metal-tooled pictures. Charlevoix entries took three of the five. "This should speak very well for the work produced by these students," Jinsky said.

Citizens Discuss New School Site

By FRANK MARTIN
The feasibility of acquiring property as a future high school site was discussed at an open meeting Monday night.

Twenty-seven people, including Supt. James A. McKinney and five members of the Charlevoix Board of Education, attended the meeting at which Dawson Way, representing the owners of the property, explained the location of the property which is located on the South side of M-66, immediately west of Loch Creek.

He said there was approximately 66 acres in the tract being offered including 36 acres that are cleared. The remainder, located to the south of the property, is a swampy land though there are some high places in it.

Dawson said the church board was offering the property to the school because there are so few tracts of land available for a school site. He said the church was retaining a section that would give it access to the highway and that the only stipulations would be that the school agree to share the cost of a road into the property to the west and another to the east where the former owner had retained land along Loch Creek. This was part of the agreement when the church purchased the property from Edwin Gould.

Hillyard Schackford gave a soil analysis stating the land would lend itself to the needs of a school.

The estimated cost of the roads, the cost of extending gas lines to the site, whether it would be more practical to put down wells or extend city water lines and a sewer system were among the issues discussed.

Way said the church would offer the property to the school district for $55,000 and would keep the offer open until May 31.

Nack DeYoung asked if it wouldn't be more practical to consider the purchase of the Steffes property, a short distance outside the city limits where water and sewer would be more readily available. He added that the higher price being asked for this property would make it cheaper in the long run than developing property farther outside the city limits.

Dale Boss said the property being offered by the church, which has a ridge running east and west, would lend itself to solar heat. He said it would be possible to build the structure into the ridge, leaving a southern exposure which would allow utilization of solar heat. He added that many schools in Texas are being constructed in this manner.

No firm decisions were made. However, before the meeting was adjourned, a straw vote resulted in a 17-10 vote for the church property. The 10 votes were in favor of the Steffes property.

Max Novak, president of the Board of Education, who presided at the meeting, expressed disappointment that more people had not turned out for the meeting.

The students have been assigned such topics as General Sherman, abolitionists and Gettysburg. The information the students gather can be presented to their classmates in any form the students choose," Mrs. McNamara said. She expects to see such things as skits, reports and art work.

HAVE YOU TRIED CHIROPRACTIC?

Have you tried Chiropractic for your health problems? The day has come and gone when it is possible to say, "I've tried everything" unless Chiropractic was included. Chiropractors have a different approach to health—no drugs, no pills, no tranquilizers, nothing to swallow or rub on.

What is a Chiropractor? How does Chiropractic add years to your life and life to your years? How can Chiropractic get you well?

Dr. B.J. Palmer, developer of Chiropractic, stated this definition: "Chiropractic is a Philosophy, Science, and Art of things Natural, a system of adjusting the articulations of the spinal column, by hand only, for the correction and cause of disease." Doctors of Chiropractic look to the spine as the strength and support of the body. Chiropractors believe your body was made to be healthy. All it's life sickness and disease are the result of a lack of communication between the power house (brain) and the parts and organs of the body. That job, twist or turn you need no attention to could have forced a vertebra out of place cutting off the nerve supply to part of your body. Using gentle, skillful, spinal adjustments the Chiropractor returns the vertebra to its proper position allowing your body to function normally and naturally. Volunteer Week Set Aside to Honor Citizens

This week is National Volunteer Week, a week set aside to say "thank you" to those who give of their time and energy to help others. A 1974 Census Bureau study showed that 24 percent of Americans over the age of 13 were volunteers of one kind or another.

Older people are especially willing to give their skills and new-found time to serve their communities in many ways. Junior high school, high school, and college students find that volunteer service gives them a chance to explore career opportunities and to become involved in community affairs.

Many government agencies, including the Department of Social Services, use volunteers to provide the one-to-one contact that staff members can't provide, such as friends to youth in trouble, as friendly visitors to the homebound or to transport older people to community activities.

Ms. Suzanne Wickert, special services coordinator for the Charlevoix County Social Services Department, is always in need of volunteers. She may be reached at 547-4471.

More and more citizens are participating in public affairs.

Special Exercises Help Put Bounce in Step, Life

By PAULA HOLMES
"Walking should be a cheerful, joyful way of moving," the woman said softly reflecting on her words. "Walking should be like dancing through space. But we forget how to walk properly and we must relearn how to do it."

JANE SOOY discusses the type of exercises called Body Work. Mrs. Sooy advocates doing the exercises as a means of gaining vitality and health.

exercise mat.

"Even with my gump, I walk better than 90 percent of the people I see," she said bending toward the mat in preparation for a series of exercises.

For Jane Sooy of Charlevoix, a type of exercises called "Body Work" is the key to mental and physical health. The exercises, developed by Anne Hubbard of Chicago, also played a part in Mrs. Sooy's recovery from a paralysis that left her without the use of her legs seven years ago.

We all get thrown off into bad habits in our daily work," Mrs. Sooy explained. "The Body Work exercises give you a chance to come back to center. And they give you more vitality and energy."

Mrs. Sooy said the Hubbard exercises help a person work through his or her muscle and nerve centers making them work correctly and helping them to become strong enough to hold the body in the proper way.

If the exercises are done correctly, they can bring your muscles and body back into the right position."

"Just as it takes years of walking incorrectly to get thrown off, it takes a period of exercising before you return to the proper way of walking."

Mrs. Sooy has been using the exercises since she met Anne Hubbard seven years ago. She has been pleased with the progress she has made through using the exercises.

I was paralyzed from the waist down seven years ago," Mrs. Sooy said. "Before that I played quite a bit of tennis. Since then I haven't picked up a racket and lost summer."

Mrs. Sooy said both her husband and herself were remarkably good for not practicing. Her husband had always been the weakest point and it seemed further than ever.

I am blessed with good coordination, but I don't know how good your coordination is that doesn't make you a good tennis player," she said. "It seemed like through doing the exercises I could skip half of the thought process involved in playing the game because I was using my muscles correctly."

So impressed she was with her own results, Mrs. Sooy has been sharing her knowledge with other people in the Charlevoix area. She teaches the "Body Work" exercises in an upstairs studio in the Market Mall.

And teaching others to do the exercises ensures that she will be doing them on a regular basis, too.

"I have to do these exercises," Mrs. Sooy said. "And doing them at home alone is a drag. Also it's hard to feel that the exercises are important enough to do without answering the phone or doing the other things that need to be done."

And I am really motivated and have always been very active."

So she opened the studio last year to share her knowledge with other people in the area.

It's kind of a goal to strive for — teaching people how to center their bodies and walk with a bounce.

Walking should be a cheerful, joyful way of moving," she added a smile crossing her face.

Mrs. Sooy stressed that her approach to exercise is a slow method that builds up the person's strength.

I work slowly, building up as I work through the right channels," she said.

"Most people do some sort of calisthenics, but they don't get the benefit from them that they could."

We work slowly here doing a lot of floor work so that the spine is supported and we won't throw anything out.

You can do a tremendous amount for yourself with this work if you have some kind of problem.

Or you can just feel better.

Reibel Challenges SBA on Loan For Castle Farms Property on M-66

A trial in the suit brought by Arthur H. and Ervina Reibel against the SBA (Small Business Administration) will likely be held within 60 days following a pre-trial hearing here Thursday.

Current Judge William Brown of Traverse City conducted the pre-trial hearing in the suit which was filed in December 1974.

The original suit was against the SBA, the Charlevoix County State Bank and other parties. However, Judge Brown granted an accelerated judgment which dropped the bank from among the defendants. The other parties were released earlier. The Reibels are suing the SBA for allegedly improper foreclosing on their Castle Farm Properties located southeast of here on M-66.

Number of County Residents Receiving Pensions Increasing

The number of Charlevoix County residents who are receiving monthly retirement checks through Social Security continues to rise, according to the latest Government report.

It shows that some 3,575 persons in the local area, more than ever before, are now getting payments. Five years ago, by way of comparison, the total was 2,983.

The majority of the recipients are retired workers. The others include disabled workers, widows, children and other dependents.

The figures are attributed chiefly to amendments to the law, made from time to time by Congress, which have raised more people under coverage.

And the amount of money that is going to them is also increasing. With the payment scale now rigidly tied to rises in the cost of living, this year's lowest, which went into effect on July 1st, amounted to 6.4 percent.

That was because the Consumer Price Index rose to that extent between the first quarter of 1975 and the first quarter of 1976.

The findings, for the local area and for every other part of the United States, are contained in the annual report of the Social Security Administration.

Nationally, it shows, more than 29 million workers—or 9 out of every 10 in the labor force—have been brought into the program.

As for the beneficiaries, there are over 32 million. They are receiving approximately $10 billion a year.

In Charlevoix County, the average annual payment per recipient was $2,175 in the past year, well above the $1,276 paid in 1971.

This compares with $2,142 in

White Collar Jobs More Prevalent
What changes have taken place in the makeup of Charlevoix County's labor force in recent years? To what extent has automation caused a shifting in jobs? What is the distribution now, as between white collar and blue collar employment? Government figures show that the proportion of men and women in white collar occupations in the local area has been rising, year by year. At the present time, on the basis of data gathered for the country as a whole, the white collar ratio locally is about 8.2 percent higher than it was back in 1960. At that time, according to the census taken that year, there were 4,320 people employed in the local area, 1,450 of them in white collar occupations. The rest were in blue collar jobs, in service industries or working on farms. Classified as "blue collar"

County High Schools to Participate in Observance Of Law Day with Attorneys, Police, Sheriff

May 2 is Law Day throughout the country, and in Charlevoix County it will be observed in all the high schools.

The principal of each high school, a lawyer, and a police officer will participate in the programs.

Charlevoix County Prosecuting Attorney Roy C. Hayes, who set up the program, says it is his thought that "we should try and reach all high school seniors within the community with a presentation on the law, its importance, and an explanation of the Criminal Justice System in America."

Contained in the presentation, according to Hayes, would be "an explanation of how Legislative, Judicial, and Executive branches of government balance each other in both the State and Federal systems along with a brief summary of procedures involved within the system such as warrants, arraignments, examinations, pleas and trials. The attorney and police officer involved should participate in a dialogue with the students concerning rights, duties and responsibilities within our system of law."

The Law Day program will be held from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. in the Charlevoix High School cafeteria. Principal Vane Smith, Attorney Michael Gibbons, and Charlevoix Police Chief Jack Mol will speak.

At the Beaver Island Community School, Principal, Sister Dennis Marie Kirt, Prosecuting Attorney Roy C. Hayes, and Charlevoix County Sheriff George T. Laister will present the program, from 9 to 10:30 a.m.

Participating at the Boyne City High School, Principal William Upton, Prosecuting Attorney Hayes, and Sheriff Laister; at the East Jordan High School, Principal John Winter, Attorney Frank Hoffman, and East Jordan Police Chief Joseph Hammond.

At the Crooked Tree Arts Council, sponsors of the annual event. The public is invited to attend.

Art work by students and faculty members from participating schools will be shown from 1 to 5 p.m. and 7 to 9 p.m. each day.

The week-long show will be highlighted on Thursday by a reception for people interested.

Judy Potter Wed to Wilson Boss

Arrangements of snapdragons, carnations and daisies in pastel shades and lighted candelabra graced the altar of her father, past pastor of the Community Reformed church Saturday evening for the wedding of Judy A. Potter and Wilson R. (Bud) Boss.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Robert Potter and Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Boss.

The Rev. Larry Grooters officiated at the double ring service in the presence of 300 guests. Susan Boss sang "The New Twenty-third Psalm" and the "Lord's Prayer" accompanied by Mrs. John L. Boss at the organ, and "To God Be the Glory" accompanied by Mrs. Boss. Mrs. Gary Vandenberg of Romeo at the piano and Michael Westenberg on the trumpet. The congregation then sang "Pass It On". Mrs. Boss and Mrs. Vandenberg played a program of traditional music.

the professional and the recessional.

The bride was escorted to the altar by her father, past pastor of the church. She wore a white gown with lighted sleeves and A-line skirts accented with white embroidered lace. They carried white baskets of yellow and white daisies and baby's breath.

Group Offers Classes In Family Planning

Classes in modern methods of natural family planning will be taught by the Couple to Couple League at a series of four Sunday meetings to be held at St. Mary's School hall beginning May 1.

The Couple to Couple League calls its methods a system of on-going fertility awareness which is definitely not the same as the old calendar rhythm, or even the temperature system.

The League reports that studies have shown that well instructed couples can achieve an effectiveness rate of 99 percent. The League also teaches the type of breast-feeding which usually provides an extended period of natural infertility.

Interested married or engaged couples are asked to pre-register for Mrs. Marge Martin at 547-2401. Class dates are May 1, May 22, June 26, and July 24, from 1:30 to 3:30 in the afternoon.

Hospital Honors Guild

Charlevoix Area Hospital honored the Women's Guild for its many years of service to patients at a special ceremony recently.

The 27 guild members attending the ceremony were presented with certificates of appreciation for loyal and valuable services voluntarily given to the hospital over the past 23 years by Richard Krueger, hospital administrator.

The guild was established in 1954 with 31 charter members many of whom are still active in the current organization. There are 112 active members now.

Krueger pointed out the importance of the hospital volunteers by reading the American Hospital Association statement on the auxiliary or guild role on the health care team. He also mentioned that the Michigan Hospital Association in recognition of the importance of hospital-affiliated voluntary community organizations through which the multiple talents of the community can be deployed.

"As established channels for community participation in hospital affairs, the volunteers provide a base on which to build an expanded hospital-community relationship," Krueger said. "Whatever the needs of the hospitals, auxiliaries have responded and in their response have demonstrated the value of hospital-affiliated voluntary community organizations through which the multiple talents of the community can be deployed."

FAITH TEACHES US THAT ALL OF LIFE IS LEARNING
At graduation time, whether high school, college or a specialized institution of learning, we are reminded that education is the skills of life as an infinite thing, that you can always add to the knowledge you need for your chosen career, and that there is always something new for you to learn. Likewise, your religious training is concerned with the development of your character, and this process should continue for the rest of your life on earth. By attending the Church of your choice you will learn the nature of this universe from which there is no graduation, but for which you will receive a degree of happiness and serenity obtainable from no other source of learning.

"Wisdom is the principal thing; therefore get wisdom; and with all thy getting, get understanding."
— Proverbs 4:7

The very spring and root of honesty and virtue lie in the ability of lighting on good education.
— Plutarch

CHARLEVOIX ELEMENTARY School art teacher Mari Mathers applies makeup to the face of Tammy Boggs during a recent unit on clowning. The students learned a little about the history and importance of clowns as well as about how they apply their faces.

FIFTH GRADER Pat Mitchell hams it up in a mirror while applying a clown face. The fifth graders learned about clown makeup during an art unit.

Clowning around

Lions, Tigers, Clowns. Ah, the excitement of the circus. Charlevoix Elementary School fifth graders had a chance to be part of that excitement during an art unit on clowns, led by Mari Mathers, elementary art teacher.

Using their five senses, the students learned about the role of clowns in the circus and at the rodeo as well as about the various types of clown faces and make up.

They listened to circus music and drew pictures of clowns. They even had a discussion with a real working clown who lives in Charlevoix. And then the big day came and the students put on their own clown faces and did something almost everyone dreams of - they became clowns for a few hours and entered a world of dreams.

In Law Day ceremonies

Attorneys honor Lil Bergmann

Her job is working with children, her hobby is helping mentally impaired people. Through her job she has helped many children in their studies with the law. Through her hobby she has helped mentally impaired people in the community gain self-supporting skills.

She is Lillian Bergmann and she was named a Liberty Bell award winner by the Charlevoix-Emmett Bar Association during Law Day ceremonies for her significant contributions to the community.

As a registered nurse at Little Traverse Hospital, she worked in obstetrics and pediatrics and she has also served in Girl Scouts and 4-H. In 1957 she taught at a day care center for mentally impaired children until the Charlevoix Association for Mentally Handicapped Children, which she helped form, could find a teacher for that she set up what is now Bergmann Center in her basement. In 1960 she began working for the Charlevoix County Probate Court as the juvenile officer and currently she serves as the juvenile officer for the Boyne City Police Department.

The Liberty Bell recipient from Emmet County was Bob Erick.

TERRY CARR, Boyne City attorney, presents Lillian Bergmann with the Liberty Bell plaque honoring her for her contributions to the community.

Oppose Land Swap
I would like to voice my opposition to the swap of city property with the Beaver Island Co.

Mr. Hawley Votes No
This is Esther Hawley speaking. I would like to voice my objections to the land swap.

Native Speaks Out
This statement is directed to the newcomers of this community. For the last thirty years, the Beaver Island Boat Co. has been threatening to move to Petoskey. In the first place, Petoskey is 5 miles farther by water. The second place, Petoskey doesn't want the business. In the third place, the Beaver Island Boat Co. doesn't want to go there. But, every year it comes up and they keep asking for more privileges from Charlevoix. As far as that garage that nobody else wants, when that new shopping center goes up on Sliver Rd., there will be plenty of parking places downtown in Charlevoix for the merchants and their clerks. Also, someone should look into the legality of the city trading or giving away, whatever you want to call it, valuable waterfront property. I think that has a lot of federal money in it. If Charlevoix is considered a harbor refuge, then there should be at least one commercial dock to be used for large boats or tugs caught out in bad weather. If the City of Charlevoix loses that valuable piece of property, it should at least go to the vote of the people. The people that have just moved here don't realize how much of our tax money has been spent to keep up that dock. This is from a long time native of Charlevoix.

Spring Clean Up
The reason I'm calling is that I just received my Courier today and am very disappointed in the Spring Cleanup Schedule. They have always announced the dates in plenty of time ahead. The paper came out today and the pickup dates for the north side are today, Thurs., and Fri. I have been looking forward to this and to have to get everything together in such short notice is really poor and I hope they will never do it again and I would like to see them extend this time, at least have another date sometime next week so that residents can get things together. Thank you very much.

Delaware Objects
This is Mrs. Robbins, and I am the daughter of Mr. Campbell and am calling long distance from Dover, Delaware. I wish to go on record as being opposed to the exchange of the municipal dock for the dumb old Erber Garage on Clinton for the land swap involved. I think this is very wrong and I can't believe that the city is putting up so little opposition. It will be a tremendous loss to the city's part. The whole deal sounds extremely questionable and I am just sorely disappointed that a town that has just placed me for my entire 33 years, would do this. I have to agree completely with my father and my grandfather, Captain Harvey Campbell and his father, P.D. Campbell would just absolutely roll over in their graves if not climb out, they would be so horrified. I think you are doing a tremendous injustice to all the people in Charlevoix that have worked so hard to make the town what it is. If this deal goes through, you really will lose an awful lot of respect in my eyes. If the editor wishes to reply, my name is Carol Campbell Robbins, 72 Marion Rd., Dover, Delaware, 19901. Thank you.

Beaver Island Replies
What is this deal about the Beaver Island Boat Co. wanting to buy some property to land their boats and trading the Erber Garage to the City of Charlevoix. You see, that property that the Beaver Island lands their boats on was bought and paid for years ago. What gets me the most, one of the councilmen, here in Charlevoix, wants the Beaver Island Boat Co. to rent on the water but still for the City of Charlevoix to nab Erber's Garage at the same time. Sort of killing two birds with one stone. Really, we of Beaver Island don't need this. We are one up on Charlevoix. We have a college on our island sitting on 40 acres. It's more than Charlevoix can boast. A true Beaver Islander. Thank you.

Doesn't Favor Swap
I do not favor the City proceeding with this trade for two reasons: 1) The City of Charlevoix and its residents should strive to retain their beautiful and available waterfront and harbor properties. 2) Based upon the available value data of both properties, from a market approach it could certainly be considered a rather poor business transaction.

-Patty Janiro

City Council acts on revenue sharing

The purchase of a new firetruck and work on Ferry Avenue and Lake Michigan beaches are three projects that will be completed in Charlevoix with federal revenue sharing funds during the coming year.

The common council designated the expenditure of the federal funds during a public hearing Monday night. Some of the $102,000 that the city is expected to receive from the federal government will also be used to purchase emergency equipment for the fire department and for wages through the general fund. Council tabled action on the general budget until after a work session Thursday noon. However, preliminary figures establish the city budget at $2,327, 510 for the general fund, electric fund, sewer fund, water fund, major streets and state trucking, local streets, capital improvements and debt retirement.

In other action, council discussed a site plan for the construction of a wall along Bridge Street by William Kusina. Kusina is erecting a building on the corner of Bridge and Third Street and wants to put up the wall to provide additional parking on the sloping property. The new wall would also replace the present wall which is falling down.

Kusina proposes to construct a poured cement wall with a four-foot green plastic-coated chain link fence placed on top. At its highest point the wall would be 24 feet tall.

Charlevoix High school student leaves mark on community

A Charlevoix High School student is working hard to leave her mark on the town. Jodi Alger, 17, has helped design several store fronts and homes in the area.

Jodi got her start in the design business with her sophomore drafting class and since then has helped design an addition for her parent's home, the new front for Dapper Dick's and a new home for teacher Nelson

CHARLEVOIX HIGH SCHOOL students who will be participating in the Operation Bentley program this year are Kip Cinnamon and Wendy Wieland.

2 students picked for workshop

Two Charlevoix High School juniors have been named to participate in Operation Bentley, a two-week workshop relating to state and local government, to be held at Olivet College May 17-29. Nelson Green, high school government teacher, has announced.

They are Wendy Wieland, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Wieland, and Christopher "Kip" Cinnamon, son of the late Mrs. Sandra Cinnamon.

The pair was named by Robert Fischer, coordinator for the program, following interviews with the seven candidates recommended by high school administrators and teachers.

The program, a study in government at the grass root level, was initiated in 1963 by the Alvin Bentley Foundation and is designed to show the students how the system works and to teach them to work within the system to change it. The program is under the guidance of William Porter, Political Science instructor at Olivet College.

All-school art show opens Thursday

A new gallery will be opening in Charlevoix this week for a limited showing. The Charlevoix Elementary School will be decked out with art exhibits created by students from throughout the school district during an art show which will open Thursday evening and run until May 13.

Opening night, which will begin at 6:30 p.m. Thursday, will feature many demonstrations as well as art works by kindergarten through 12th grade students. Students will be demonstrating batik, the pottery wheel, rug making, the button machine and the art of applying clown make-up.

Following opening night, hours for the art show will be during regular school hours.

THE ANNUAL all school art show will open at the Charlevoix Elementary School Thursday evening. Students made a sign announcing the event out of paper flowers and put them in the window.

YOUNG CAMPERS learning to swim at Camp Daggett on Walloon Lake. Applications for this summer's sessions are now being taken.

Camp Daggett getting ready for 1977 summer season

Camp Daggett, the camp for local boys and girls, is now being readied for the summer season.

E.K. Shanahan of Charlevoix, a trustee of the camp board, reports that cleanup of the grounds is being made by members of several service clubs and cabins are being put in order following winter damage.

Camp Daggett is now in its 32nd year. It became a coed camp last summer following the construction of several new cabins and a new sanitary facility. It is a non-profit camp, supported by donations from individuals and service clubs.

Tim Pierson will return as Camp Director for his third year and will be assisted by his wife, Nancy. Jerry Donnelly will also return as Business manager, with his wife, Jo, to help him. Pierson says his staff of counselors and instructors is complete, with several people returning from last year.

Applications for Camp Daggett are available in all elementary and middle schools in both Charlevoix and Emmet Counties, and at the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce, the Charlevoix County State Bank and the First State Bank of Charlevoix.

Anyone with a question about the camp may contact Shanahan at 547-2115.

Hilda Watkins Day slated May 22 at Grandvue facility

Sunday, May 22, will be Hilda Watkins Day at Grandvue Medical Care Facility.

Hilda is retiring as Administrator of Grandvue after 28 years on the job, and her friends throughout the area will gather to say "thank you for a job well done" and wish her well in retirement.

Hilda is the only Administrator Grandvue has ever had. She took over when Grandvue first opened in an old building with peeling paint and stuck windows. Today the facility is a modern, fully equipped building complete with recreation rooms, physical therapy facilities, patio, dining room, and a bright and shiny kitchen. The atmosphere of the 73-bed nursing home is reflective of Hilda's administration. It is quiet, efficient, clean and caring.

Flowers are now under way for a 27-bed supervised residential care addition to the facility, for people who need some medical attention and care but not on a regular supervised basis. This has been one of Hilda's pet projects.

Everyone is invited to the open house from one to four o'clock, May 22, at the Grandvue Medical Care Facility, Peninsula Road, East Jordan.

Shade trees due to arrive for planting in city soon

The City of Charlevoix is expecting a shipment of trees that will be planted to replace the ones that died due to drought conditions last summer are expected to arrive any day, City Administrator Allen Sandberg said.

Sandberg also explained that trees that are to be removed have been clipped to about four feet from the ground.

"This wasn't the work of some vandals," Sandberg said. "It was done so that city crews will know which trees need to be replaced."

The Shade Tree Commission also plans to plant some additional shade trees in other areas of the town this year.

State Legislature reviews discount program for elderly

By PEG OHLE
The Michigan Legislature is now reviewing the proposed Michigan Senior Discount Program.

The program, recommended by the state Office of Services to the Aging (OSA), would make it possible for people over 60 years of age to buy merchandise at a discount from merchants participating in the program.

Senior citizens carrying a discount card would be eligible for varying discounts offered by service and retail businesses. The businesses would participate on a voluntary basis and set their own discount provisions.

OSA anticipates that during the first year of operation, approximately 25 percent of the businesses in Michigan would participate in the program and that 850,000 of the 1.3 million senior citizens in the state would be issued a card.

OSA Director Ron Kivi says that "While it has been labeled as a statewide program, our primary intent would be to aid local communities in organizing their own programs. We are hopeful that state funds would be made available to purchase the supplies and materials necessary for card processing and identifying participating merchants. The active support of local groups, organizations, and most importantly senior citizens themselves, would be necessary to make the program effective."

While the OSA is prepared to initiate the program by the middle of this summer, the actual start date would depend upon legislative action.

Carved Stones

The appearance in the Middle Ages of the art of gem engraving often induced the belief that engraved stones were the work of magic. A striking instance of this was the celebrated stone over the figure of the Mother of Jesus, on the tomb of St. Elizabeth of Marburg. On the gem appeared red heads touching each other, and it was, according to tradition, not a work of art, but a freak of the supernatural nature. An old engraved legend tells us that a former Emperor of Mainz offered the whole district of Ansbach for this costly stone, which had been stolen from a temple of the gods and engraved with the hands of a Colossus of Rhodes.

May 13 deadline for registration for slow-pitch

Friday, May 13, will be the deadline for registering for the men's and women's slow pitch leagues, Bill Supernaw, league president, has announced.

The 1977 season will open Monday, May 23.

In the meantime, the field must be ready for the opener, Dwight Boss, City Recreation Director, has asked all league members to turn out for a work bee at the Carpenter Avenue field at 7 p.m. Thursday. "There's not much to be done so if everyone turns out it won't take long," Boss said.

The league plans to raise the height of the outfield fence by four feet prior to the opening of the season.

Following the registration, league officials will meet on May 14 to complete the game scheduling. All team fees must be paid by the deadline date and the individual fees by May 23, the date of the first game.

The sponsor fee has been set at $60 for the coming season. The fee will be assessed $8.00 if they live in the city and $13 if they live outside the city limits.

Any players not already on a team may leave their names at the city's clerk office or the office of the recreation director in the city hall.

It is expected the league will play an 11 to 13 week schedule and that two all-star teams will be named to represent Charlevoix in the annual July 4th slow-pitch tournament sponsored by the association.

There will also be post season play-offs and a double elimination tournament to close out the season in late August.

Persons interested in umpiring are asked to contact Commissioner James Willis.

Tennis win streak comes to a halt

By FRANK MARTIN

The Charlevoix Rayder tennis team's winning streak came to a halt last week when the team dropped two meets, losing to Alpena 4-3 on Wednesday and to Tawas 7-0 on Thursday.

The Thursday meet was an expensive one for the Rayders for it marked the loss of the top singles player, Erik Lundteigen, for at least two weeks as a result of an ankle injury during the second set of his game with Steve Fisher. Coach Wright said x-rays showed no fracture but Lundteigen will be sidelined for two weeks. Another x-ray will be taken at that time to determine if and when he can return to action, Wright added.

On Wednesday the team had had a good meet with Alpena though they lost. Wright said, Lundteigen had won over Brad Hatch 1-6, 6-4, 6-3; Mark Lignell lost to Jim Milroy 5-7, 6-4, 6-0; Steve Berlage lost to Mike Stover 6-4, 6-4 and Lisa Wiener to Steve Dunk 7-5, 6-4.

In the doubles, Mark Malpel and Dave Taylor defeated Mike Gagnon and Glenn Nichols 6-2, 6-7, 6-3; Dave Morridge and Tom McNamara lost to Mike Monroe and Mike Greer 6-2, 7-3; Geoff Nelson and Jeff Cockfield won over Stacy Smith and Matt Clark 7-5, 6-4.

It was in the first match at Potosky on Thursday that Lundteigen was injured. He had lost the first set 6-2 and had gone ahead 0-2 when he injured his ankle.

From then on in, it was Potosky all the way as Lignell lost to Jeff Crawford 6-1, 6-2; Berlage to Lance Bawkey 6-2, 6-4; Wiener to Paul Simard 6-0, 6-4.

In the doubles, Taylor and Malpel won the first set 6-1 and then found themselves losing 6-3, 7-6 to Dave Jensen and Dean Belan. In the other doubles matches, Morridge and McNamara lost to Randy Marquardt and Joe Breighner 6-0, 7-6 and Nelson and Cockfield to Paul Douma and Tim Wana 6-3, 6-4.

Charlevoix will host East Jordan here Tuesday, travel to Gaylord Friday, play in the Alpena Invitational Saturday, host Elk Rapids Monday and play at East Jordan Tuesday.

Conditioning benefit of pitch, hit, run

Pitching, hitting and running are the three components in Major League baseball's official youth program, Pitch, Hit and Run but overall condition is a major benefit for youngsters who enter the competition.

Dwight Boss, City Recreation director, who is in charge of the program here.

The President's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports has developed a series of conditioning tips and warmup exercises which are featured in the Tip book available for boys and girls 9-12. These books may be obtained at any Thom McAn store or participating dealer in the area.

The Clothing Company in Charlevoix is the Thom McAn dealer in northern Michigan. No purchase is necessary to enter Pitch, Hit and Run. An official entry blank is in the Tips book which also offers tips for the competition.

The conditioning tips are aimed at improving heart and lung and warmup tips are geared to properly prepare the youngster for the Pitch & Hit competition.

Registration will continue through May 22 for all area boys and girls at The Clothing Company in Charlevoix.

Per family debt averages $1,850 in Charlevoix County

To what extent have Charlevoix County residents been utilizing the installment credit available to them in their recent stepped-up spending for consumer goods?

How large is their debt load, relative to income, and how well are they managing it?

As in other parts of the country, there was an upturn in consumer spending in recent months, especially in December, causing the debt load to expand considerably.

From the standpoint of business, there was a good sign. It was a solid indicator of an economy that was on the rise. People were again in the marketplace for new cars, washing machines, furniture, refrigerators and other costly goods and services.

Because most of it was bought on credit as usual the increase in the debt load reflects the increase in consumer buying.

Nationally, according to figures from the Federal Reserve Board, consumer credit at the beginning of the year was at a three-year high, nearly $179 billion. It was 10 percent more than a year earlier. Auto buying was the chief reason.

In Charlevoix County, based upon average earnings and spending locally and upon the national findings, the amount of installment debt outstanding is estimated at $1,850 per family.

In general, the debt load is equivalent to about one-seventh of net disposable income.

That is the average. Some families have bigger obligations than that and some have much smaller ones. There is a small proportion that buys for cash and has no installment debt at all.

As for the Charlevoix County population as a whole, the amount of such debt outstanding at the beginning of the year was approximately $10,847,000, it is estimated.

The largest part of it consisted for loans for car purchases. Most of the rest was for other consumer buying, for personal loans and loans for home repair and modernization. Mortgage loans charge accounts and single payment loans are not included. They do not fall into this category.

Some 15 percent of the average local family's after-tax income, or about $155 per month, is needed to meet the installments on its debt. It is calculated.

City land swap plans drowned by protests

By PAULA HOLMES

The question was: Should the City of Charlevoix swap 190 feet of property on Round Lake for the former Erber Garage building on Clinton Street?

The answer was a resounding no from the more than 50 people attending a public hearing on the issue Monday night.

Mayor Edward Hansen told the citizens attending the meeting the common council was considering the swap based on the recommendations of the Charlevoix Regional Planning Commission and the Charlevoix Building Authority that the city needs more parking area.

"The boat company doesn't want to take away any privileges or rights of the people to the use of the land. They just want to be assured that they will be able to continue to operate from the dock without any outside interference," the mayor said.

Hansen said "I suggest that it continue to do so." Duke also suggested that if the city was planning to dispose of public property that it allow anyone to bid on it.

"But what you've done is to make the specifications so that only the boat company could bid on the property," Duke continued. "That is a unique parcel of property and the only way to determine the realty price of it is to put it up for auction."

Duke was also opposed to trading city property so that a private business wouldn't be harassed by outsiders.

"Use the airport and I don't like the harassment from the outside people so I would like to trade an office building at 301 Michigan St. for the airport. I would also like to put a bid in for the dock."

"I would like to buy the property," Duke's comments were greeted with a round of applause from the audience.

Other people said the swap would not result in much additional parking for the city.

"The city won't be ahead by much parking with the swap,"

G.B. Saltonstall said "You can only get 20 cars in there unless you tear the building down."

"If you want the property for parking, why not buy it," Mrs. Saltonstall added.

Oscar Ward suggested there was another way to get additional parking without swapping the dock for the Erber Garage. He suggested that part of East Park be torn up to make two-tier parking.

"This would help both the city and the boat company," Ward said.

Other residents suggested that the city offer the boat company a long-term lease. The residents said they had nothing against the boat company, but they just didn't want to sell the Round Lake property.

Boat company officials said they would be glad to consider a long-term lease. The current lease is for 12 years with the rent for the property negotiable every three years.

Hansen said he was under the impression that the city could not enter a long-term lease with anyone. City Attorney Donald Berlage said he was not aware of any law that barred the city from entering long term leases.

Another resident called for a vote of city residents on the issue.

No action was taken by the council on the matter, but Hansen said a statement would be made at the Tuesday meeting.

Mt. Clemens man hired to head Grandvue unit

A Mt. Clemens resident has been hired as the new administrator for the Grandvue Medical Care Facility, Richard Tilden, director of the Charlevoix County Department of Social Services, announced.

R. Ronald Conkle, 45, was hired to replace administrator Hilda Watkins, R.N., effective June 1 during a special meeting of the social services board Monday.

Conkle is currently the administrator of Cambridge Nursing Centre East, 160-skilled-bed nursing home in the suburban Detroit area. He has served in an administrative capacity in the management of nursing homes since 1972. He is a licensed nursing home administrator and is registered as a social worker with the State of Michigan.

He has also served as administrator of Jarvis Acres Cooperative, Inc., a retirement community in Lansing and MBS Lansing, a skilled bed nursing home in Lansing. He was also executive director of Junior Achievement of Greater Lansing and worked as an industrial engineer for Republic Steel Corporation, and salesman for Rust Craft Greeting Cards among other occupations.

Conkle and his wife Patricia and their six-year-old daughters will be moving to the county.

Council may lower taxes

Tax bills may be a little bit smaller for residents in the City of Charlevoix this year.

During a brief discussion of the proposed 1977-78 budget Monday night, common council discussed cutting the tax levy from 12 mills to 7 mills for the coming year due to a large reserve in the city coffers of more than $74,000.

The tax levy would be reduced from 9 mills for operations and 3 mills for debt retirement to 2 mills for debt retirement.

"The question we have to answer when we try to decide how many mills to levy is how much reserve do you want to have," Mayor Ed Hansen said explaining the situation to the aldermen.

The aldermen agreed that the city should maintain a reserve of some sort, but they were not sure how large the reserve should be.

"I would like to lower the taxes now and really cut into our reserve and then just have to jack the taxes back up again," Alderman Jeanne Wallace said.

Alderman Ray Wood agreed but pointed out that the value of the reserve funds goes down each year as the rate of inflation goes up.

"We're losing money if we do that," Wood said.

The aldermen also pointed out that the city could borrow at a lower percentage rate if it needed extra mills to pay the taxpayers could to pay a large tax bill.

"The City of New York is a lot sharper than us," Wood said. "And they don't operate with any type of a reserve."

Eighth graders to sell subscriptions for trip

Help some eighth graders learn more about Michigan history.

Next week from 7 to 8:30 p.m. May 16-20, members of the Charlevoix Middle School eighth grade class will be knocking on doors in and around Charlevoix asking residents if they would like to buy or renew a subscription to the Charlevoix Courier at the regular price of $8.

For their efforts, the Courier will split the subscription price with the students so that they can pay for a class trip to Mackinac Island.

The students would like to spend a day on the island enjoying the rustic beauty and learning about an important part of Michigan history, too.

Skateboarding takes Charlevoix by storm

You see them everywhere - at the middle school, in the parks, along city sidewalks and even in living rooms when mothers aren't looking.

They resemble miniature surfboards only with wheels. The 7- to 13-year-old group calls them fun, while older people call them dangerous.

Whatever they are, skateboards have taken Charlevoix by storm and it looks like they are here to stay - well, at least through the summer.

Area businesses that sell the toy report a high demand for the skateboard. They also said they have trouble keeping the skateboards in stock and getting more when they run out.

This is the second time around for the skateboard that got started after surfing along the California coast became popular in the 1960s. This time the new, improved skateboards allow for much more flexibility and creativity, according to three experts, Mike Feis, Bill Mosher and Teresa Noiroi.

"Nobody taught me how to skate board," Teresa said. "I just watched everybody else and then tried it myself."

The three middle school students said they also read "Skateboarding Magazine" and used the tips in it to perfect their skills.

"I like the pictures and the tips," Bill said. "After reading one of the tips I could do a 360 (a complete turn on the skateboard)."

The students claimed skateboarding is perfectly safe, although they did have some advice for people that are just beginning to skateboard.

"Don't start with anything too great and you'll do all right," Mike said.

City Police Chief Jack Mol also had some advice for skateboarders. Mol suggested the students skateboard on the sidewalks and in private parking lots and driveways with the permission of the owner.

"We have only had one accident with a skateboarder and fortunately he only got the car hit him," Mol said.

"The kids should stay out of the streets."

MIKE FEIS also likes the challenge of skateboarding and shows his skill as he attempts to do a complete turn on the board.

QUESTION OF THE WEEK: How much surplus do you think the city should have in its budget? The current surplus is $74,000. Phone in your replies to the Hotline at 547-6559 after 6 p.m. weekdays or all day long on Saturday and Sunday and we will print them for all to see.

Residents have mixed feelings on dropping Saturday mail

By PAULA HOLMES

Through rain and snow and all other elements, the postman will deliver the mail—but only on Mondays through Friday if the U.S. Postal Service has its way. The Postal Service recently announced that it is considering eliminating Saturday delivery of mail as a means of cutting costs and containing the spiraling postage rates. And that proposal is being met with mixed feelings in Charlevoix.

Postmaster Joseph Schwartzfischer said he hasn't heard too much complaining about the proposal to end six day week delivery and usually he hears complaints once a change is proposed. "The Saturday service is bound to be missed by some people and some people will be inconvenienced," the postmaster said.

Schwartzfischer didn't think the elimination of Saturday mail delivery would result in a double work load on Mondays or in the need for extra help on Mondays.

"People who have to get stuff to somebody by the end of the week would just mail earlier," he pointed out. "I think the load would be split up between Thursday and there will be some on Monday, too."

But Schwartzfischer doesn't believe the elimination of Saturday mail delivery will ever come about. "I'll have to see it before I'll believe it," he said. "I can't believe the Congressmen would approve since a thing because of all the complaints they would get from the people."

"It would save some money because about every sixth postman could be eliminated, but I don't think it will happen."

Many Charlevoix business people hope that Schwartzfischer's prediction is right. "I object to the elimination of Saturday delivery," Jeanne Wallace, owner of the Shop of the Gulls, said. "There are many times when I wish we could go back to the twice a day delivery we had when I was a kid."

Mrs. Wallace said there were many ways that elimination of Saturday delivery would affect her business.

"It will mean a longer weekend wait for invoices that you have to have before you can price things and put them out on the shelves," she pointed out. "And it will create a delay in sending statements and we will have to wait longer for any action to be taken on them. "It's a shame that the post office feels it has to cut its cost by cutting service. I couldn't begin to cut down my costs by cutting service. It's just not a good business practice."

Jack Ulrich, manager of the Lodge, also said the elimination of Saturday mail delivery would affect his business.

"Most of our advance reservation payments are sent through the mail and we get a lot of mail on Saturdays," Ulrich said.

"Suppose someone is going to arrive here on Sunday and the reservation check is supposed to come on Saturday. If we don't get the mail we have no guarantee that they are actually coming."

Ulrich said the elimination of Saturday delivery would probably really create havoc in the big cities.

"I can't believe that they would even consider doing it," Richard Tilden, director of Charlevoix County Department of Social Services, said he thought elimination of six day week service was a good idea.

"As a private citizen I had thought that was fine," Tilden said. "I'm concerned about rising costs and this looked like a good thing to do."

"I hadn't really thought about how it would affect the department. I suppose if someone is expecting a check on Saturday it could be a bad thing. But is one more day's wait for the check that much?"

Tilden pointed out that his office, like many of the businesses in Charlevoix, isn't open on Saturdays and doesn't need mail delivery.

"I think Saturday delivery is just something we've gotten used to and we haven't really thought about whether we needed it or not."

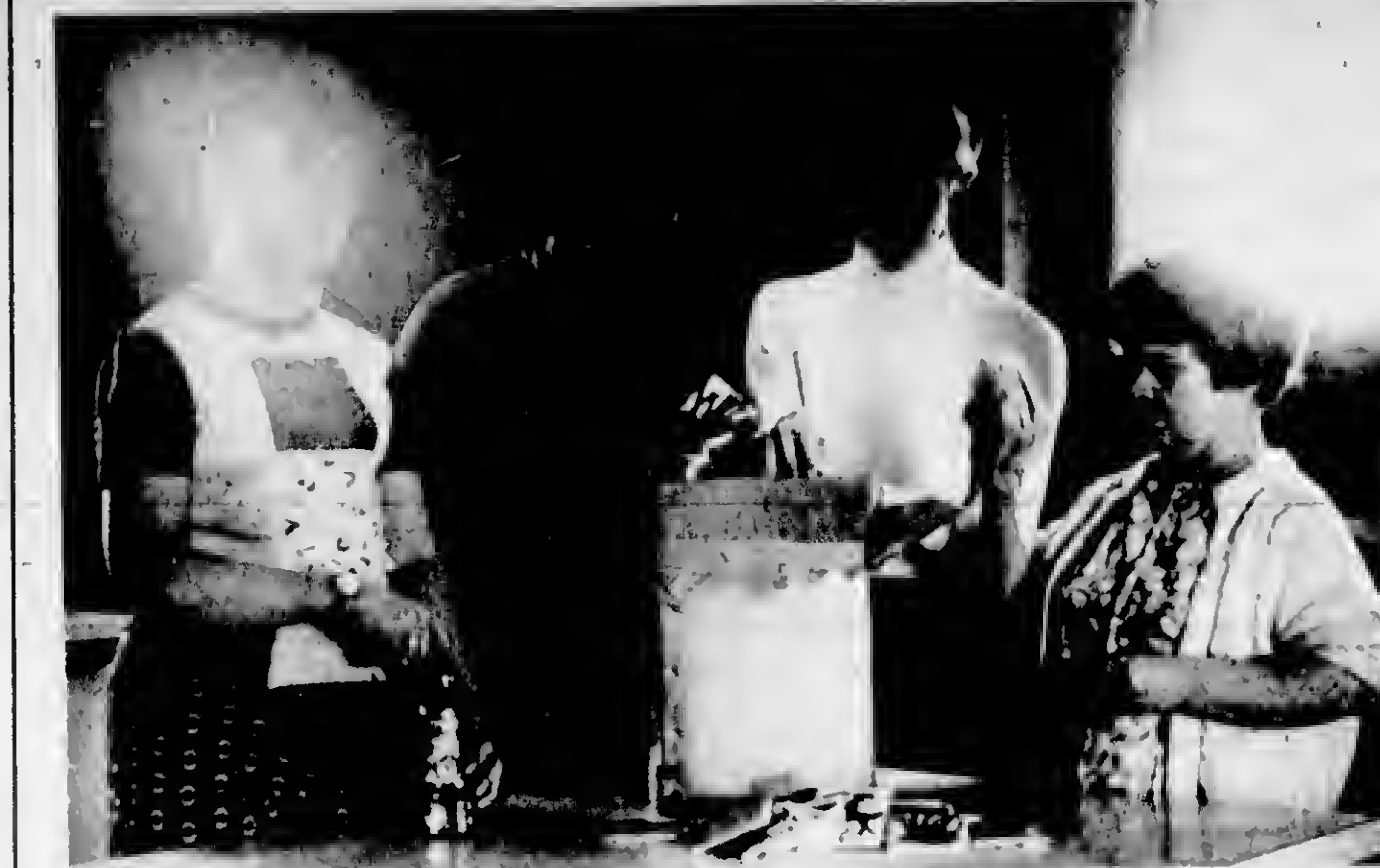

Chris Bentley of the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce, agreed with Tilden.

"We get along without mail delivery on Sunday," Mrs. Bentley pointed out. "We're just used to getting our mail on Saturday."

Chamber director Jacques Merta said she didn't know what difference elimination of the Saturday delivery would make to the chamber or other businesses in Charlevoix.

"I'm not sure if it is good or bad," Mrs. Merta said. "Many businesses aren't open on Saturday and they don't get mail anyway."

"I do think it will affect the person at home. I have gotten some important things that I had to have on Saturday."

Sights of Spring

Spring is a time for the new—new ideas, new acquaintances and new life. The old and dreary are shed and a new world emerges. Animals seem to understand the feelings behind spring, too. There is nothing like viewing the new world of springtime through the eyes of a new inhabitant. For this three-week-old filly, a new arrival at the home of Dan and Gayle Kaczynski, everyday brings some new discovery.

A romp in the grass, a sniff at the fence and contact with human beings are some of the new things the filly has discovered—all under the watchful eye of her mother.

Making new acquaintances or renewing old ones is another part of spring and these two geese seem to be really checking the situation out before taking any action.

Perhaps one is the new goose in town. Or perhaps they are new recruits. Or perhaps... Ah, the joys of spring.

THESE GEESSE are taking time to inspect each other in the barnyard.

Plenty of room for improvement in state

For 24 years now residents of the State of Michigan have been taking time out for a week each year to tool their own horns about the virtues of living and working in the state.

Next week, Michigan residents from the governor on down will drag out their horns once again for the Michigan Week celebration. Charlevoix residents will be part of the celebration as the middle and high school bands travel to Lansing to play on the steps of the capital during the various festivities.

Mayor Edward Hansen will spend Monday in Jackson and Jackson Mayor Fred Janke will spend the day here during a mayor's exchange.

But this year as residents celebrate their good fortune to be living on two peninsulas that are surrounded by five great fresh water lakes, they should also be thinking about some of the less fortunate things about the state.

For instance, a recent survey showed that Michigan ranked either 49th or 50th in the amount of return it got for the amount of tax dollars paid to the federal government by state residents. Citizens should ask their federal and state officials why this situation exists. Why must Michigan support all the other states in the union?

The economy is another thing area residents should consider while celebrating Michigan Week. Although the state's economy in general is getting better, the state is still losing manufacturers and other businesses to the sun belt and other areas where workers compensation taxes, the occupational safety and health act and other taxes do not cut so heavily into the profits of a struggling business.

With businesses leaving the state it will be even harder for the Northern Michigan area to attract industry and jobs to this area of relatively high unemployment.

Michigan residents should also consider the energy problem while celebrating Michigan Week. In a state where the main industry is the automobile business and whose second largest industry is the tourist business, the ever rising cost of gas and automobiles is bound to create a problem.

And look at what federal agencies are trying to do to this state. The U.S. Navy wants to put a radar grid through the Upper Peninsula and the Nuclear Regulatory Commission wants to dump the country's nuclear waste in the salt layers under Alpena.

Michigan may be a fine place to live, but residents should work to make it better.

Paula Holmes...

...Speaking Her Mind

Life in a small town has its pros and cons. When I first moved into the area three years ago from Lansing I had a lot to learn about what it was like to live in a community where everybody knows everybody and is probably related too.

Recently Sam Suprenant brought in a copy of the Sunday magazine of the Arizona Republic that contained a story by Stella Campbell about life in a small town and advice for the city slicker that moves into town. The following are some excerpts from the article. Read them and enjoy - we've all been there.

A lot of people think they would be happier and richer if they moved to a small town. It is accepted that all small towns are filled with peace, quiet, contentment and simple people.

The idea also got out that if a person lives everything in a small town they get so sleepy that they are ripe for a smart city person to come along and make a living out of them. This line of reasoning has led many a con man to his downfall. "Tragic" wits has sent a lot of city slickers running back to the safety of the city. After all, who do you think sold all that worthless land to promoters in the first place?

Small town people naturally are friendly and when a newcomer shows up with some hard cash to spend he will get a warm welcome. The trouble starts when the first thing a newcomer wants to do is start changing the place around so that it resembles the place he just moved from.

The city people move into a small town on Monday and by Tuesday they are telling the natives how to stape the place up. While the natives realize their town could use some improving, it's all they have and they get it a tad resentful when they hear what the place really needs is:

(A) a good gas station and garage (B) a decent restaurant and (C) some excitement.

Anyone who has lived for very many years in a small town has outwitted the elements, the Internal Revenue Service and the local bank. Lives spent this way are not lacking for excitement. Nothing will get the old adrenaline moving faster than a call from a banker about an overdue note or a letter with I.R.S. as the return address.

It takes enormous talent to live in places where you must endure snow, rain, wind, drought, tourists, dust storms and governmental agencies planning your life for you.

Small towns have excitement. Whether this is because boredom seems to build until it lets loose in a burst of excitement never has been investigated. Often what happens in small towns couldn't be printed in a family newspaper. Every small town has its story of the day that a member of the cloth took off with the quietest member of the church choir. Or the afternoon the president of the bank departed with his secretary and the bank's assets.

The duration of a really good scandal is around three and one-half days. If it involves a clerkman or an elected official, it could go to four. Because everyone is related to everyone else, except you, it would be best if you did not offer any comment on a current scandal. You undoubtedly are telling a choice bit of gossip to the brother-in-law of the fellow involved. While he may be a See Speaking page 13

Opposes international treaty

Letter Editor:

Court judgements going international with political union next? A major step toward making laws uniform, between both England and this country, is now set for ratification as model treaty. Entitled "Reciprocal Recognition and Enforcement of Judgements in Civil Matters," the treaty has been quietly initiated by delegations of both countries. And what more, the text is substantially in conformity with the existing European Economic Community (Common Market) Judgements Treaty.

Financial judgements rendered in British Courts are to be enforced over here! It doesn't take a mental giant to see that enforcement would necessitate "adjustments" and "uniformity" of law-our laws-rewritten!

The foremost lobbyist for this treaty has been the multi-national corporations-the Rockefellers, etc., who see a good thing for themselves-but which hardly constitutes a favorable endorsement! This is not crying wolf on the loss of sovereignty. Get a descriptive pamphlet on Judgements from the Center for Federal Policy Review, 1500 16th St., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036, at 25 cents each.

Your Senator, Robert Griffin, a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, will soon be voting on Committee acceptance, or rejection, of this proposal. He needs your advice and consent BEFORE we embark on this repudiation of the sovereignty of this nation.

Sincerely,
Nelson A. Pryor

I am presently an inmate confined at the London (Ohio) Correctional Institution, serving a 5 to 30 year sentence. I would like to have contact with people in the outside world, through correspondence (pen pals).

I have been incarcerated since December of 1972, and have lost touch with friends. Everyone needs a friend and a person in prison is no exception;

It's hard enough doing time and especially without family. I am a 29 year old male; blonde hair & blue eyes; 150 lbs., and 5 ft. 8 in. tall, and would welcome hearing from anyone that would be sincere in wanting to write me.

Every time there's a "Most Admired" poll I vacillate between Sylvia Porter and Sara Lee. Usually I end up voting for Sylvia, because balancing your checkbook and speaking financial fluently does seem to be a bit more dazzling than getting a cake out of a pan. (Besides, I've never seen Sara Lee and she could be a size 3 and under 30, which automatically turns me off.)

People's taste in heroes and heroines is very personal, but I can't help being amazed at a poll of the Top Ten favorite of teenagers throughout the country.

The No. 1 personal hero or heroine was Farrah Fawcett-Majors (who replaced Richard Nixon last semester). No. 2 was Jerry Lewis. No. 3, Nadia Comaneci, the Olympic gymnast, while No. 4 (and this is important) was No Vote.

It's sorta sad that somewhere between Nadia Comaneci and Paul McCartney (his Starline to Litch) there is a void... a large block of young people who don't think there's anybody great enough to really idolize. That's why today - because I like young people - I'm going to give you a longshot-guess here for your No. 4 spot. In fact, I'm going to give you 400,000 of them.

You say you admire bravery? Here's got it. You admire athletic prowess? They've got it. You want a hero who won't let you down? No way. You want a hero you can look up to?

Someone your own age? You got it. For the No. 4 spot, I offer you the 1977 Special Olympics teams from the United States - 400,000 mentally retarded kids who ran races in their wheelchairs, track and field on crutches, played volleyball, bowled, played volleyball, and swam.

The teams this month completed and racked up 400 medals. Everyone is a winner in the Special Olympics. Everyone who comes across the finish line gets a medal and a hug. Their motto is, "Let me win, but if I cannot win, let me be brave in the attempt."

These heroes are on a first-name basis with defeat. Some were born with it. For years they stood outside of the world and looked in. Then in 1968, in cooperation with the Kennedy Foundation, the first Special Olympics competition was held in Chicago.

The stories that come out of this competition are enough to bring tears. The volleyball game where the coach was screaming "Win!" and one of the players walked off the floor over to her coach and said, "I couldn't hear you with all the noise. What do you want?"

The runner who, when the gun went off, put his hands over his eyes. The sprinter who was leading, but who went back to pick up her fallen friend.

No heroes? Believe me, no one feels so tall as when he stops to put a medal around a Special Olympian. COPYRIGHT 1977 FIELD ENTERTAINMENT

Meet Charlevoix

... Lawrence McDonough

Lawrence McDonough is manager of the Beaver Island Boat Company, which operates two boats between Charlevoix and Beaver Island. Here he tells the Courier something about the company and its history.

COURIER: What does the Beaver Island Boat Company do?

McDONOUGH: It operates the ferries between Charlevoix and Beaver Island. COURIER: How long has there been ferry service between the two ports?

McDONOUGH: Fur well over 100 years. First they were sail boats, then boats powered by wood, then coal. They used to cut wood on the Island for the ferries and you can still see remains of the wood pile there. COURIER: How many ferry boats do you have?

McDONOUGH: Two, the Beaver Islander on the South Shore. The Beaver Islander holds 200 passengers and the South Shore 120 passengers. It takes two hours and 15 minutes to cross on the Beaver Islander and two hours and 45 minutes on the South Shore.

COURIER: What do you carry besides people?

McDONOUGH: Just about everything used on the Island except gasoline and fuel oil - cars, groceries, hardware, clothing, livestock, lumber, building supplies, everything. The Beaver Islander can carry 100 tons and the South Shore can carry 40 tons. That's a lot when you think that the average semi-truck on the highway hauls 20 tons. COURIER: How long is your sailing season?

McDONOUGH: We start about the first of April as ice permits and make our last run right after Christmas. This year we didn't start until the 15th of April because of the ice.

COURIER: How many employees does the boat company have?

McDONOUGH: In the spring and fall we have a regular crew of four. During the summer we put on 10 extra people. We have two mainline, one on the Island and one in Charlevoix, who put on and take off the mail. COURIER: How many passengers do you carry in a season?

McDONOUGH: Last year we carried more than 22,000, as well as approximately 2,000 cars and uncounted tons of freight.

COURIER: What do you charge for passengers and freight?

McDONOUGH: Adults are $5.50 one way and $10 a round trip; children two in 11 go for half fare; cars are $17.50 one way. Freight is $20.65 by the ton or $1.10 a hundredweight. Our minimum freight charge is 75 cents.

COURIER: Who are your passengers?

McDONOUGH: Of course we have a lot of tourists, but year-round about half the passengers are Island people or their relatives.

COURIER: Who owns the Beaver Island Boat Company?

McDONOUGH: There are about 100 stockholders, mostly Beaver Island and Charlevoix residents.

COURIER: Who are the officers and directors?

McDONOUGH: Fred Annand is president, Bud McDonough is vice-president, and Archie LaFreniere is secretary-treasurer. Ed Ladd, a retired Island resident, and Dr. Paul Nelson, a Grand Rapids dentist and Island summer resident, are directors.

COURIER: How many shares of stock are there?

McDONOUGH: The 4,000 shares originally sold for $25. Now there is a waiting list for people who want to buy them. The book value assets is now about $100 and the market value about $70, but the shareholders got only about $1.50 a year dividends. So you can see we're really not in business to make money. We have to keep the boats running to protect the Island.

COURIER: Have you raised your fares lately?

McDONOUGH: We have raised them gradually, but not enough. Our expenses, have skyrocketed. The cost of fuel oil, which used to be about $6,000 a year, has gone up to $32,000 and will be more this year. Everything has gone up.

Former reporter writes Michigan agriculture

A former Charlevoix Courier reporter has published a book. Carole (Walsky) Eberly, who covered the East Jordan area when she worked at the Courier, calls her book "Michigan Cooking" and other things. "I collect cookbooks from all over," Mrs. Eberly explained. "And that's when I noticed that Michigan didn't have one." "So I decided to write one full of recipes based on Michigan agriculture." Most of the recipes are good old favorites, Mrs. Eberly added, such as the directions for apple butter, sourdough bread, baked beans and suchlike bread. The book also contains articles about Michigan including one by Bob Clock Courier columnist and former editor. Copies of the cookbook may be purchased at local stores, Mrs. Eberly said.

Residents-react negatively to Nixon-Frost interview

By PAULA HOLMES

Millions of Americans were glued to their television sets last week to listen to the comments of the first president ever to resign from office about when he did what he did.

Some of the viewers felt Richard M. Nixon and interviewer David Frost shed more light on the subject. In Charlevoix, most of the people interviewed in a Courier telephone survey said they felt they had heard more of the same thing during the interview.

Mrs. Kohnelt Bartley said her family watched part of the interview and then switched channels.

"The reason we turned it was that we felt it was just more of the same thing," Mrs. Bartley said. "I think the interview made you feel sorry for him a little bit, but he brought it on himself."

"It seemed like a lot of double talk and what really happened still wasn't brought out," Mrs. Campbell said. "But in parts you felt sorry for him. He seemed tired of having it all."

"It was a good interview and well done, but I don't think any more light was shed on the issues," John Rowe, one of the nonviewers, said.

"Unless you were right on the spot yourself it is pretty hard to understand why things happened the way they did."

Of the 21 people interviewed during the phone survey, five people said they did not watch the Nixon interviews at all.

A Public Hearing was held on the Federal Revenue Budget. Mayor Hansen advised Council that the City would receive approximately $100,000 for the fiscal year 1977-78. After a discussion of possible uses for the money, Council decided to appropriate $5,000.00 for Michigan Beach Park, $11,000.00 for steel, $50,000.00 for the Motor Pool, $31,000.00 for the General Fund, and $5,100.00 for the Jaws of Life machine.

A Budget Hearing was held on the preliminary outline of the budget for the General Fund. Council decided to hold a budget meeting on Thursday, May 5, 1977, at 12:00 noon at the Westhaven Inn.

William Kusina appeared before the Council to discuss the proposed construction of a new retaining wall on his property on Bridge Street between Huribut Street and Olson's property. The proposed wall would be 20 feet high with a 4 foot fence on top. Alderman Wallace objected to the height of the wall and felt its construction would deter from the beauty of Charlevoix. Mr. Kusina stated he would build the wall only if he is granted a 25 foot variance to construct phase 2 of his site plan which would allow him to place a building on the back of his lot. Otherwise he will place the building parallel to Bridge Street directly on the lot line. Council advised Mr. Kusina that they would not commit themselves to allow a variance until he formally requested it and a Public Hearing is held on the matter.

Bids for 120 Police Cars were opened and tabulated as follows:

Make of Car Without Trade-In Trade-In Allow. Difference
Ford $4,608.00 1,100.00 3,508.00
Chevrolet 1,800.00 8,330.00

Bids were referred to the Police Committee for their evaluation and recommendation. Mayor Hansen read a Proclamation designating the week of May 9 to May 15 Municipal Clerks Week.

Council discussed an application made to the Michigan Liquor Control Commission by Peter L. Gaskin and Danny A. White for a beer and wine license at 1100 Bridge Street. Council agreed to notify the Commission that they are not in favor of the license due to the location's close proximity to the High School and lack of parking facilities.

Motion was offered by Alderman Wallace and supported by Alderman Wood to hold the next regular Council Meeting on May 17 instead of May 18 as previously scheduled and to give prior approval to the payroll. May 16 is Mayor Exchange Day in the City. Motion was adopted by the following yeas and nays: Yeas: Alderman Plumm, Wood, Whitley, Erber, and Wallace. Nays: None. Absent: Alderman Morris.

Alderman Wood directed Allen Sandberg, City Administrator, to provide Council with a detailed monthly financial report on the airport.

The Finance Committee having examined bills totaling $37,372.88 found them correct and recommended the bills be allowed. Moved by Alderman Plumm and supported by Alderman Wood that the bills be allowed and orders drawn for their amount. Motion was adopted by the following yeas and nays: Yeas: Alderman Plumm, Wood, Whitley, Erber and Wallace. Nays: None. Absent: Alderman Morris.

Council adjourned.

COUNCIL MINUTES

MAY 2, 1977

The Common Council of the City of Charlevoix met on the above date and time with Mayor Hansen presiding. Aldermen present: Plumm, Wood, Whitley, and Wallace. Absent: Alderman Morris and Erber.

The Minutes of the April 18, 1977 regular meeting were approved as presented in writing and as recorded in the Council Minutes book.

Enter Alderman Erber. Robert Schlemmer appeared before Council to object to trash from the Grey Gables Inn and the Le Havre Condominium being placed in front of these establishments on Belvedere Avenue. Council said they would look into the matter and assured Mr. Schlemmer these businesses cannot pile refuse on the public right-of-way.

A Public Hearing was held on the Federal Revenue Budget. Mayor Hansen advised Council that the City would receive approximately $100,000 for the fiscal year 1977-78. Sheriff's marine safety courses help young boaters

By PEG OHLE
"Hey, Pop, can I take the boat and motor out for a spin?"
If your 13-year-old son asks you this, your answer should be "no" — unless he has completed the course in boating safety conducted by the marine safety officer of the Sheriff's Department.

State law requires that all young people between the ages of 12 and 16 must take the course before they operate a motorboat on any waters of the state without adult supervision. Upon completion of the course, the students are issued Marine Safety Certificates which permit them to operate boats up to 62 feet.

Brock Dagner, Charlevoix County Marine Safety

Officer, has been conducting the course in boating safety in schools throughout the county, and during the summer will conduct similar courses for young summer residents.

vacationers, and those who did not complete the course this spring.

The course covers such subjects as required equipment, maintenance, "rules of the road", what to do in an emergency, water skiing, skin diving, and many, many more.

Charlevoix County recently received $9,917 from the Michigan Department of Natural Resources as reimbursement for last year's marine safety program. This represents two-thirds of what the Sheriff's Department spent on its marine safety program.

The Sheriff's Department also maintains two patrol boats which it uses during the summer to enforce marine laws. They are kept in the larger lakes in the area, Charlevoix and Walloon, but are dispatched to smaller lakes on an irregular schedule.

The purpose of patrolling, Dagner says, is not only to enforce marine laws, but to help save lives.

"We try to educate people on what to put in their boats and why it is necessary for safety purposes."

"When we stop a boat, we check all the equipment — life preservers, fire extinguishers, etc. — to see that they are serviceable. It's not enough just to have them in the boat," he adds.

"We're out to insure a safe summer with the proper equipment and to stop accidents with safety inspections."

Violators of boating rules and regulations are issued citations much the same as traffic tickets.

Another function of the marine safety division is to inspect all rental boats. This is done once a year and periodically thereafter. Following the first inspection, plates are attached to each boat indicating the maximum number of people it can hold, maximum weight, and the maximum amount of horsepower. Even boats without motors, such as canoes, rowboats, and sailboats must submit to this inspection.

"Our other duty is to assist boaters in distress," Dagner says, adding another dimension to the lifesaving purpose of the marine safety division.

One patrol boat is a Boston Whaler and the other is a Pipestone Mariner, subscribed with the Sheriff's Department insignia. Think of them as friends, not foes, when you see them in the vicinity. They'll also be around helping with the Vegetarian Festival, sailing regattas, ski shows, and many other summer activities.

Interest in genealogy drops despite popularity of "Roots"

By PEG OHLE
People seeking information about their "roots" in Charlevoix County started before the advent of Alex Haley's book and TV series. The county clerk's office reports that last year's bicentennial celebration brought forth more inquiries than they are now receiving. The Charlevoix Public Library also reports requests for genealogical information were greater last year than they are now.

However, the combination of the bicentennial and "Roots" has started even more people digging into family history than ever before. Many individuals and organizations which specialize in genealogy have been swamped with questions about how to go about finding ancestors. One such individual is Phyllis Sundt, librarian in the Genealogy Room of the Annapolis, Md., Public Library. He has prepared a booklet titled "Family History Starter Kit", sketching the "how to" of genealogy. Requests for the booklet are coming in large numbers from the public and high school and college students and teachers, Sundt says.

"The students and general public seem self-motivated to learn more about their forefathers. Teachers, on the other hand, frequently comment that they have found a phenomenal burst of interest in such fields as American and World History, Sociology, Black and Ethnic Studies when students are given the option of directing some part of their studies in these courses along genealogical lines."

Americans who would like some helpful hints on how to start tracing their family line may write to Sundt at Eastport P.O. Box 3063, Annapolis, Maryland, 21403.

Safe Drivers

SEVERAL CHARLEVOIX school system bus drivers were honored recently for driving several years without having any accidents. Pictured here with Superintendent James McKimmy are: Gordon Wolgamott, Eldon Potter, Al Smith, Larry Hull, Bud Heeres, transportation supervisor, Mary Ann Cudd, Angel Barris, Bev Stadiek and Pat Smally. Missing are: Al Thorp and Harold DeYoung.

We can quit plowing the drive and start mowing the lawn. Each season brings its routine chores. Personally I prefer mowing the lawn to shoveling the drive. Did you ever think of gathering edible greens from your lawn before mowing? If you're of Pennsylvania Dutch heritage, you know the edible greens referred to are dandelion greens.

Dandelion greens were the first spring tonic of our colonial forefathers after a long winter of root vegetables from the "root cellar." For centuries dandelions were used for food. In fact some parts of the Country cultivated and raised them commercially. The French christened these greens "dent de lion" (meaning, lion's tooth) because of the toothlike shape of the leaves. Wild dandelion greens should be gathered while the leaves are still small and tender. They are easier to handle if the plants are cut off at the root crown so that the clusters of leaves holds together. Pick the greens before the blossom or they become bitter and somewhat.

Foreign customers liven business

Exporting products to other countries is often a long, involved process wrapped up in governmental red tape and packaging regulations. But being an exporter has its lighter side, too, particularly when a foreign customer comes to visit.
Joanne Barnes, manager of the communications department at Lexalite Corporation, said the company had an interesting experience once when one of its Spanish-speaking customers decided to visit the plant.
Mrs. Barnes said she made all the usual preparations for the guest including reserving a rental car at the Traverse City airport. As the time drew nearer for the foreign visitor to arrive, Mrs. Barnes called the rental car business to see if everything was going smoothly. The rental agent said the customer had arrived, but there was one problem, he didn't speak English.

"We got along as well as we could with the few phrases we knew in the morning," Mrs. Barnes recalled. "But then we made a hurried call to the high school to see if the Spanish teacher could act as an interpreter for us the rest of the day."
Mrs. Barnes said it has been an interesting experience meeting the customers from various countries and comparing their cultures with American culture.

Chuck Kratt, vice president of Will-Flow, said his company has foreign visitors about four times a year. Kratt said he hasn't experienced any language problems, however.
"Most of our customers can speak English and the only ones that couldn't, the Russians, brought their own interpreter so there wasn't any problem," he said.

Kratt said Will-Flow foreign customers usually visit the plant during the fabrication of the tanks they have ordered. The customers are interested in plant operations and techniques, he said. Also they are impressed with the size of the plant and its cleanliness.

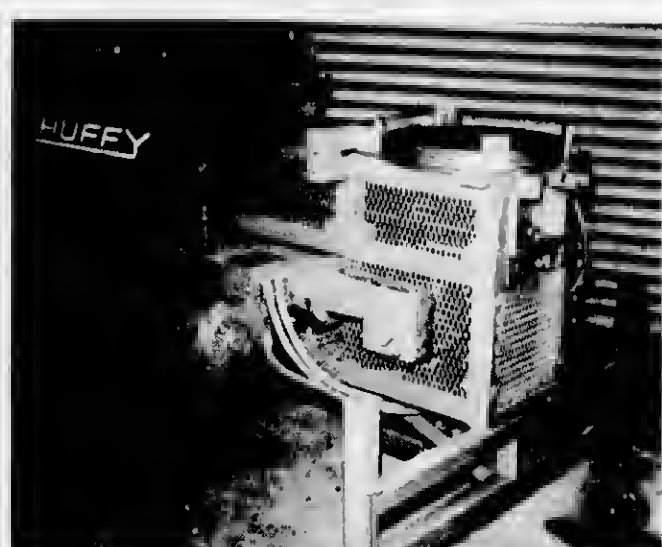

The vice president said he also takes the foreign visitors on a tour of Charlevoix while they are here. He said most visitors, especially those from European countries, feel like they are visiting a small town in their own country when they visit Charlevoix because of the architecture of the buildings.

WEATHER SHIELD'S hot seat is a familiar item in many sporting good and hardware stores in Charlevoix and surrounding areas as well as in foreign countries.

NEXT TIME YOU want to look at some albums, or cards, or tapes, take a look at the display case, too. Chances are it was made in Charlevoix at Freedman Artcraft.

A STANDARD piece of machinery manufactured by Hufford Industries for use in many countries as well as across the United States is the blank loader.

PERHAPS THE MOST famous of all the things made by Will-Flow is the pie tin that held the World's Largest Cherry pie. The company also makes stainless steel tanks, stock pots and cookers.

MANY OF LEXALITE'S products can be seen right in Charlevoix along the streets. The streetlamp globes on Meech Street for instance were made at Lexalite. Here an employee works on another type of plastic lighting fixture.

By PAULA HOLMES

What do Canada, Japan, Germany, Sweden, USSR, Israel and South Africa have in common?
They all have businesses that use products manufactured in Charlevoix.
Seven Charlevoix industries-American Mold Engineering Co., Freedman Artcraft Engineering Corp., Hufford Industries, Inc., Lexalite Corporation of Charlevoix, Midwest North Division of Ron Pair Enterprises, Weather Shield Spots Equipment and the Will-Flow Corporation-manufacture products that are shipped overseas for use by foreign businesses and industry.

While the exported goods only represent a small percentage of the local industries' business, the seven companies are nevertheless a part of the United States' several billion dollar yearly export business.

American Mold Engineering through its parent company Detroit Mold Engineering (DME) exports ejector pins to almost every country in the world. Joel Hutt of DME, said.

The steel-headed pins are used to push plastic and metal parts from molds. The pins range from 3/64 to 1 inch in width and up to 25 inches in length. They are used by car manufacturers, plastic model manufacturers and plastic manufacturers such as Lexalite.

Through DME the pins made at American Mold are exported to Canada, Mexico, South America, Central America, Europe, Japan, Australia and Malaysia.

Freedman Artcraft Display fixtures for bows, wrapping paper, records, tapes, sheet music, sewing notions and many other items are manufactured at Freedman Artcraft by more than 135 employees. The company also produces specially ordered promotional displays such as built in stove tops for appliance displays, Jack Grubb, president of the company, said.

The Charlevoix manufacturer is also hoping to break into the retail market with a new product-built-in drawer kits.

Some of the company's major customers include MK Candle Co., Gibson Greetings, Sears, Montgomery Wards, Kresge-K Mart, American Thread and Walt Disney Production. The customers are served from two Freedman plants, one in Charlevoix and one in California.

The plants also export products to Canada, Puerto Rico, Jamaica, England, Spain and the Virgin Islands.

Hufford Industries is a specialized business, said Hufford, company president, and the 18 employees produce specially ordered equipment for manufacturers. Most of the equipment manufactured by the company consists of press loaders and unloaders and transfer equipment.

The equipment has to be engineered for each customer in order to fit the part or materials that need to be moved in the particular job.

Hufford said most of his organization's customers were in the automotive field including American Motors Corp. and General Motors. Other customers include Whirlpool, Westinghouse and Dana Corporation.

The equipment constructed at Hufford Industries is exported to Canada and Germany. Hufford said the company has a distributor in Germany who sells to many European countries. The company also handles its shipping through an export firm in Detroit that does the packing and all of the paperwork involved in exporting.

Lexalite Corporation, Lexalite, which manufactures lighting products such as street lamp globes and traffic lights and does custom molding, is an international corporation as well as an exporter, according to Joanne Barnes, manager of the communications department.

"There are many countries where the governments don't allow companies to import products that can be made in the country," Mrs. Barnes explained. "So in these countries we operate joint ventures."

These companies include Mexico, Venezuela and Canada. Lexalite is also working to establish a joint venture in France which will eventually supply all of Europe. The company is also planning to start working with a company in Australia.

Lexalite products are exported to Costa Rica, Ecuador, Columbia, El Salvador and Italy. The company does its own packaging, but it works with an exporting firm in Detroit that handles the paperwork, Mrs. Barnes said.

The 112 employees of the company that has been in Charlevoix since 1965 serve such customers as ITT American Electric, AMF, Chrysler, General Electric, Motorola, GTE, Sylvania, Singer and Westinghouse.

Ron Pair, president of the company, which has two other Michigan plants in St. Ignace and Kinnick, said he employs an agent that handles the European continent out of London. Olson said he used to do much of the sales himself but it has expanded to the point where he can't do it all himself.

Some of Weather Shield's customers include Melter Thrifts Acres, Gantway, Williams Sporting Goods, Woolco, Montgomery Wards and Penney's.

Will-Flow Stainless steel tanks manufactured by 70 employees at the Will-Flow Corporation are shipped to every state in the Union as well as to several countries around the world, Chuck Kratt, vice president, said.

The tanks range in size from 50 to 10,000 gallons with stockpots from 5 to 50 gallons and cooker mixers ranging to 1,000 gallons. The tanks are used by chemical, beverage, brewing, pharmaceutical, dairy.

Size of budget surplus should be investigated

"How much is enough?" was the question Charlevoix Common Council members faced as they looked at a preliminary budget for 1977-78 last week.

The aldermen were considering the 1976-77 budget surplus and the coming year's property tax levy when they asked the question. Last year with a property tax millage levy of 12 mills—9 for operations and 3 for debt retirement—the city ended up with a $754,000 surplus.

The city fathers should be applauded for taking care to put money away for a rainy day. The city is certainly way ahead of the state when it comes to being prepared for hard times. The governor has only recently declared that it is one of his goals to set up such a rainy day fund for the state to prevent it from getting into the financial trouble it faces today.

However, times are not easy for our city residents. Should the city be building up such a large surplus when it is becoming more and more difficult for people to pay their taxes?

The simple answer is no. However, figuring city budgets is not simple. The aldermen must also consider what will happen to the amount of revenue sharing funds the city will lose if it cuts back its millage levy.

Common Council should do its best to obtain all the money the city has coming to it through such funds as the revenue sharing fund. It appears that no one seems to know how much the city has coming to it or how much federal revenue sharing monies the city might lose if it cuts back the millage levy.

A decision must be made and the council is considering dropping the millage levy to 7 mills—5 for operations and 2 for debt retirement. This idea should be encouraged.

According to figures from a study sheet the council is working with, dropping the millage levy to 7 mills will result in a surplus of $455,606 considerably less than the present one.

The smaller surplus would result in lower taxes to the citizens and less of a loss in the value of the money due to ever increasing inflation rates.

Also the situation could be reviewed next year at budget time to see if it was a wise decision in the first place.

During the next year the council and the city administrator should be working out some sort of system where it will know at budget time exactly how much the city has coming in from all revenue sources and how much it will need so that it can levy the proper millage rate without building up such large excesses in the future.

...Speaking Her Mind

For almost a year now I have been watching the actions of a man called Jimmy Carter. It's amazing to see a man come out of nowhere in Plains, Ga., and follow a path that leads directly to Washington D.C. with no steps in between.

I have been reading everything about the man that I can get my hands on and I'm still not sure who he is or what he intends to become as President of the United States.

So I was most excited when I had a chance during a recent trip to Washington D.C. to sit in on President Carter's 1977 energy message to the joint session of Congress. I thought seeing the man in real life might reveal something about him that I haven't been able to dig out of the print media and television.

Just attending a session of Congress is exciting enough. As I sat in my perch in the visitor's gallery, I was reminded of a three-ring circus during the minutes before the President's speech was to begin.

Photographers and television cameramen had strategically placed themselves throughout the gallery ready to capture the actions of the President. As the gallery began to fill up with congressmen's wives and others like myself who had been lucky enough to secure a ticket, the clamors below also began to fill with governmental officials.

As each group came in-first the senators, then the diplomatic corps and finally the cabinet—the people would rise and applaud and then sit down again to wait for the next bunch.

Suddenly everyone stood again and began clapping, but no one was cuning in the room. I noticed that everyone appeared to be staring up in the gallery in my direction and as I turned toward the speaker's chair, I noticed Mrs. Carter, Mrs. Lillian, Mrs. Mondale and other members of the Carter clan walking to their seats just a little more than an arm's length away from me.

Mrs. Carter looked exactly like her pictures. She seemed very amiable and almost girlish talking with her hands and laughing. However, when her husband spoke she sat without moving, her back as straight as a ramrod.

When President Carter finally arrived, I was surprised by his height. He is a relatively short man, turned over by most of the secret service men and congressmen. His stride was not a swift, purposeful one but sort of an ambling gait that carried him to the speaker's chair with moderate speed.

His voice and toothy smile, but he spoke in person as on television. But he spoke directly about one of the biggest problems Americans face and he spoke confidently. When he was finished he left the podium and began shaking the hands, extended to him from the governmental officials and others.

He took time to shake each one beaming all the while as he slowly proceeded toward the door.

I was impressed with the man and although I probably did not gain much more insight into his character, I realized that he believes in America and Americans and I believe he wants to be a leader that will see America remain great.

I'm not an engineer. The magic that takes place inside an internal combustion engine leaves me awe-struck. All I know about automobiles is how to turn the key, step on the gas, shift gears, jam on the brakes and turn corners.

But I think I'll start an automobile company. Would you like to join me? During the first three months of 1977, General Motors, the largest automobile manufacturer in the universe — so far as we know — earned an ungodly $900 million — give or take a million or two. Projected over the entire year, GM can look forward to a profit of $3,600,000,000 in all of 1977. That's three billion, 600 million dollars, if you aren't good with figures.

But General Motors isn't satisfied. Already there are talk in automotive circles that auto prices will go up between $300 and $350 when the new models bow this fall. That will boost the average price of automobiles people buy to more than $5,000.

All of which, I suppose, is well and good if you live in one of the metropolitan areas, belong to a labor union and earn $30,000 a year. When you live in northern Michigan and earn your keep on the local economy such prices are frustrating.

That is why I propose starting my own automobile plant. I think — no, I know — that I could find a fully qualified automotive engineer to design a six passenger sedan to sell for about $1,500 or less.

Of course, it wouldn't be the fastest or the fanciest automobile on the road, but it would get you there and bring you back — which millions of people used to say, almost apologetically, about their austere Model T, Fords.

My car would have a one-piece frame and superstructure for belt and safety. Body panels — fully replaceable — would be of pressed wood or some type of plastic impervious to salt. Since my car would come in only one color, replacement parts not only would be economical, but they could be replaced by the owner with a screwdriver and a wrench.

When President Carter finally arrived, I was surprised by his height. He is a relatively short man, turned over by most of the secret service men and congressmen. His stride was not a swift, purposeful one but sort of an ambling gait that carried him to the speaker's chair with moderate speed.

Letters to the editor

It's not hard to plant

Dear Mayor Hansen & Council Members:

This letter is in reference to the 200 dead trees the city planted last summer. I have the forlorn feeling that the people of Charlevoix will be looking at four foot high dead tree stubs for the next year.

I don't take a Ph.D. to understand the intricacies in tree planting. Any farmer will tell you to plant a tree in the early spring, before it buds, and see that it receives plenty of water once a week. Don't plant them in the heat of the summer, with one watering, and expect any luck. I understand Jeanine Wallace is on the tree committee, and can't get the replacement trees, due to a truckers strike. If the city does not have the resources to transplant these trees, perhaps I may be of some assistance. I hope the council has learned something from last years experience, and will not give us a repeat performance.

Parole reform needed

To the editor:

On Law Day, May 1, I launched a state-wide petition drive to reform the Michigan Parole System to require that convicted felons of violent crimes serve at least their minimum sentence before they become eligible for parole. Such an initiative petition state-wide is necessary because of the Legislature's three and one-half year refusal to deal with similar pending legislation.

The reaction of the Legislature to the petition drive was predictable. First, the Chairman of the House Judiciary Committee responded extremely negatively. He asked, among other things, "are we prepared to pay the price of at least $105 million to build a prison to house convicted felons of violent crimes?" Let me respond in the words of the mother of an eleven year old girl raped and murdered by a parolee in Oakland County: "I would gladly pay $105 million to have the opportunity just one more time to tuck my little girl in bed."

Secondly, the reaction of the Joint Capital Outlay Committee of the Legislature, looking into possible prison sites in Michigan, would be laughable if it wasn't so pathetically arrogant. The Joint Committee directed the Department of Management and Budget to specifically examine Oakland County as a prime site for locating a new prison.

Such an obvious move by the Legislature is no more than a blatant act to intimidate not only the public in Oakland County, but citizens across the state from getting involved in a tough law enforcement program. What this Legislature Committee is saying, in effect, is that if citizens of this state dare avail themselves of their constitutional right to initiate legislation through a petition drive, they will be punished by the State Legislature.

I, for one, feel that these Legislators have grossly underestimated the Michigan public. We will show them so in our petition drive for parole reform.

Very truly yours,
L. Brooks Patterson

So many of you were kind enough to write me notes following the March 23 death of my Boston firm which set me back 22 bucks, but then what is money at a time like that?

A florist in Charlotte, North Carolina, not only sent me an official death certificate, but a Plant Life Insurance Policy created by Craig Beasley. Knowing how many of you feel about your plants out there, I thought perhaps you would want to insure them. This is how it works.

In case of death, the plant will be replaced by a similar plant of equal value providing you can offer proof of death. To qualify, the plant must be of life at the time it is examined with no reasonable chance of recovery.

Suicide Clause: If the plant shall die by suicide, while sane or insane, the company's total liability under the policy shall be limited to the payment of a sum equal to 5 percent of the plant's original retail or purchase value.

Murder: If death of the insured plant occurs due to abuse or wounds inflicted upon it, or willful destruction, the company shall not be liable.

Accidental death: If applicable, death benefits will be paid in addition to any other amounts payable under the policy.

Definitions of Accidental Death: 1. Car accident in which the insured plant is driving. 2. Plane, train, or bus crash in which ticket was purchased for plant.

Meet Charlevoix

...Lt. Cmdr. James O'Neill

Saturday, May 21, is Armed Forces Day, and on that day the U.S. Coast Guard Cutter Suedew, stationed at Lake Charlevoix, will hold open house from 9 to 11 a.m. and 1 to 3 p.m. This week the Courier talks with LCDR James V. O'Neill, commander of the Suedew, about operations of his ship.

COURIER: Isn't the Coast Guard the oldest of the armed forces?

O'NEILL: It is the oldest in continuous service — since 1790.

COURIER: What part does the Coast Guard play in national defense?

O'NEILL: In time of war it becomes a part of the Navy. However, in the Vietnam War, it was not transferred although there were Coast Guard forces there under Navy control.

COURIER: What are the missions of the Coast Guard in peacetime?

O'NEILL: Our principal mission is aids to navigation. The Suedew is responsible for positioning and maintaining 92 buoys and eight lights. We have just finished this work for the summer. Our territory is from Arcadia on Lake Michigan to the Straits of Mackinac and from the Straits to the Detroit Light on Lake Huron.

COURIER: What about ice-breaking?

O'NEILL: That is our big winter job. This past winter we were on ice-breaking duty about 75 days. Our first assignment was late November, when we went to Pelee Passage in Lake Erie. Then we broke ice in Green Bay and Escanaba and in Lake Michigan from the Manitowish to Traverse City and in Charlevoix for Medusa. After that we went to Detroit, the western basin of the Detroit River, into Toledo. And of course we did our work in the Straits and St. Mary's River when needed. Our last ice-breaking was done about the 18th of April.

COURIER: And search and rescue?

O'NEILL: We have the secondary search and rescue responsibility for Northern Lake Michigan and Northern Lake Huron. This includes towing disabled vessels. Our first two this year were in Lake Erie, because we happened to be there. In our own operations area, we towed in the Amoco Indiana which ran aground at the mouth of Little Traverse Bay and the Olive Moore from the middle of Lake Huron into Detroit Village.

COURIER: Any other duties?

O'NEILL: Yes, we are the support mission for the manned lighthouse at Little Manitou Island. This year we also did some support work for limnology research by the University of Wisconsin between Sturgeon Bay and Milwaukee. We positioned and retrieved sub-surface meters for them.

COURIER: What will the Suedew be doing this summer?

O'NEILL: On the first of August we will go to Baltimore for a major renovation. This will consist of re-doing the interior, installing air conditioning, a new bow thruster to improve maneuverability, two new radars, a new electronic navigation system, and overhauling all engineering. The Suedew will be in Baltimore from then until the first of September, 1978 — 14 months. Our crew will bring the Cutter Mesquite back from Baltimore and will be homeported here, as it was once before until the Suedew returns. The Suedew crew will be on the Mesquite. When we leave Baltimore, we're going to Guantanamo Bay for a shakedown.

COURIER: How old is the Suedew?

O'NEILL: It was built during World War II. It's a good ship and the Coast Guard wants to get another 15 years of service from it. It's been in Charlevoix since 1968 and is the most powerful buoy tender made. We need it here because of the work we do in the Straits.

COURIER: How large a crew do you have?

O'NEILL: Forty enlisted men and seven officers, including myself. They all work very hard, they had a hard winter. When the Cutter Mariposa went around they had to work harder, sometimes from 5:30 a.m. to midnight, often walking out on the ice to pick up buoys. There COURIER: You sound as if you're happy with your crew.

O'NEILL: I have 46 of the best people associated with the Coast Guard I've never heard a complaint from any of them.

COURIER: How long is the tour of duty on a Coast Guard ship?

O'NEILL: Two years. COURIER: See you on Armed Forces Day.

Sheriff's department plans to establish auxiliary posse

Citizens of Charlevoix County may soon have an opportunity to join a Sheriff's posse.

The plan is now under consideration by the Sheriff's Department and the County Board of Commissioners. Sheriff George T. Lasater told the commissioners last week that the posse would probably consist of eight to 12 men. Their job would be to accompany members of the Sheriff's Department on patrols and assist wherever possible.

Members of the posse would be unpaid volunteers but would be in uniform. An example of what a posse member might do is direct traffic in auto accident cases, leaving the officer free to do "what he is trained to do."

It is planned to activate the posse as soon as insurance arrangements can be worked out.

Charlevoix standard of living improves

Charlevoix County residents have come a long way economically in the last 15 years or so.

According to a study made by the Conference Board, the average Charlevoix family as well as families across the nation are enjoying a much higher standard of living now than they did in 1960.

The study found that increases in family incomes over the long run have more than compensated for the rise in the cost of living, despite the fact that inflation has boosted prices so much during the period that it takes nearly $18 to buy what could have been bought for $10 previously.

In Charlevoix, as in other communities, the study found the family's ability to cope with the higher costs has been due in part to the fact that wages and salaries have also been rising. The other major contributing factor has been the influx of large numbers of married women into the job market and the additional paychecks they have brought home.

The study listed market data figures for Charlevoix County showing that net income after taxes went from $4,131 per household in 1960 to $12,235 by the early part of last year. It has an increase of 196 percent. This compares with an increase in the United States of 130 percent and with 146 percent in the State of Michigan.

Gordon Wellman, president of Charlevoix County State Bank, and Louis Hollow, president of First State Bank of Charlevoix, were not surprised by the study's findings.

"Incomes have gone up quite a bit," Wellman said. "And this is true nationwide as well as in this area."

Hollow suggested that part of the reason the incomes have increased so dramatically in the Charlevoix area as compared with the rest of the country was due to the change in the number of industries and businesses in the area.

"We've seen a dramatic change in the whole complexion of the Charlevoix area," the bank president said. "In the last 17 years we've seen Medusa be built and Hoskins, American Mold and Lexlite have come in, too."

The plants have brought in more professional people to the area and more people have been moving up here to live in general, Hollow pointed out. This has increased the school census and the need for teachers, another set of professionals.

The Conference Board study also found that as Charlevoix residents' incomes rose, local residents substantially increased their consumption spending, except in periods of recession. According to the study, residents' outlays in Charlevoix County's retail stores soared from the $14,470,000 level reported in 1960 to the more recent total of $44,649,000.

Over the years, the study indicated, the pattern of spending by the average American family has undergone considerable change. Despite steadily increasing prices, the proportion of income that must now be set aside for the basic necessities—food, shelter, household operations and clothing—is smaller than it was a decade or two ago, the Conference Board noted.

As a result a larger percentage is left for discretionary spending. It is seen in the increased outlays for sporting goods, recreation, television sets, records, travel and other luxuries.

Wellman explained that the increase in discretionary spending was due not only to increased salaries, but also due to increased leisure time.

"It used to be that people worked six or seven days a week," Wellman said. "And now they work five and sometimes only four days a week, so they spend more money on leisure time activities."

Hollow said he disagreed with the study's findings on the increased amount of money for discretionary spending. Hollow said the cost of housing had increased along with income.

"I would say that people who are living in the same home they were living in during 1960 probably have more discretionary spending money," Hollow said. "But people who have moved probably don't."

"Also things that were a luxury 17 years ago aren't considered that anymore. For instance, look at how many people go out to eat once a week or more. Seventeen years ago very few people did that."

"The standard of living has changed."

CB group sets up base station

The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department is the recipient of a Citizen's Band Base Station donated to the department by the Northwest REACT No. 3433. Included in the gift is the 23 channel base station, antenna, coax and bracket.

As a result, Channel 9, the emergency channel, will be monitored on a 24-hour basis at the Sheriff's Department. Into it is issued its own call letters, the station at the Sheriff's Department will be using the call letters of the REACT club, KAGP 947.

The presentation was made recently by Greg Seese, president of the Northwest REACT No. 3433 and Rick Baker, vice president of the group, to Sheriff George T. Lusater.

In accepting the base unit in behalf of the Sheriff's Department, Sheriff Lusater said "The department is making every effort to give the best service possible. In order to do this citizen cooperation is necessary. By giving this base station to the Sheriff's Department, the Current biological studies unlock mysteries of human make-up

Genetically-engineered people, new types of plants and animals, cures for some diseases, all may lie hidden in the awesome world of the cell.

In recent years an explosion of knowledge has completely transformed the science of biology. Scientists can now take the very stuff of life out of the cell, isolate it in a test tube, dissect it, and probe the deep mysteries borne in its fragments.

Little more than a generation ago the cell—the living capsule from which all plants and animals are built—was largely uncharted territory. Nor was science sure what a gene, the basic unit of heredity, was made of. Today the cell has been mapped and biologists know that genes are made up of that marvelous yet mysterious chemical, DNA.

Stores the Code

Keeper of the keys to life, the double helix or twin spiral of the DNA molecule stores the code that every cell uses to sustain and duplicate itself. Man and bee, wild flower and microbe, all share a kinship of DNA. And along its elegant structure lie genetic messages that make eyes blue, feathers iridescent, and lilacs fragrant.

"Since they realized that DNA holds such a trove of secrets, biologists have taken revolutionary strides," reports Rick Gore in the September, National Geographic. "They have built genes artificially, and transplanted genes from frogs, mice, and fruit into bacteria."

"They have even put human genetic material into frog eggs and coaxed them—though they could never develop as anything but frogs—into manufacturing human protein."

Some scientists now prophesy that in the future gene manipulation may be used to cure mental genetic diseases, and perhaps even cancer; to prolong life; to create new types of agricultural plants and animals; and someday possibly to make significant changes in man himself.

Worked With Tadpoles

A remarkable genetic technique called cloning has been demonstrated by the English scientist J.B. Gurdon. He destroyed the nuclei (the cell parts that contain the genes) of frog eggs and then replaced them with others taken from a tadpole's intestinal tissue. Amazingly, the eggs developed into tadpoles identical to the one that donated its intestinal nuclei.

Eventually it should be technically feasible to do the same with humans, to make limitless copies, or clones of people considered to be desirable by transplanting their DNA into human eggs. Science-fiction writers already fantasize about armies cloned from a hybrid Gollath, or world filled with clones of famous and powerful men to locate the one they people.

"Such conformity, however, would require much more than biological identity," writes Mr. Gore. "Disturbing psychological conditioning, for example, would be needed. Moreover, biologists strongly disavow any interest in human cloning. Nor would our society today tolerate the attempt."

More realistic is the risk that well-meaning genetic manipulators working on, for example, the cancer problem, might inadvertently turn a common bacterium into a lethal germ and unleash a great new plague.

Such dangers have resulted in a self-imposed moratorium on experimentation by many of the world's leading biologists while they spent the past two years developing what they regard as ultrasonic guidelines for their work.

Beyond bacteria, many biologists talk about manipulating genes in humans. But first they must want to work with out of the roughly 100,000 different genes in each human.

Fused Various Cells

Through a technique called cell fusion, researchers have fused human cells with mouse, chicken, and even mosquito cells. There is no possibility, however, of creating a monster with the head of a man and the tail of a mouse. Fused cells of different animals will not develop beyond a colony of single cells.

Genetic engineering with plants has gone much further. To some botanists, it is just a matter of time until almost any type of plant can be hybridized with another.

Their technique, now in its infancy, is first to dissolve the tough cell wall that encapsulates plant cells, then fuse the naked cells, or protoplasts, from two different plants. Finally—and so far it has been accomplished only with two types of tobacco—they grow the fused cells into full-blown plants.

City gets $24,000 CETA grant

Charlevoix's wild and natural park properties on Lake Michigan and the recreation area at Mt. McSaba are scheduled to receive a face lifting.

The project was made possible through the receipt of Title VI CETA funds.

A $24,000 contract was awarded to the city for the facilitating by the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners which administers the CETA funds funneled into the county through a 10-county manpower consortium.

The CETA funds will be added to soil conservation funds the city received earlier to underwrite the cost of cleaning up the city park on Lake Michigan north of Park Avenue between Grant Street and the city limits.

THE ALMOST 100 participants in the Big Brother Big Sister walkathon took off at a run Saturday morning. They didn't keep up the pace for long however over the 32 mile route.

190 participate in walkathon

The streets of Charlevoix County were lined with joggers, walkers and runners Saturday as more than 190 people participated in the Big Brothers-Big Sisters Walkathon.

The first two contestants to cross the finish line of the 32-mile walk were Jeff Drenth and Mark Russell, Charlevoix High School sophomores and members of the cross country team.

Nancy Wood, director of the organization, said she and staff members were still compiling the list of winners and money donated through the walkathon.

Mrs. Wood said she wanted to thank all of the people who helped with the walkathon particularly members of the Northwest REACT, the Sheriff's Department, volunteer nurses and the Bergmann Center.

FAITH SHOWS THE FALSE PREMISE OF THE "NEW MORALITY"

The so-called "new morality" we hear so much about these days is neither new nor moral, because its activities have been practiced and condemned since the dawn of history; and yet it appears to be gaining an increasing acceptance among the very people who would have been outraged at this idea only a few years ago. Nevertheless, under the guise of personal liberty those destructive habits bind us instead with the chains of a self-imposed slavery and demonstrate a total lack of respect for our minds and bodies by subjecting them to proven health hazards. It is not too late to learn that those rules of conduct set forth in the Bible were pretty good ones after all, and that those who follow them and go to Church regularly are always ahead in the long run.

"And have no fellowship with the unfriendly works of darkness, but as to be hated needs but to be seen: Yet seen to all, familiar with their face. We first endure, then pity, then embrace."
—Alexander Pope

Shade trees arrive for planting in city

The City of Charlevoix will be able to keep up its reputation as a shady town after all.

The city's Shade Tree Commission and many other interested residents have been eagerly awaiting the arrival of 200 shade trees which were to be planted along the main streets in town from the municipal golf course to the airport.

The trees finally arrived last week and Friday John Campbell of the Shade Tree Commission, city crews and a crew from Site Planning Development put the trees in place.

The newly arrived trees were planted to replace new shade trees that were planted last year and that died during the drought last summer.

The trees were a little late arriving in town due to some detours they had to take on their journey, Campbell said.

The trees were scheduled to be delivered two weeks ago, but the first truck that was carrying the shade trees ended up in the river.

A second truck that picked the trees up after the first one got in an accident, could only take the trees as far as Detroit.

Finally Campbell sent one of his trucks down to pick up the trees and bring them to Charlevoix.

Campbell said that although the delay in getting the trees upset some work schedules, the trees did not arrive too late for proper planting. The nurseryman said it was still early enough in the season to plant the trees and have them grow successfully.

The nurseryman said the problem with last year's trees was that they did not receive a sufficient amount of water and the summer season was unusually dry. About 80 percent of the trees planted last year died.

JOHN CAMPBELL of the Shade Tree Commission prunes one of the almost 200 new shade trees planted along city streets last week.

First time on the market is this clean, compact starter home with a newly remodeled kitchen and a new deck off the kitchen. Plus two bedrooms (could be three). Natural gas heat and priced to sell at $22,800.

by gas and is available to the park manager. Unfurnished. The Charlevoix County parks and Recreation Commission and Park Summer along with several members of the County Board of Commissioners will be at the open house they will be available for residents to visit and ask questions about Whiting Park.

Refreshments will be served at the open house.

East Jordan woman plans camp for deaf

An East Jordan woman may be the next big winner in the Michigan Lottery. Michigan.

And if she is, a lot of people may benefit.

Erin Scott, 33, will have a chance on Monday to compete for a chance for the big money by joining the May 26 Super Play field. Six contestants will be selected from those who successfully matched all five digits in the Michigan.

When she matched the five numbers on her lottery ticket April 21 that guaranteed her at least $2,000, but Mrs. Scott is hoping for even more.

The East Jordan woman plans to use her winnings to establish a camp for deaf children on her 68-acre farm. She plans to build two dormitories, basketball and tennis courts and a nature trail. In addition she would like to purchase bicycles, heading, a movie projector, mini-bus and other equipment for the camp. In all she estimates the project will probably cost around $300,000.

But Mrs. Scott is willing to start slowly, putting whatever she wins into establishing the camp.

"I've already checked with my neighbors and they agreed that I could have the camp," Mrs. Scott said. "And the state has agreed to help pay for setting up part of the nature trail."

In the meantime, Mrs. Scott is directing her energies toward helping the deaf any way she can. She conducts a class in sign language through the East Jordan Community Schools.

CHARLEVOIX FEDERAL CREDIT UNION

The Charlevoix Federal Credit Union became a Community Charter in November, 1969 to serve residents and families within a six mile radius of the Charlevoix Post Office. In 1972 our field of membership was extended to include all persons living or working in the County of Charlevoix. On July 3, 1974, we included Central Lake and Banks Township in Antrim County. In March of 1976, Forest Home and Kearney Township in Antrim County were added to our field of membership. We started with 142 members in 1969 and now have 3,600 members.

In January of 1976, we began offering privilege payment accounts, electronic transfer service, direct payment service for our members. With two or three exceptions, we still have the same official family volunteers.

Survey reveals area residents' concerns

By PEG OHLE
How do Michigan residents feel about community issues and spending of tax funds?
The Michigan Public Opinion Survey, conducted by researchers in the Michigan State University Department of Resource Development in late 1975 reveals some interesting answers. Questionnaires were randomly distributed to 21,792 Michigan households, of which 13,296 were returned with answers. The returns have been broken down for Charlevoix County alone and the Northwest Region (Antrim, Benzie, Charlevoix, Emmet, Grand Traverse, Kalkaska, Leelanau, Manistee, Missaukee, and Wexford Counties) for comparison with state figures.
Two hundred and seventeen Charlevoix County residents received questionnaires and 138 usable ones were returned—for a 64 percent return.
Sixty-one percent of the returns came from men and 39 percent from women. The average age of those in Charlevoix County returning the questionnaires was 49 and the average length of residence in the county was 22 years.

A summary of the questions and answers follows:
Charlevoix County residents listed what they saw as the most serious community problems in the following order. Replies by residents of the Northwest Region and the state as a whole are printed for comparison:

1. Energy costs

Memorial Day plans announced

The traditional Memorial Day program plans have been announced by the American Legion and Veterans of Foreign Wars, sponsors of the event.
This year's program will include the traditional memorial service, music by the Charlevoix High School band and a parade on Bridge Street. Clarence Rubach will serve as master of ceremonies with Clarence Goldstick serving as parade marshal and Ed Edwards as honorary parade marshal. Fritz Allard will be squad leader.

The parade will begin at 10 a.m. at the corner of Park Avenue and Bridge Street and will proceed south on Memorial Park. A small ceremony will be held with wreaths tossed into the lake by the VFW and American Legion auxiliaries and wreaths placed at the Submarine Memorial and in Memorial Park.
The firing squad will give a 21 volley salute and Taps will be played by Kay Currey and Geoffrey Nelson.
The parade will then continue to the cemetery for a second service. The Memorial Day Address will be given by James McKinney, superintendent of schools, with Julie Wimmer, high school senior, also making a presentation. Rev. Austin Reiger will give the invocation and Rev. James Plackner will give the benediction.

In case of bad weather, attempts will be made to switch the ceremonies to the high school gym.

Dog Catcher
I would like to express my feelings about the present dogcatcher. Mr. Thomure has served the county as a deputy for many years. He has gotten many awards and spent much time in training. These training times have been to serve our county better. I don't know the former dogcatcher's name, but I do know that when he came to our neighborhood to pick up a stray dog, he indicated that he had a love for dogs, that he really liked his job and that he did like the dogs. He proved this to me when he got a German Shepherd that bit a kid at my cousin's house. He handled that German Shepherd that wanted to bite him real well and as though he had much experience. I would say that Mr. Thomure is taking quite a demotion and it isn't right. Could this demotion be because of the last election? Or is there a better reason. If there is, I would like Mr. Lasater to express the reason. I worked for Mr. Lasater and I feel he is the man for the job, but if this is what is going on up there, I don't understand it because why are we getting a well-educated crimelighter for a dogcatcher and a good experienced dogcatcher on our streets as a crimelighter. That is my opinion and I want to thank you for allowing me to talk on Hotline.

More on Dogcatcher
I would like to know what happened to the dogcatcher. Supposedly when Lasater took office he was gonna try to control these dogs running loose. So far this year I haven't even seen the dogcatcher on this side of town.
I keep my dog fenced in but these dogs that just run around town get her barking. I know it bothers the neighbors for it bothers me. Then I've got to go out and quiet her down while the other dog runs off and bothers some other dog that's tied up. I really think something should be done. I know I'm not the only one that feels this way. Otherwise I'll get myself a BB gun. Maybe the dogs won't come around as often.

P.S.

FELLED TREES lie on the ground near a beaver dam. They will be hauled to the water's edge by the beavers, then cut in sizes suitable for dam building.

Beavers busy with work in Jordan River Valley

By PEG OHLE
One of the advantages of living or visiting in Northern Michigan is the opportunity to view nature at first hand.

A trip through the Jordan River Valley is a trip through forest lands untouched by man except for the narrow roads that meander along the river. And it is here that the work of the beaver can be observed at first hand.

Aside from man, the beaver is the most accomplished builder among the mammals. It makes dams and lodges, deepens pools, and digs elaborate canals and tunnels—all of this to create for itself living conditions that will secure it from predators.

The key to this activity is the dam. It backs up water to form a shallow pond in which a lodge can be built in a safe spot away from shore, easy for the strong-swimming beaver to reach but inaccessible to marauders.

The lodge itself is like a small domed fortress, rising from the pond formed by the dam. It is constructed of branches and the trunks of saplings plastered with mud. It has an air hole in the ceiling and contains a single chamber about five feet wide and three feet high. An underwater exit leads outside, and close by stands a stockpile of branches, from which the beavers will eat the bark during the winter, when frozen sap makes trees too hard to cut down.

To build the dam and lodge, the beaver uses its exceptionally sharp curved incisors to cut down trees. It is an extremely speedy worker and can bring down a four-inch poplar in less than 15 minutes.

The beaver then carries the branches to the water, often

The above is a CHIROPRACTIC NERVE CHART. Study this chart and you will understand why over 40 million people have benefited from chiropractic care and why over four million additional sick people seek chiropractic care annually.

Regardless of what your condition is, no matter how long you have suffered, chiropractic care may be the answer to your health problem and only a chiropractor can tell if chiropractic care can help you. Millions who originally thought their chiropractors were only "bone and back" doctors have been fully equipped and involved in the health care of many, many of their patients. Specialists of location in the body, for advanced nervous system, chiropractic may help.

If you are sick or in pain or are only through a Doctor of Chiropractic, the will explain, demonstrate, answer your questions, and make examinations to determine if you are a condition that chiropractic can help and to determine how he can help.

Charlevoix humane society plans first dog show for June 12

By PEG OHLE
The Charlevoix County Humane Society will sponsor a Dog Show Sunday, June 12, on the grounds adjoining the Sheriff's Department.

Donna Wojan, chairman of the event, says everyone is invited to witness the show and become acquainted with breeds with which they are not now familiar.

Mrs. Wojan explains that a dog show is for purebred dogs only. It enables owners to exhibit their dogs in competition with others of its kind, with the ultimate objective of improving the quality of all dogs.

"This is achieved, according to Mrs. Wojan, by an intelligent breeding program, using the dogs which have proven, through dog show competition, to be the best representatives of their breed. Each breed has its own standard of perfection by which it is judged.

Each breed is divided into classes by age and sex. For instance, the winners of each of the puppy classes compete for Best Puppy of Breed. The winners of the adult male and female classes compete for Best of Breed Adult.

Each of the breed winners will compete in their own group to determine which is the best of that type. In the end, there will be six adult and six puppy group winners. They then will compete for Best in Show Puppy and Best in Show Adult.

The Charlevoix Show is what is called a "Fun Match," for inexperienced dogs and/or handlers. Anyone with an AKC registered dog may enter.

There will also be Junior Showmanship classes to determine which of the young dog handlers is the best job of showing their dogs. These classes are judged on the handler's ability, not on the quality of the dog.

In conjunction with the show, there will be an Obedience Trial, with four different classes, each a different stage of training.

Anyone wishing to enter the Fun Match or who would like more information is asked to call Mrs. Wojan at 547-6666. All proceeds will go to the Humane Society.

CHARLEVOIX COUNTY residents will have a chance to show their dogs like this man at a special dog show sponsored by the Charlevoix County Humane Society June 12.

Laetrile--cure or quackery?

By PAULA HOLMES
Laetrile, is it the miracle drug cancer victims have been searching for, or is it medical quackery?

Michigan residents may soon have a chance to find out for themselves. State Sen. Jack Welborn, R-Kalamazoo, and 23 cosponsors have introduced legislation that could outlaw the use of Laetrile.

Welborn is proposing the legislation use of the drug by state residents through a prescription from their doctors.

"This is a freedom of choice issue," Welborn said. "The Food and Drug Administration (FDA) has no right to prohibit cancer victims from taking Laetrile just because in their opinion it is not effective."

"The only thing the FDA does by banning it is drive the price up by more than 100 percent. There is something wrong in our system when a FDA regulation creates a new surrounding it is curbing on this long, anybody that has ever seen a patient die of cancer would feel the same way."

Laetrile, made from apricot and peach pits and bitter almonds, has been the center of an unresolved controversy since it was first introduced as a possible cancer fighting agent in the 1930s.

Numerous tests conducted by the National Cancer Institute and Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center have turned up no evidence that Laetrile is a cancer fighting drug. But proponents of the compound have persisted with their arguments and testimonials of people cured by taking Laetrile.

Th Laetrile supporters have been so successful in their arguments that it is estimated thousands of American cancer patients are flocking to Mexican clinics for the drug and are smuggling it across the border each year.

Still the Food and Drug Administration, the National Cancer Institute and the American Cancer Society all say Laetrile is worthless.

And a Burns Clinic cancer specialist, Benjamin Pettit, M.D., agrees.

"I basically feel it is pure quackery," the physician said. "And I think it's unfortunate that the controversy surrounding it has carried on this long. Anybody that has ever seen a patient die of cancer would feel the same way."

Pettit recounted the story of a Petoskey woman who died about three months ago from cancer. She had come to a Burns Clinic physician when she discovered a lump in her breast. The doctor told her it was probably cancer and that a mastectomy would have to be performed.

The woman just wanted to have the lump removed instead of her entire breast and the doctor agreed to make an appointment for her with a specialist in Cleveland who performed that type of operation. In the meantime, she learned about Laetrile and decided to forego any treatment except the use of Laetrile.

"She came back from Mexico with her Laetrile and took it and then died of the most overwhelming case of cancer I have ever seen. And it didn't have to happen," Pettit said.

"Even with just having the lump removed she had a 30 to 40 percent chance of being cured or at least living five more years of good life. But all the possibilities were taken away from her with Laetrile."

"Now how more gruesome of a true story can I tell you?" the Petoskey physician said. "The Laetrile proponents are people out for the money and not scientific people."

"They didn't insist that this woman have a biopsy to find out if she really had cancer, they just treated her," he said.

"If half of my cancer patients didn't really have cancer, I would have a pretty high cure rate."

Pettit said Laetrile's greatest danger is that people will use it instead of the conventional treatment.

"People are always going to want to chase rainbows," Pettit said. "There's not the faintest shred of evidence that Laetrile cures cancer."

"Society is quite naive. They will believe what they want to believe."

The physician said he would like to see some additional testing done with the drug. He proposed that terminal cancer victims be given the drug if they want it.

"After using it on 3,000 to 4,000 patients we'll know the answer for sure and settle the controversy," he said.

The doctor said he doubted if the tests would show that Laetrile was of any use.

"It's been around for 40 years. Why has it taken 40 years to prove itself?" he said. "It's a very rare exception that anything that has been around that long turns out to be useful."

The physician said he was also apposed to any legislation legalizing the drug.

"People expect physicians to go to school for millions of years before they can practice medicine and now they are going to allow politicians to practice medicine," he said.

"We're regressing very rapidly if we allow this to occur."

"We can't allow those who don't have the 12 to 15 years training it takes to be a doctor to be making medical decisions."

Dorothy McRae retires after 37 years as teacher

By PAULA HOLMES
"I will miss the children," the kindergarten teacher said reflecting on her retirement.

"I can't stand to think I won't be teaching in September."

"Even after all these years I still get kind of emotional about it," she said, her eyes beginning to mist with tears.

For Dorothy McRae, next September will be the first one in 37 years that she hasn't trudged off to school along with the neighborhood children.

Mrs. McRae has spent the last 34 years at the Charlevoix Elementary School teaching kindergarten. She was a first grade teacher in the Pelletier School District for three years before that.

"You know, I have had the children of children that were my first students," she said. "They are so funny when they come to class and tell me that I was their mother's teacher."

Mrs. McRae's career living proof that she will say the darnedest things. The teacher recalled an episode in the classroom when the students were learning about the flags of other countries. The students would point to flags they liked and Mrs. McRae would tell them what country they were from.

"They had picked out the flag of Syria, Turkey and Chile when one child said, 'I thought we were talking about countries, not food,'" she said.

Another time Mrs. McRae was helping a child put on his boots. She tugged and tugged and finally got the boots on when the child told her they weren't his boots.

So she tugged and tugged and tugged to get them off again only to be told that they were his sister's boots but he was wearing them.

Kindergarten children have changed quite a bit over the years, just as kindergarten curriculum has, the graduate of National Kindergarten College in Evanston, Ill., said.

"We used to have children come to kindergarten who cried for weeks," she recalled. "Now that hardly ever happens."

"But they still want you to love them just like they always did."

Mrs. McRae said the goal of kindergarten had changed, too. It used to be if children knew their numbers or could write their names when they left kindergarten that was great, but now children learn very complicated principles before they leave kindergarten, she said.

During her retirement Mrs. McRae plans to keep busy doing things she never had time for during her teaching years.

"I'd like to do volunteer work at the hospital and maybe even at the school if they want me," she said.

She also plans to travel with her husband Ralph to their new home in Florida and to Holland to visit the two exchange students, Nynke Bierna and Rita Kroeze who stayed with them during the 1960s.

The teacher also plans to do some gardening and to become a bird watcher in the new sanctuary she and her husband are building in their back yard.

Bids on three proposals for remodeling and repair at the Charlevoix High and Middle schools were opened by the board of education Monday night.

Six bids ranging from $32,623 to $51,984 were received for Proposal I which includes the replacing of all wood frames and windows with metal frames, smaller windows and insulated panels in the middle school. Four bids ranging from $35,800 to $49,307 were received for Proposal II, the removal of windows in the middle school gym and the bricking of the openings, installation of ventilation system and placement of protective screens over windows.

The bids were turned over to the architects, Morton Jackson and Kane, Inc., of Lansing for tabulation and examination. The bids will be awarded at a June 5 meeting of the school board.

In other business, the school board voted to ask for a 30-day extension on an option on the Assembly of God church property that is being considered as a possible site for a new high school.

Vincent Olach, business manager, said as of April 30 the school budget showed that it would be in the black at the end of the school year.

However, Olach said the school had run into some repair costs Monday when the hot water heater at the high school went out, the international truck owned by the school was struck broadside in an accident and a steamline rupture was found in the high school heating system.

Rita Wasoski, president, and other members of the Senior Class asked the board for permission to go out of town for a dinner-dance before the school year ends. They were advised to discuss the issue with class advisors and their principal, Vane Smith.

City council approval of zoning, charter needed immediately

Charlevoix Common Council met for almost five hours last Tuesday. By the end of the meeting (12:30 a.m.) none of the aldermen or the mayor were in any shape to be making decisions on anything, let alone city business—and who could expect them to be at that hour?

It has been a long time since the council has had a meeting that spanned two days, but long, late meetings are not unknown or infrequent for the Charlevoix Council.

All of these late meetings could be done away with, however, if the council would support and pass two documents that are currently under consideration—the newly-revised zoning ordinance and the proposed city charter.

Most of Tuesday night's meeting, in fact almost three hours of it, was devoted to a board of appeals hearing. Under the current zoning ordinance, council serves as the board of appeals and must hear requests for zoning variances at open hearings.

This is ridiculous. Why should council waste its valuable time listening to a discussion about why or why not a variance should be granted when it could be concerned with other, more important things?

Council and the mayor have too much else to do like revising the electric and sewage rates to spending time administering the zoning ordinance, too.

Many communities in the surrounding area including almost all of the townships and Boyne City and East Jordan have appointed citizens to zoning appeals boards and planning commissions and have had great success. The citizens can devote their time solely to becoming familiar with the zoning ordinance and its intricacies and the law of the land. They become familiar with the trends of development in the area and they know what affect certain development will have on the area.

They can do all this because that is their only duty. They aren't concerned with running the city like the common council is.

The new zoning ordinance, which unfortunately has been shelved while the city and the township try to work out their differences, provides for the establishment of a planning commission and a zoning board of appeals made up of people other than the council members. These boards would still answer to the council, but they would be doing all of the leg work instead of council. Council would still have the final say in the matter.

The result would be shorter meetings for council and more complete planning and zoning for the city and its residents.

The second document that could cut down on the length of city council meetings is the proposed city charter. Under the charter many administrative things will be done by the city manager instead of the mayor and the council. The mayor and the council will become a policy making board instead of the administrators of city business.

Under the new charter, the council will have time to make more plans about the direction the city is taking because they won't be so bogged down in details. For instance, at Tuesday's meeting around 12:30 a.m., the council was preparing to approve payment of the bills. They wanted to add another bill to the list, but they wanted to make a partial payment of the bill.

So at that hour of the morning they were trying to figure out what 85 percent of the bill was. These things should be figured out for the council, they shouldn't have to get involved in the thing. The city manager should take care of all those details and leave council out of it. Council shouldn't even be deciding if it wants to add another bill or not.

Council and residents of the City of Charlevoix should adopt these two documents as soon as possible—for the good of the city.

Letters to the editor

To the Editor:
The law which removed essentially all liability in the ownership of nuclear power plants has just been ruled unconstitutional. This was done by U.S. District Judge James B. McNamara on March 31, 1977. This decision means that if Michigan Cooperatives buy ownership of nuclear power plants, the liability for injuries to people and property will fall on the cooperatives.
I ask: Are the cooperatives ready to assume this unjustified risk to everything they own? The liability surely would be passed down to the membership too!
If new power generation stations are needed by the cooperatives, I suggest the consideration of the most efficient, combined cycle types, which are based on the new, clean coal burning technologies. They bring in local tax bases and generate real jobs.

Consumers Power reports in its 1977 Annual Report to the Stockholders that the next electric generating plant they plan to build will be a coal-fired plant. Why don't the cooperatives buy into this plant—which full commercial insurance is available?

"Tax BIG things, HEAVY things, FUEL guzzlers... picky, picky, picky!"

Clockwise
by Bob Clock

After spending a weekend in Muskegon, I am convinced there is hope aplenty for the blighted cities of Middle America. Urban renewal is the name of the game.

For years those of us with close ties to Muskegon were pretty discouraged. The older businesses downtown on Western-ave. were rapidly falling upon hard times and one by one they were either closing their doors for good or moving to the suburbs.

As the older businesses disappeared, less savory enterprises took their place. Pool halls, greasy-spoon restaurants and flophouses sprang up along thoroughfares once frequented by lumber barons and their ladies.

Western-ave. became the haunt of the knife-wielders, loiterers, the down-and-outers. You didn't feel safe in downtown Muskegon.

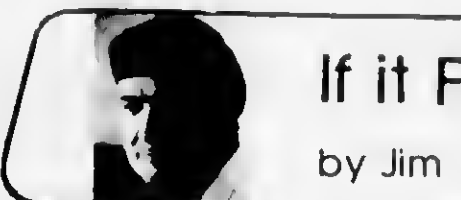

While these changes were taking place, equally ominous things were happening in the suburbs. A scant five miles from Western-ave., one of the first Meiers Thrifty Acres stores arose alongside Muskegon's main north-south artery. True to its name, Thrifty Acres not only covered acres of land but offered abundant parking for literally thousands of shoppers at a time.

Of course, Meiers was a one-stop shopping complex, with a well stocked grocery store, hardware, dry goods, furniture—you name it. It didn't take Muskegonites long to discover that one stop at Thrifty Acres was equivalent to a half dozen stops around town—including Western-ave.

In fact, Muskegon's Thrifty Acres was so successful that it wasn't long before two other shopping centers sprang up nearby. Downtown Muskegon seemed doomed.

But of course it wasn't. Quietly and without a great deal of fanfare, Muskegon's downtown businessmen, in cooperation with city hall and state and federal planners came up with a scheme to rejuvenate the downtown section, saving buildings worth saving, demolishing those past saving, providing plenty of off-street parking and tying the entire downtown section together into an attractive shopping mall.

The project took years and years and many of us lost heart. The Occidental

As a former country editor, I am often asked what is the biggest difference between writing for a small weekly newspaper and writing for a huge daily, such as the Free Press. The answer is freeloading.
On my desk right now is an invitation from the Ford Motor Co. Ford wants to fly me to Napa, Calif., for 3 days so I can become acquainted with Ford's new small car, the Fiesta. On a return card, I am asked to designate what I would like to do my first 2 days in Napa. The choices the first day are golf, tennis or "other." The next day I am offered golf, tennis, a tour of the Napa Valley wineries or "other."
There is no hint as to what "other" might include. But I am fantasizing, which is more fun than a 12 on a par-4 hole.

On the third day it is suggested I get into a Fiesta and participate in "saloon and do-it-yourself service-bulldozer contests." This sounds like a good time to phone room service for some other. The last time I looked, a saloon was a downhill race requiring the racer to zag to keep from banging into various obstacles.

It is clever of Ford to save energy by building a small car for coasting downhill. And this explains why I must go to the Napa Valley to meet the Hotel, Muskegon's largest, had to go and it seemed like the heart of the city went with it. Other old buildings also felt the wreckers' ball, filling elevated streets with rubble. The air was grey with dust in fine weather and mud was ankle deep after a rain-storm.

Progress was sometimes imperceptible for months at a time; other times new buildings seemed to spring up overnight.

Today Western-ave. is the center of an enclosed shopping mall, surrounded by six spacious free parking lots. The mall itself is unique among the welter of shopping centers across America in that portions of the "old town" have been preserved under glass, so to speak. The Walgreen Drug Store, for example, looks very much the same as it used to, standing alone on its own windswept corner. But today it is part of the mall.

The bank across an alcove hasn't changed much either. But suddenly you realize that the alcove where a benefit dance for muscular dystrophy is under way used to be First-St. Of course, there is new construction galore, but Muskegon saved what was worth saving, including a number of yesterday's architectural landmarks.

No, it is not a hedge-podge. The designers have successfully blended old and new into an integrated whole that is extremely pleasing to the eye.

When the Clocks visited the mall Saturday, the parking lots were rapidly filling up and mall businesses, including the new Skeetee Department Store, seemed to be doing a brisk trade. In the concourse, the Fire Department's rescue equipment was on display along with first-aid exhibits, a blood pressure clinic and other medical-type attractions. Attractive fountains gurgled and gushed among assorted greenery and the old shops beckoned with colorful displays.

There is no doubt about it. Downtown Muskegon is in the process of staging a stunning comeback. Now here's the clincher: Even though Western-ave. is once again a major shopping area, suburban stores such as Thrifty Acres are as jammed as ever.

You figure it out. It's beyond me.

...Speaking Her Mind

With sunbathing season just around the corner, I decided it was time I definitely did something about my physical appearance. No more pulling it off, I said to myself as I looked in the mirror, it's time to take some affirmative action.

So one day last week I tumbled out of bed during the wee hours of the morning and into tiny blue jeans, sweatshirt and ragged tennis shoes to begin my jogging program. I had decided I would take it easy and only go about one-half mile that day working myself into the multiple-mile range within a few weeks. I tried to get the dog to go with me that first time figuring misery loved company. But she steadfastly refused, so I trudged out the door on my own wondering the whole time if the dog was trying to tell me something about the brilliance of the jogging idea.

I probably don't need to tell you what happens to a sally out of shape body on the first day of an exercise routine, but I just couldn't believe it. Every muscle in my entire body rebelled. As I walked shakily into the Courter office later that morning, each muscle seemed to be screaming, "Don't move me!"

I crawled down the 20 feet of hallway to my desk, feeling like I had one foot in the grave and the other one in a medieval torture rack, only to be greeted by a news release from the Consumers Information Center entitled, "Successful Jogging."

Remember when eating out was a big thrill?

Boy, I remember the first time I ate in a fancy restaurant. You just knew it was class. They didn't have toothpicks by the cash register or a sign that said, "WATCH YOUR HAT AND COAT."

The novelty has worn off now and it's a way of life. Children coming and going... husband working odd hours... the convenience of yelling into a clown's mouth and two minutes later driving off with your order, has made eating out a ritual.

The family, as I used to be where Daddy went to work and Mamma stayed at home all day, describes only seven out of every 100 households in the United States.

It's probably only a matter of time before eating at home will become the treat eating out used to be. Just imagine...

"Robbie, where do you want to go for your birthday Tuesday?"
"Robbie's eyes light up and he grins. 'Could we eat at home?'"
Mother's eyes meet her husband's. "We can afford it, can't we Jim? After all, it's his birthday."

"Sure," says Daddy. "What the heck. We can splurge one day of the year."
"How nice you all look," says Mother on the night of the dinner. "I'm so used to seeing all of you shopping around in grub clothes when we eat out. Everyone come to dinner."

"Isn't it great?" says the kids excitedly.

"Do you marvel at the high energy of some of your friends, especially when you've been kind of dragging around?" the first paragraph blared at me as I tried to raise my head from the desk top.

"Ask them their secret," it continued. "You might find a lot of their bounce springs from jogging." With my last piece of energy, I bounced the news release into the waste basket and tried to forget I had ever heard the word jogging—at least until that evening when I got home and I asked my friend where she got all her energy from.

"Do you job," I asked trying to determine if the news release had a kernel of truth in it. "No," she replied most encouragingly. "I've always thought jogging was kind of dumb. What's the sense of running if you don't have anything on your mind?"

Nevertheless, the next morning I dragged out of bed and went through the same routine, only this time I convinced the dog jogging could be good for her health, too. This time as I ran through the streets I saw some other joggers in the streets—all with smiles on their faces.

At the time I wondered what they were smiling about, but I've noticed this week that a smile has begun to stretch across my face as I took to the pavement, too. Now if I could only add that bounce.

Meet Charlevoix

Irvin H. Sturm is engineer-director of the Charlevoix County Road Commission, which is responsible for constructing and maintaining all roads in the county. This week he tells the Courier about the road system and how it is operated.

COURIER: How many miles of county roads are there?

STURM: There are 722 miles—179 miles of primary roads and 543 miles of local roads.

COURIER: What is the difference between primary and local roads?

STURM: Primary roads are designed by the Road Commission and the Highway Department as those running between points of population or other attractions to traffic. They carry more cars. The Charlevoix-Boyne City Road, Thumb Lake Road, and Burnside Road are examples of primary roads.

COURIER: What is the difference in maintenance between primary and local roads?

STURM: As far as expenditures are concerned, we can work at our discretion. However, the upkeep is difficult because roads that carry more traffic need more maintenance.

COURIER: Is it the same for construction?

STURM: No. When we are doing construction or reconstruction of local roads, we're required under the law to obtain at least 50 percent of the cost from sources other than the Motor Vehicle Highway Fund—i.e., from local sources, ordinarily from townships. However, we can also take funds from the County General Fund or even from an individual company which needs a road. An example of this is the C.C. Road where the Great Gas Transmission Company paid the cost through the township. The point is that money for construction of local roads must be matched by local funds. No roads have been under the Jurisdiction of townships since the McNitt Act of 1961. Funds for construction of primary roads come from Motor Vehicle Highway funds and in addition some federal funds are available.

COURIER: What do you mean by "constructing" roads?

STURM: Constructing roads is really re-constructing roads already there—bringing them up to higher standards by widening, improving, etc. We rarely construct new roads.

COURIER: What kind of maintenance do roads require?

STURM: Gravel roads have to be graded, dust-coated in the summer, some of them brush-trimmed. Paved roads have to be patched. Local roads that are sealed-coated have to be re-sealed. Of course, winter maintenance consists of snow and ice removal.

COURIER: What does all this cost?

STURM: Our 1977 budget calls for $554,000 for construction and maintenance on primary roads and $453,000 for local roads.

COURIER: Where will this money come from?

STURM: From Motor Vehicle Highway funds (license plates and gasoline taxes), federal aid funds, CETA funds (for four enployees), township contributions and the state for trunkline maintenance. We also maintain the state trunklines—31, 131, 75, 66, and 32—for the state and they reimburse us.

COURIER: You operate the Ironon, Ferry, also don't you?

STURM: Yes, we operate it on behalf of the County Board of Commissioners. We report to them. The operation is funded from the County General Fund. The fee schedule is set by the Board of Commissioners. The fees went up this year because the ferry had a deficit of $31,612 last year. I might mention, also, that the ferry is under the jurisdiction of the Coast Guard because it operates on navigable waters. The ferry is licensed by the Coast Guard and those who operate it also must be licensed. The licensing test is difficult and lately we have had trouble getting licensed operators.

COURIER: Isn't the ferry bont due for an inspection?

STURM: Yes, it's due for its five-year overhaul. We plan to take it out of the water near the end of the tourist season so we will have enough good weather to work on it. We don't know where we'll take it for overhaul, but hopefully it will be somewhere on Lake Charlevoix.

COURIER: When do you plan your year's work?

STURM: We meet with the township boards early in January to discuss plans for construction and maintenance. We like to do this so we can have firm plans to fit into the budget. State revenue hasn't kept up with the costs of inflation. We expect that within the coming years there will be some changes made in how we get our money and how we spend it.

COURIER: How large an operation is the County Road Commission?

STURM: There are three Road Commissioners, appointed by the County Board of Commissioners. I report to them. Every county road commission is required to employ the service of a professional engineer. There is the dual duty of providing engineering services as well as managing the day-to-day operations of the commission.

COURIER: What did you do before you joined the Charlevoix County Road Commission?

STURM: I worked for the City of Detroit for 17 years before coming here five years ago.

COURIER: Where do you live?

STURM: In Horton Bay, with my wife, Patricia, and daughter Elizabeth and son Matthew. Elizabeth is 10 and Matthew is 13.

Ruppe discusses issues with residents

By PAULA HOLMES
A new approach should be taken in the Indian fishing rights cases, according to U.S. Rep. Philip Ruppe, R-Houghton.
"I think the federal and state Departments of Natural Resources should be thinking in terms of conservation of the species rather than in terms of who has the right to the fish," Ruppe told more than 50 people gathered in the Charlevoix County courtroom Friday.
"The DNR does have some control over the maintenance of stock and I think they would do better to argue from that standpoint," the Congressman said.
Ruppe stopped in Charlevoix as part of a tour of the 11th Congressional District last weekend. He and State Sen. Bob Davis, R-Gaylord, held a joint town hall meeting Friday noon.
Ruppe said he also felt the state DNR needed to get a legal determination as to what exactly are the Indian fishing rights. The Congressman said no definitive determination had been made yet.

"I think the state and federal officials have the power to regulate the fishing as it pertains to the maintenance of the stock, but I am not sure about the fishing rights," Ruppe continued.
"The question of fishing rights is a brutal problem. And whether we like it or not, a deal is a deal, albeit a lousy deal and the treaties are something we are going to have to deal with."
Congressman Ruppe said it would take a change in the constitution or a legislative act to invalidate the fishing rights treaties. A legislative taking would involve compensating the Indians for the fishing rights they would have to give up, he added.
Energy Situation
Along the lines of energy, Rep. Ruppe said he favored a price on gasoline that would reflect replacement costs for the fuel, as opposed to a tax on the product.

"The difficulty with taxing gasoline is that it takes a tremendous amount of tax to reduce consumption," Ruppe explained. "Estimates have shown that with the present tax President Carter is proposing, it will cost Americans $36 billion more to buy gas. Even at this greatly increased cost it is predicted that consumption will only be reduced by 400,000 barrels a year."
Ruppe said he thought Carter's energy program had some good aspects, but that it relied too heavily on conservation.
"The President's program doesn't emphasize energy production in the country," he said. "We will need to produce 30 percent more energy than we are now. We are in a much more serious position today with the energy situation than we were in 1973 when the Arabs imposed their embargo."
The Congressman said he supported a return to coal for electricity production. He said too much gas and oil is being wasted running electric plants that could be run with coal.

He also said that the Energy Research and Development Administration (ERDA) was receiving funding for the study of improving the efficiency of current methods of using energy and for the development of alternative energy sources.
The funds for energy research have been increased for both government projects and individual industry studies. Ruppe said studies for doubling the country's production of coal, improving the efficiency of woodburning stoves and on the use of hydroelectricity were currently underway.
Ruppe said the federal government had run into some trouble with environmentalists and residents of the areas where hydroelectric dams were proposed.
Tax Incentives
Tax incentives to encourage people to conserve energy are also in the works, Ruppe said. The federal government already offers tax credits for people that insulate their homes and take other measures to prevent the wasting of energy.

Nuclear Waste
Northern Michigan is no longer as attractive a place for the storage of nuclear waste as it has been in the past, Ruppe told the Charlevoix County residents. He said the federal government has decided it is looking for a long term storage site as opposed to a permanent site. He said that it is difficult to retrieve nuclear wastes that have been stored in salt beds. The proposed storage sites in Michigan were all salt beds, Ruppe said.
Political Plans
The representative also discussed his future political plans. He said he would consider running for the U.S. Senate seat being vacated by Robert Griffin. His definite plans will be announced in a few weeks.
Unemployment
Several people in the audience asked Rep. Ruppe about the recent Public Works Act monies and how they were being distributed. The people pointed out that a very high rate of unemployment exists in Northern Michigan but that the area was not getting as much money as many other areas that have lower unemployment rates.
Ruppe explained that the formula for distributing the funds was based on the number of people unemployed as well as the percentage of people unemployed.
"Congressmen from less densely populated areas lose out on these bills because we don't have the support behind us that metropolitan areas do," Ruppe said.

U.S. REP. Philip Ruppe, R-Houghton, talks with Max Novak and Sally Taber before he held a town meeting session at the Charlevoix County building.

BOARD OF APPEALS

Bathey of Harbor Yacht Sales, appeared before the Board of Appeals to request a 50 foot side yard variance at the Bathey property on Round Lake, Lot 5 of Block 20 of Newman's Addition to the City of Charlevoix. The proposed variance would enable Mr. Bathey to erect a building along the property line on the East side of his lot. The proposed building would replace a structure that was torn down on the same site, although the new building will be approximately 50 percent larger. A variance is necessary as the property is a dedicated R-4 zone.

Repealing SBT no solution, Sen. Davis tells accountants

By PAULA HOLMES
Repealing the Single Business Tax (SBT) is not the answer to businessmen's problems with the new tax, according to State Sen. Bob Davis, R-Gaylord.
"Repealing the Single Business Tax is not a practical solution to the problem," Davis, who has sponsored legislation calling for the repeal of the tax to get the members of the state Senate and House to act on improving the tax, he pointed out that he had also sponsored several bills which attempt to correct the deficiencies of the tax.
Improvements of SBT
Some of the improvements the senator is seeking include: relief to businesses and industries with gross receipts of less than $5 million annually. Davis' bill will provide total exemption from the business taxes for any business with gross profits of less than $15,000 annually and an alternative 5 percent flat rate formula for businesses making between $15,000 and $40,000 a year.
The bill also provides for the removal of unemployment and worker's compensation payments in any business or industry tax calculation regardless of profits.
Davis said he was also working on a revision of the property tax laws. He said he would initiate a petition drive to place an amendment to the constitution on the 1978 ballot changing the funding formula for schools from property tax to income tax.
"The one complaint I hear most often from the people is about property taxes," Davis said. "I think it is time to do something about the problem."
The Legislature had attempted to pass such an amendment to the Constitution several years ago, but the move was defeated by a vote of the people. The senator said he thinks the mood of the people has changed.
Davis is proposing that the property tax support of local school districts be limited to a limit of 6 to 8 mills. The rest of the money to run the schools would come from a state income tax on a per pupil basis.
Davis' proposal also allows school districts that would like to spend additional funds on its children's education to vote to levy up to 4 more mills.

The senator said his proposal would increase the current income tax from 4.6 to 8 percent.
"But this is a fairer tax levied against those who are able to pay," the senator explained.
State Economy
The state's economy looks like it is in fairly good shape for the coming year, Davis said.
"The automobile industry is up, tourism is up and things look pretty good," he said. "The only thing that could affect it is the federal energy program and any action that area is a long way off."
Davis also discussed his future political plans. The senator had previously announced he would be running for state senate again unless something better came along. Something better included two positions, Davis said. If Gov. Milliken runs for U.S. Senate, Davis said he would consider running for lieutenant governor under James Brinkley if asked.
If Gov. Milliken decides to run for governor again, Davis said he would consider running for U.S. Senate. He predicted Brinkley, Guy Vanderjagk, Philip Ruppe and Dennis Gough would also consider the position.
On the Democratic side, Davis thought Attorney General Frank Kelly or State Senator John Ditterbacher would consider the position.

STATE SEN. Bob Davis, R-Gaylord, answered some questions on local matters while he was in Charlevoix Friday for a town meeting session with U.S. Rep. Philip Ruppe.

ANOTHER FIRST took place in Charlevoix last week when city crews planted an experimental tree downtown in the sidewalk. Participating in the planting were Bruce Starr and Gordon McGary from the city crews and Mark Barrett from Site Planning Department.

Experimental tree planted

An experiment is taking place on the streets of Charlevoix.
The Shade Tree Commission planted a tree in the sidewalk along Bridge Street to test the feasibility of lining the streets with trees every 40 feet.
Charlevoix Common Council granted the commission permission to plant one tree in the sidewalk to see if it affects snowplowing or presents a maintenance problem.
The tree, a locust, was one of 550 trees the Shade Tree Commission planted in the city nursery and in John Campbell's private nursery last year. The commission also planted 260 trees along city streets last year.
Campbell, chairman of the commission, said the locust tree would grow to a height of 40 feet, in 25 years, or twice the height of the buildings on Bridge Street. The tree will grow in a tall and narrow pattern with a lacey look.

The experimental tree is located in front of the Shop of the Gulls, owned by Jeannine Wallace, alderman and a member of the Shade Tree Commission. Mrs. Wallace's shop was chosen because of the effort she had put into the commission.

Charlevoix woman receives national volunteer award

As Joan Mondale extended her hand to a Charlevoix volunteer, the audience at the Kennedy Center in Washington, D.C., broke into applause.
The vice president's wife was presenting awards for outstanding volunteer service to ten national winners. Among them was Laurie Lyons, daughter of Richard B. Lyons and an ACTIDN volunteer.
Ms. Lyons shared the award with Susan Schwartz of Scarsdale, N.Y., also an ACTIDN volunteer. The women serve through a criminal justice program administered by ACTIDN's Office of Special Volunteer Programs and were representing a prerelease prison program in Atlanta, Ga., called Project New Life at Stone Mountain Correctional Institution, a state facility.

Sixty days before inmates are paroled or have completed their terms, they attend classes for 30 days. The classes are taught by professionals from insurance companies, banks, unions, counseling agencies and career development centers. The second component of the program is a 30-day work-release period.
The two young women work as a secretary for one month and then "wringled" my way into the office of a parole officer. But I found I wasn't satisfied with either role-law enforcement or parole officer.
"Then I just happened onto a VISTA project in Kansas City, Kan., and I realized that this was what I wanted to do," she said.
So Ms. Lyons joined VISTA and became the administrative assistant to the director of the Heart of America Job Therapy project those who have gone through the program has dropped to 5 percent, as compared with the overall Georgia figure of 53 percent. The program will be used as a model for 16 similar programs throughout the state.

Ms. Lyons said her original plan was to become a law enforcement officer. Following graduation from college in 1975, she worked as a secretary for one month and then "wringled" my way into the office of a parole officer. But I found I wasn't satisfied with either role-law enforcement or parole officer.
"Then I just happened onto a VISTA project in Kansas City, Kan., and I realized that this was what I wanted to do," she said.
So Ms. Lyons joined VISTA and became the administrative assistant to the director of the Heart of America Job Therapy project

The volunteers were quick to point out that the ward also belongs to inmates at Stone Mountain, Warden Jack Krebs and 50 Jaycees who act as volunteer teachers and counselors at the prison.
Ms. Lyons, 23, who received a degree in criminal justice from Grand Valley State College provides backup services to inmates and volunteers involved in the innovative program.

Planning commission to meet on

The Charlevoix County Planning Commission will hold its next meeting Thursday, June 2, on Beaver Island.
The commission meets on the island once a year, usually in the Fall, but because of inclement weather the last three years, the Commission has switched the meeting to June.

Char-Em urging support of 'Adopt a Camper' program

Camping experiences can be one of the most pleasant memories of childhood. But many Charlevoix area students won't be able to go to camp this summer unless they can get help from area citizens.
For the past three summers, the Charlevoix-Parkfield Intermediate School District has been running a camp session at Camp Daggett for mentally, physically and emotionally impaired students in the district. However, due to a lack of funds, this year the school district cannot sponsor the program.
But the intermediate school district is attempting to hold a special camp session by setting up an Adopt-a-Camper program. Tod Caldwell, director of special education for Char-Em, said.
The intermediate district is seeking people who will volunteer their time to help run the camp and also people who will sponsor a camper at a cost of $30 per camper for one week.
"All of our staff for the special camp session will be volunteers except for the director, who will be paid," Caldwell explained. "For each volunteer we get we can add four campers to the number who can attend the session."
The camp has facilities to hold 100 campers and Caldwell is hoping to be able to fill all the spots.
"We have 12 volunteers so far," he said.
The camp session will run from Aug. 22 to 28, but volunteers will be working from Aug. 21 to 27, Caldwell said.
Anyone who wishes to volunteer to work at the camp or who would like to make a contribution can get more information from Pat Taylor or Jan Mercer at the Char-Em Service Center in Charlevoix, 547-6947.

High school students give Bells Bay, Mt. McSauba cleaning

The Mt. McSauba and Bells Bay areas are sporting a new look these days. It's called the "trash look."

The speaking clean parks are the result of hard work by students in Charlevoix High School's general and advanced biology classes. More than 170 students spent most of one day last week cleaning the two parks as a Michigan Week project.

"We worked in two-hour blocks, one in the morning and one in the afternoon," Pete Spieles, biology teacher who coordinated the event with teacher Roger Gowell, said.

In the morning the students went through the Mt. McSauba area to the lake cleaning up debris and trash. The high school students spent the afternoon scouring Bells Bay Road and the Flahermans Island area.

Spieles said approximately 80 percent of the trash the students collected was comprised of cans. And about 80 percent of the cans were beer cans, the teacher estimated.

Spieles said the students worked closely with the city on their Michigan Week project. The city provided the trash bags for the students and city crews also went out and collected the mounds of bags as the students filled them with trash.

The teacher said the original idea for the trash pick up as a Michigan Week project came from high school principal Vane Smith, but the plan was enthusiastically taken up by the students in the biology classes.

"The kids worked really hard throughout the day," Spieles said. "We were pleased with what we were able to accomplish."

Youth should apply for security number

Young people who plan to get a summer job should apply now for a social security number, Gordon Sattelmier, manager of the Petoskey social security office, said.

Sattelmier said it takes several weeks to obtain a number because they are issued from Baltimore, Md., where a screening against central files takes place to make sure duplicate numbers are not issued.

Once a social security number is issued it remains the same; for the lifetime of the person it is issued to. Work and earnings credited to the social security number build an earned right to retirement, disability, survivors and Medicare benefits. This makes it important that the employer be shown the correct name and social security number as reflected on the social security card.

Applications for a social security number are available at any post office or at the Petoskey social security office. For more information call 347-8727.

Charlevoix Yesterday

THIS PICTURE of the Charlevoix Union School was taken in September, 1889. Long-time Charlevoix resident Bernice Westfall told the Courier she attended school in this building, and there are undoubtedly other former students still living in the area. The building was located on the northeast corner of the present Middle School grounds. As can be seen, this was before the days of paved streets in Charlevoix, and long before either boys or girls wore blue jeans to class. (Photo, courtesy of Charlevoix Historical Society).

Number of seniors going to college increases

A survey of the 1977 graduating class of Charlevoix High School found that 52 percent of the class plans to pursue their education beyond high school.

The survey, conducted by the high school counseling staff, Charles Bentley and Gayle Kaczynski, found that 38 percent of those continuing their education will be attending a four-year program with 14 percent attending a two-year program.

A comparison of these figures with previous years shows an increase in the percentage of students going on to four-year programs and a maintenance of the percentage entering technical programs.

The senior class includes 140 students with 79 boys and 61 girls in the class.

In 1974 33 percent of the students graduating indicated plans to enter four-year programs and 15 percent planned to enter programs of two years or less; the following year, 1975, the four-year figure dropped to 28 percent and the two-year figure went up to 21 percent; in 1976 the increases were reversed to 31 and 15 percent and this year have increased to 38 percent for those intending to attend four-year institutions and dropped to 14 percent planning two year studies.

For the third year seven percent of 10 students of the class has indicated intentions to join the armed services. Another three are planning to work and then, perhaps, join the service.

Of the remaining 57 students, seventeen (12 percent) have said they have a job now and will continue in that job after graduation; another fourteen (10 percent) now have a job but plan to seek a different job. Twenty percent or 14 students are currently seeking some sort of employment. It is interesting that 17 (30 percent) of the non-college bound group indicate they are considering continuing their education at a later date. Finally, six students (4 percent) are planning to attend college, but for one reason or another, have yet to apply to the college of their choice.

Again this year, the largest proportion of college-bound students are entering service health related areas of studies, ranging from graduate to two-year programs. Business-oriented programs rate as the second most popular with 13 students planning careers in this area. As was the case in 1976, more of this year's graduates will be attending Michigan State University. Another large contingent will be attending Ferris State College in both the two and four year programs. There seems to be a trend away from the traditional Central Michigan University or North Central Michigan College enrollment for area students. There is also an increased willingness for students to look at college and technical programs outside the state.

A breakdown of the schools where students will be enrolled show 12 at Ferris including seven in the four-year and five in the two-year programs; 11 to Michigan State (four year); eight to North Central Michigan College (two years); four to Lake Superior State College, three each to the University of Michigan, Michigan Technical University, Kalamazoo College and Central Michigan University, all four year programs; three to Davenport College of Business (two years), two to Northern Michigan University; two to Grand Valley State College; one each to John Uley College, University of Detroit, Western Michigan University, Grand Rapids Baptist, Delta College, Albion College, Hope College, Central Connecticut State College, Southwest Missouri State College and the University of Wisconsin-Stout, all four year colleges; and one each to Muskegon College of Business, Northwestern Michigan College, Oakland Community College and Kirtland Community College, all two year colleges. Five others will enter specialized programs bringing the total to 73.

Department gives hints on gas

"Fill'er up." Each time you say that, it seems as if you have to dip into savings to pay. So isn't it a good time to look at ways to save gas?

The Department of Transportation has some suggestions on how to save gas by driving carefully and keeping the car maintained, and how to save money by choosing the lowest octane gas that will work efficiently in your car. For your copy of the booklet, Gasoline: More Miles Per Gallon, send 35 cents to the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 003E, Pueblo, Colorado 81099.

Mileage is determined by driving habits, the condition of the car's engine, and the grade of octane rating of the gasoline used. For better mileage:

Check your tire pressure at least once a month. Low tire pressure increases the amount of tire touching the road. This makes it harder for the car to roll and increases tire wear.

Periodically have your mechanic check the tread-wear pattern of your tires to see if they are properly aligned. If they are out of alignment, the tires will wear excessively and your gasoline mileage will drop.

Avoid pressing the accelerator all the way when climbing hills and long grades.

When you drive, be careful to keep your speed no higher than 55 m.p.h. - it'll save a lot of gas.

Avoid excessive high speed or jerky driving. Learn to drive as smoothly and steadily as traffic and road conditions allow. Jumpy starts and fast getaways can burn over 50 percent more gasoline than normal acceleration.

Have your car tuned at regular intervals as recommended in your owner's manual. It's especially important that the carburetor, the distributor, and the spark plugs are in precise adjustment for maximum performance, and efficiency.

Be sure you are buying the proper octane gasoline for your car. To determine which octane is best:

After having the engine tuned, wait until the tank is nearly empty, then fill up with the brand you usually buy, specifying the grade recommended by your owner's manual.

Drive a few miles until the engine is warmed up. Come to a complete stop, then accelerate.

If the engine knocks or pings on the gasoline with the recommended rating, use up the tank and refill with the next higher grade. Repeat the acceleration test. If the engine doesn't knock, this is the octane needed. If it does knock on the higher octane, have the engine checked by your mechanic.

If the engine doesn't knock when you use the octane recommended in the owner's manual, use up the tank and refill with the lower grade. Repeat the acceleration test. If the engine doesn't knock, you can safely use the lower grade.

Gasoline: More Miles Per Gallon (35 cents) is one of over 200 selected Federal consumer publications listed in the Spring edition of the catalog, Consumer Information. The catalog is published quarterly by the Consumer Information Center of the General Services Administration. You can get a free copy by sending a postcard to the Consumer Information Center, Pueblo Colorado 81099.

Michael Bascom completes school

Michael Bascom has completed an eight weeks course at the Basic Police Officers Academy held at Benton Harbor. Sheriff George T. Laster, has announced.

The certification of the deputy who has been with the department since February 1975 brings the total number of certified officers in 10th Laster said.

THESE ARE SOME of the instruments the $10,000 purchased. The total number was 27 with five assigned to the middle school band program. The 22 students pictured here play the tympanis including the vibos and the more expensive instruments in the woodwind family. They are (front row) 1 to 1: Jeff Wellman, Kerry Spear, Rob Siro, David Bui, Tracy Olmstead. Second row: Donna Jones, Peggy Hosmer, Sue Winchester, Andrea Klooster, Laurie Schorsch, Darlene Smalley, Debbie Garten, Carmen Cutler. Back row: Tereata Bears, Jody Hicks, Kim Jones, Becky Juiliet.

Band ends season on bright note

Instrumental students in the band program in the Charlevoix public schools appeared in concert last week with students in five bands participating.

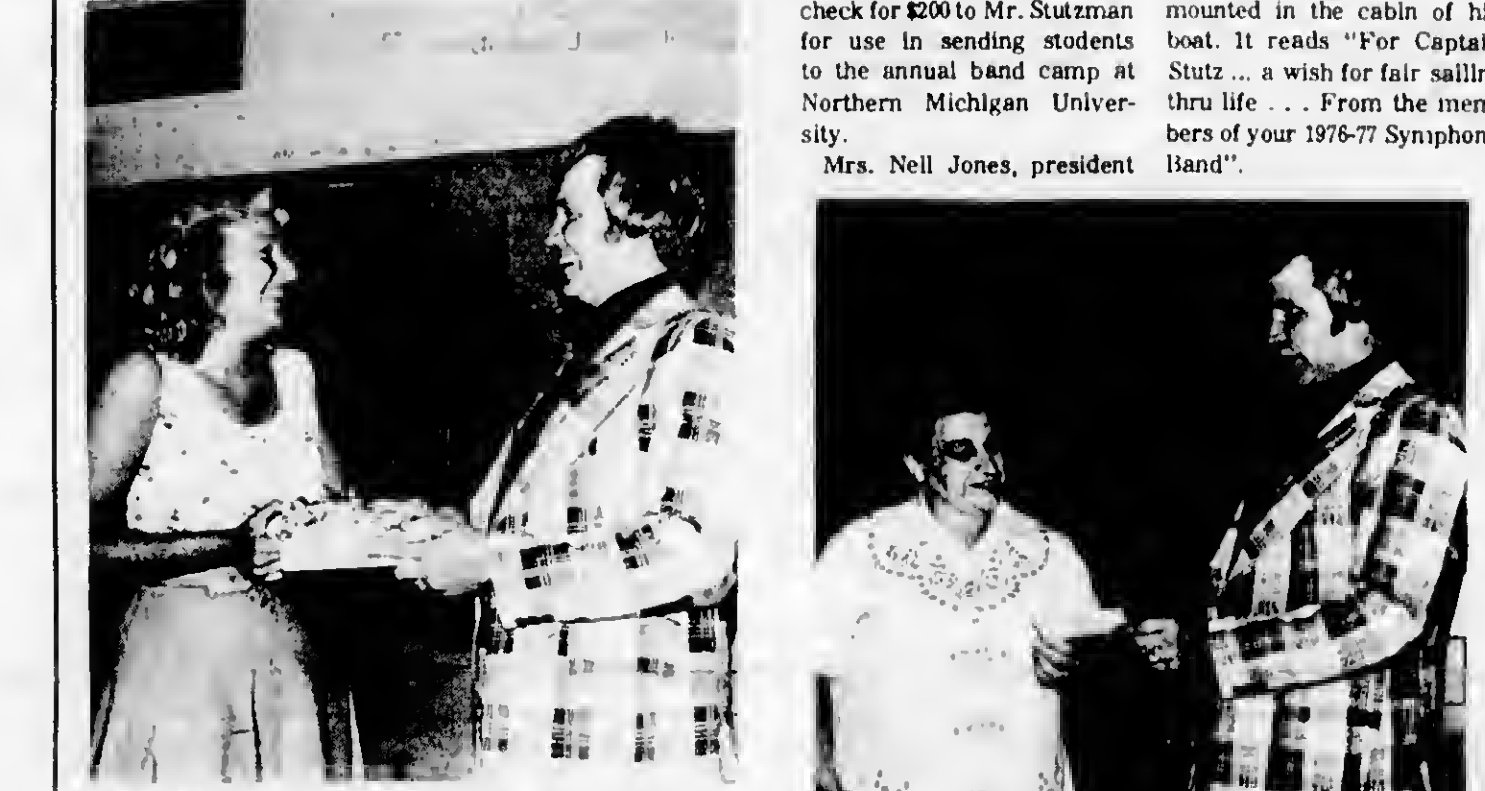

The concert opened with the beginner's or sixth grade band presenting three numbers. This group was organized early in February. They were followed by the seventh and eighth grade bands under the direction of Evelyn Peters and the Concert and Symphony bands directed by Gary L. Stutzman.

Kevin Kroll, student director, directed the band in its final number, Highlights from the "Music Man", by Willson, as arranged by Reed.

Mrs. Henry Borha, representing the American Legion Auxiliary, presented a check for $200 to Mr. Stutzman for use in sending students to the annual band camp at Northern Michigan University.

Mrs. Neil Jones, president of the Charlevoix Band Boosters, is pictured presenting a check for $5,000 to Supr. James A. McKinney. The check represents half of the commitment the Band Boosters assumed in order that the band might have much needed instruments.

Lexalite wins regional product award

A Charlevoix product won special honors during Michigan Week celebrations last week.

Lexalite Corporation of Charlevoix was named the Region 4 winner in the Michigan Week Product of the Year contest for its design of a traffic signal made out of space age plastics.

This is the second time Lexalite, an international corporation specializing in the manufacture and design of lighting and custom molded products, has been honored in the nonconsumer section of the product of the year contest. The first award was for the design and engineering of vandal proof street light globes.

Lexalite embarked on the design of the plastic traffic light about two and one-half years ago, John Zarembo, executive vice president of the corporation, said.

"A major company approached us about studying the feasibility of engineering a traffic light out of plastics," Zarembo said. "Traditionally traffic lights have been made out of die cast aluminum."

After about a year of work, Lexalite came up with a design for a plastic traffic light that worked just as well as the metal traffic light and cost less to make.

"We not only met the industry's standards for traffic lights but we exceed some of them," Zarembo said of the product.

With the exception of a tiny metal spring, Lexalite completely manufactures the traffic light, including the lenses and reflectors, out of a space age plastic called polycarbonate. Polycarbonate is the same plastic that is used in the helmet visors of the astronauts.

The traffic lights are assembled by snapping the pieces together. This also makes the lights easy to maintain, Zarembo said. All a person has to do to replace a burnt out bulb is unsnap the unit as opposed to the metal lights which must be unscrewed and unbolted.

Because plastic traffic lights are lighter they are easier to install too. But the lighter plastic traffic light doesn't bounce around in the wind more than a metal light, Zarembo said.

Lexalite plastic traffic lights are now sold across the country, Zarembo said.

Studies done in the State of California, which probably has the strictest tests, found that plastic has a planing effect and it does not bounce back and forth in the wind," Zarembo said.

Although none of the actual traffic signals are used in Charlevoix, Zarembo said the individual red and green lights are used in the driveway windows for the First State Bank of Charlevoix. A traffic signal is also on display outside Lexalite's main entrance.
